We read that Apollos "spake and taught diligently." We are led to wonder somewhat at this; for his list of themes was very scant. John the Baptist told him only two things, Christ was coming and sinners must repent. That was enough to last this young man for some time. For two elements of his success are added; he was "fervent in spirit," and he was "mighty in the Scriptures." If one is all on fire for work, and is satisfied with his Bible, he does not want but two subjects to talk and preach about; and "repentance" is excellent and "Christ" is inexhaustible.—Illus. Chris. Weekly.

"Old age," says one whose words have survived his name, "is a blessed time, when looking back over the follies, sins and mistakes of past life—too late, indeed, to remedy, but not too late to repent—we may put off earthly garments, one by one, and dress ourselves for Heaven. Griefs that are heavy to the young are to the old calm and almost joyful, as tokens of the near and ever-nearing time when there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither any more pain." Even though walking in darkness for a while, the aged have the sure promise, "At eventide it shall be light."

The annual report of the Texas Pacific Railway shows that 480 miles of track have been completed—110 during the past year. The receipts were $2,381,976, and the profits $318,985. The passenger revenue increased 25 8-10 per cent. One hundred thousand more tons of freight were hauled than during the previous year.

The Work of Bishop Andrews Abroad.

During his absence Bishop Andrews has been fully occupied with his official work, in accordance with the plan of Episcopal visitation under which he went abroad. He organized the Sweden Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, August 2d, the Norway Conference August 17th, and the South India Conference November 9th, 1876. At each of these sessions he presided during the entire Conference, as also at the Conference session of Germany and Switzerland, and India, and at the Denmark and Bulgarian Annual Mission Meetings. He was in India just three months, holding the Indian Conference January 3, 1877.

In returning from India, by way of Alexandria, he tarried at the latter place long enough to make a flying visit to the Pyramids. On reaching Europe he presided at the Italian Annual Mission Meeting of our Church, held in Rome, and commencing March 7, and later presided successively at the Conferences of Sweden, Norway and Germany and Switzerland, and at the Annual Mission Meeting in Denmark. This epitomized record indicates an exceedingly busy, as well as most important and responsible, extended official tour. During this whole time, and while engaged in this extended travel and exhausting official work, the Bishop enjoyed perfect health, except that while he was in Norway he suffered for a week with acute rheumatism, and yet during that week he preached five times! Indeed, during his entire absence he missed no connection in travel, and made no failure in meeting an engagement not even in a single instance. He did not suffer from seasickness, nor was he ill for a single hour, except in the instance named above.

Bishop Andrews has returned more favorably impressed than ever before with the great value and the assuring prosperity of our Church and mission work in the countries which he has visited. He describes our missionaries in those fields as a company of most devoted and efficient toilers, upon whose work the benediction of the Master is falling with increasing encouragement to the Church. Of the men and their precious work he speaks in most complimentary terms.

The Bishop will remain in this city and vicinity until Friday. Friday evening he will go to Manchester, Conn., where he will visit his mother and other friends, and where he will spend the Sabbath. Early next week himself and family proceed westward, to their home in Des Moines, Iowa. Of the hearty greetings which were awarded to the Bishop in every part of the field visited, and of the grateful recognition of his most valuable and efficient services, and of the numerous resolutions adopted by the Conferences, our readers have been already apprised. The whole Church will rejoice in the good work which he has accomplished, and in his safe return.—New York Advocate.

Meeting a Sermon.

Archbishop Leighton, returning home one morning was asked by his sister, "Have you been hearing a sermon?"

"I've met a sermon," was the answer. The sermon he met was a corpse on its way to the grave; the preacher was death. Greatest of street preachers! Nor laws nor penalties can silence him. No tramp of horses, nor rattling of carriages, nor rush and din of crowded streets, can drown his voice. In heathen and Protestant countries, in monarchies and free States, in town and country, the solemn pomp of his discourse is going on.

In some countries a man is imprisoned for even dropping a tract. But what prison will hold this awful preacher? What chain bind him? He lifts up his voice in the very presence of tyrants, and laughs at their threats. He walks unobstructed through the midst of their guards and delivers the messages which trouble their security and embitter their pleasures. If we do not meet his sermons, still we cannot escape them. He comes to our abodes, and taking the dearest objects of our love as his text, what terrible sermons does he deliver to us!

Oh, what weeping audiences sometimes has this silent preacher! Yet there is a secret doctrine, a hidden meaning running through his discourses, which is often not apprehended. Few "lay it to heart." His oft repeated sermons still enforce the same doctrine, still press upon us the same exhortation: "Surely every man walketh in a vain show. Surely they are disquieted in vain." Here there is no continuing city. Why are you laboring for that which I will presently take from you and give to another? Take no thought for to-morrow.—Prepare to meet thy God.

"You Dream too Big for Me."

One day Sir William Johnson, the Indian agent in the Mohawk county, under the Colonial Government, was unpacking some clothing brought from England. Hendrick, a famous Indian chief was present, and took a strong fancy for an embroidered coat. He dare not ask for it, but next day he told Johnson a dream. "Last night," said he, "me dream you say, 'Hendrick, you've been good friend, and now I reward you,' and you gave me the gold coat." The white man pondered a moment and then said, "You are right; the coat is yours." Not long afterward, Johnson told Hendrick he had been dreaming. "And what did my white brother dream?" "That you took me by the hand and said, "Sir William, you have been my friend, and I will show my love for you. I will give you all the land on the great river and Canada Creek.'" The Indian was amazed, for the tract was nearly a hundred thousand acres in extent, and very choice land. But he was not to be outdone in generosity, and finally replied: "My pale brother, the land is yours, but," added, after a long pause, "Sir William, we won't dream any more; you dream too big for me." The old chief's title was confirmed by the British Government, and the land was long known as the Royal Grant.

Cure for Weariness.

The world is full of tired people; merchants tired of business; farmers tired of raising crops; mechanics tired of building houses; housekeepers tired of preparing food; operatives tired of the rushing wheels. Pass along the road or street and see how very tired three-fourths of the people look. How shall they get rested? Some say, "By fewer hours of work!" But some of them have no work at all. Others might prescribe easy sofas, and more armchairs and soft beds. But some of the people who have the weariest look, have plenty of good furniture and upholstery. Now we offer a pillow not curtained with gobelin tapestry, nor stuffed with the down of angel's wings. But a man who puts his head on it gets rid of his cares and anxieties. It is a pillow stuffed with promises. "Come unto to me all that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Cast thy burden an the Lord and he will sustain thee." We have friends who, because they cannot sleep well, put under their head at night a pillow of hops; but they have never tried the better pillow filled with the myrrh and frankincense from the Lord's garden. Men and women tired out with the world, try it!—Christian at Work.

Faith.

It is said that one day when Bonaparte was reviewing some troops, the bridle of his horse slipped from his hand and the horse galloped off. A common soldier ran, and, laying hold of the bridle, brought the horse back to the Emperor's hand, when he said to the man:

"Well done, captain."

"Of what regiment, Sire?" inquired the soldier.

"Of the guards," answered Napoleon pleased with his instant belief in his word.

The Emperor rode off. The soldier threw down his musket, and though he had no epaulettes on his shoulders, no sword by his side nor any other mark of advancment, he ran and joined the staff of commanding officers. They laughed at him, and said: "What have you to do here?"

"I am a captain of the guards," he replied.

They were amazed, but he said: "The Emperor has said so, and therefore I am."

In like manner, through the word of God, "He that believeth hath everlasting life," is not confirmed by the feelings of the believer; he ought to take the word of God as true, because he said it, and thus honor him as a God of truth, and rejoice with joy unspeakable.

Don't be a Goose.

There was no need for the old gander to poke his head through the hole in the shed and hiss at the fox. But the gander thought it would appear brave in him to dare the fox, and he wanted to show off before the other geese and be considered a hero.

"Besides, there is really no danger," he said to himself, "for the fox seems to be really afraid of me." Cunning old fox! foolish old goose! So he kept on stretching out his head further, and the geese crowded around him so closely to hear his brave words that when the fox suddenly made a spring at him he could not draw back in time to save his head. What a goose he was! Not more silly, though, than some boys now-a-days.

The famine in India continues with most appalling loss of life. Already half a million people have died and the calamity is still unchecked. May the Lord increase brotherly love among all Christian people! It is the strongest proof of genuine Christianity before the world."

The Christian Advocate, of New York, and the Northwestern, of Chicago, have lately spoken editorially upon the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South, in a manner creditable alike to themselves and the great Church they represent. The sum and substance of these editorials are that the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South is in no way to be compromised by a false fraternity, or neglected in obedience to a false public sentiment that would fail to appreciate its importance or success.

Our Property Dispute Settled.

It is with profound joy that we announce the final settlement of the property disputes which, for years, have been the occasion, in this city, of unpleasant words between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South. We refer to the properties known formerly as St. Paul's Church, Winans and Soule Chapels, and known on our Conference minutes as Wesley Chapel, First Street Church and Marias Street Church. The last has not been occupied for several years for public worship as the congregation now occupies Union Chapel, a large and splendid property built within a square of the old location.

It is difficult to estimate the value of the property which has been in dispute. Wesley Chapel has had an adjoining property costing $5,000, added to it since the people reunited with the Methodist Episcopal Church. The old building has been kept in good repairs, and has within a few weeks been refloored and reseated and plans fixed upon for improvements to cost $2,500. The old building and lots are worth probably from $12,000 to $15,000.

First Street Church is put down on the minutes at $8,000. At least $2,000 have been expended on this property since the people were in our Church. Probably $6,000 would be a good valuation of the old property. The Marias Street Church building is of little value. The lot we hope to sell for $1,200. Something over $20,000, then, is the amount of property which may properly be said to have been in dispute. In the settlement the titles to these three properties have been confirmed in the Methodist Episcopal Church. We acted personally as the agent of the three boards of Trustees, and as the matter is of such great interest to a large body of our people, we publish elsewhere the act, confirming the title in the case of Wesley Chapel, passed before Andrew Hero, Jr., Esq. of this city. The other acts are similar.

The history of the property dispute, may be summed up in a few words: Wesley Chapel was built in 1842-44, for the colored people, mostly with their own money, assisted by the ministers and members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the division then not having occurred. The property was held by a colored freedman named Dondy. As there were difficulties about colored people holding property, and to insure the more perfect control of the property and people under the laws as then existing, a board of white Trustees composed of members of the Methodist Church was incorporated, under the title of "The Methodist Episcopal Church, for Wesley Chapel in the city of New Orleans." To this body Dondy sold Wesley Chapel, which body has held the title for property for thirty-two years. In succeeding years the other two properties were acquired and held by the same incorporated body.

In the re-organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this city in 1865 and 1866, under Dr. Newman and his associates, the people of these three churches, of their own accord, united en masse with that church. They claimed that they have never willingly left "The Old Mother Church." They were received and helped to form the nucleus of the Mississippi Mission Conference, organized in 1866 by Bishop Thompson, the first session being held in Wesley Chapel. During these eleven years the people of these churches have stood unswervingly loyal to the Church of their choice, resisting any and all overtures from interested outside parties, who at various times have sought to cause dissention among them. They have understood perfectly well the dispute concerning their property titles, but claimed the property as theirs in equity, but ready at any time should it be taken from them, to go out and rebuild the church to which they belonged. We have never hesitated to affirm that, as the property was built and held for them, while they occupied it for church purposes they could not be ejected. The justice of this position has probably saved these churches from litigation in the years just past. It was upon this ground that the Cape May Commission decided, that the property of [illegible] belonged to the present occu[illegible] Fortunately Dr. New[illegible] member of that Commission [illegible] these churches [illegible] Episcopal Church, [illegible] ated with [illegible] Cape May decision was as strong as a recommendation could be, backed as it was by the General Conferences of the two Churches. That Commission however could but recommend. Neither General nor Annual Conferences in the M. E. Church or the M. E. Church South hold or can transfer local church properties. The final adjustment must be made by the local trustees, and depended upon their volition. Our correspondence was with Rev. Dr. L. Parker, editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and Presiding Elder of the New Orleans District of the Southern Church. His frank reply was: "I desire and shall do all in my power to carry out the letter and spirit of the Cape May Commission. Whatever is necessary to be done to confirm the titles to your people, I will recommend our trustees to do." In due time the proper disciplinary action was taken and a brother designated to execute the transfer.

Among the questions raised and discussed was the relation which the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America held to this property. In 1870 when the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South provided for the organization of that Church, to be composed of its colored members, it directed all trustees holding property for its colored membership to turn that property over to properly accredited trustees of the new Church. The point raised was whether or no the Southern General Conference of 1870 did not by this act exhaust its authority in the case of the New Orleans Churches, which authority, once exhausted, could not be revived by a subsequent General Conference. If so, then the New Orleans Churches could not legally be considered by the Cape May Commission. The reply was that in no case does the authority of the General Conference extend to the right of transferring local church property; it can only recommend, and the recommendation of our General Conference can be substituted by another at a subsequent Conference. Then this equities in the case can be made so much the stronger by the fact that the New Orleans Churches were made a special case at Cape May, and the decision was unanimously in favor of the M. E. Church. And still again, there was no colored Methodist Episcopal Church in New Orleans.

We wish here to record our high appreciation of the frank and brotherly spirit manifested in this whole procedure by Dr. Parker and Dr. J. B. Walker, Presiding Elder and pastor, whose advice and approval were necessary by the disciplinary enactment, and also to W. H. Foster, Esq., and Mr. Walmsley and their associate Trustees. The settlement of this property dispute is a long step toward a full and generous fraternity between the two Churches in this city and State.

Our Sunday-School Union and Tract Society.

The Tract Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1817 and is two years older than the Missionary Society of the same Church. The Sunday-School Union was organized in 1827, but was not permanently established until 1844, when Dr. D. P. Kidder became its Secretary. Dr. Kidder was followed by Dr. Wise, and he by the present secretary, Dr. J. H. Vincent.

The Tract Society and Sunday-School Union are separate in organization and work. Dr. Vincent is Corresponding Secretary of both. His name and work are familiar to the Church. He stands in the very front rank of Sunday-School organizers in the world. His authorship in Sunday-School literature is extensive and exceedingly popular. Associated with him is Rev. Dr. J. M. Freeman, author of "Hand Book to Bible Geography," the best ever published, we think. He is a man of extended culture, and gives his whole heart to the work.

To know what the Sunday-School Union and Tract Society are doing we must study the Year Book of the Sunday-School Union, and of the Tract Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This book for 1876 is now in the hands of all our preachers, and should receive careful study, and the facts it contains should be given to all our congregations. Here is a summary of what the Sunday-School Union did in 1876: "Twelve hundred different schools in seventy-five different conferences were aided last year at an expenditure of about fifteen thousand dollars. About twenty new books have been added to the Sunday-School catalogue; over nine-ty thousand bound volumes of text-books, and nearly one hundred and thirty-five thousand volumes of library books have been issued. But the circulation of the periodicals shows best what is doing in the department of publication. The maximum circulation of the "Sunday-School Journal," monthly, was 115,-000; of the "Sunday-School Advocate," semi-monthly, 305,000; of the "Picture Lesson Paper," weekly, 125,000; of the "Berean Lesson Leaf," weekly, 1,200,000. The "Normal Class" (quarterly) has a circulation of 2,000; not one-fifth the number that its merits and the wants of the schools demand.

The Tract Society has issued seventy-five new tracts during the year for general circulation, and more than a million copies of the "Berean Tract" for the South; one hundred thousand pages of German, and more than eleven million pages of English tracts have been distributed. It has been the custom of the Society to aid our foreign mission press in printing tracts for free distribution; but the smallness of the collections last year made this impossible. This is a field of usefulness that should be re-occupied immediately. The receipts of the Society last year were $13,856 54; less than one cent a member!"

Ever since the organization of our work in the South the gifts from these Societies have been large and of the kind most needed. The Committee at New Orleans alone sends out several hundred dollars worth of Sunday-School and Tract materials every year. When schools are able to pay, they pay half price, but when too poor to pay anything they are supplied free. We hope all our ministers will study the "Year Book" well, and not fail to take the collections for the Sunday-School Union and Tract Societies. The Discipline requires this, and how cheerfully all ought to do this duty when it is remembered how much these Societies are doing for the South.

Bishop Simpson's Cyclopædia of Methodism.

This great work is now prepared, and the publishers, Messrs. Everts and Stewarts, of Philadelphia, hope to have it ready for the market early next spring. Bishop Simpson has undertaken the work at the solicitation of many leading Methodists, and with the hearty approval of his distinguished associates in office. Already nine months of labor have been given to the work by the Bishop and his several office assistants, with the aid of able correspondents from every State in the Union, and from all foreign countries where Methodism has a mission. Bishop Simpson's name is a sufficient guarantee that the work will be conscientiously and impartially written.

We have just received from the publishers specimen pages extending through the letters "A" and "B." With these before us we can speak intelligently of the work. It is to be a book of over one thousand pages, with the matter arranged alphabetically, double columns to the page. It will contain as nearly as possible everything of general interest in all Methodisms in all lands. There will be an explanation and definition of all technical terms used and applied to Methodism; a history of the organization of every Methodist denomination, with its doctrines and usages, and general statistics; a sketch of every town in all countries of over 3000 people where Methodism has been planted, with the statistics of the present condition of each of the various branches of Methodism; biographical sketches of many of the most eminent Methodist men and women; portraits of distinguished Methodists, and engravings of finest Methodist Church edifices, Pioneer Churches and educational buildings. The work will indeed be a Methodist library in one volume.

The publishers will spare no pains or expense in their work. The paper, type, illustrations, style of binding and mechanical execution are all the very best. The book will be sold by subscription, and the price, etc., will be announced in due time.

Of the 20,000 congregations represented in the Pan-Presbyterian Council, 8,166 were from the United States. The Presbyterian population of the globe is said to be about 30,000,000; the Lutheran population, 40,000,000; Anglican, 14,000,-000; Methodist, 12,000,000, and the total Protestant population is put down at 106,000,000. The next great ecclesiastical gathering in order is an Ecumenical Methodist Conference.

The Question of Division in Tennessee.

The Conference meet Oct. 3d, Bishop Harris presiding. The most important question that will come before that body will be whether the Conference will divide on the color line or not. The matter was quite thoroughly discussed at the last session and as we understood, it was decided that if those in favor of division still insisted upon it at the coming session, those opposed would yield. We believe Bishop Foster arranged their work so as to facilitate division if the Conference so decided. It would seem that the matter was very nearly settled, because there is little prospect of those who favored division last year not insisting upon it now.

We have received several communication on the subject but have not thought it wise to open the discussion in the SOUTHWESTERN. Rev. G. W. Weaver sends an excellent argument against division. In our judgment he is right. There ought to be no division. The demand for it is founded in a rare prejudice the offspring of American slavery. The Church of God should be foremost in wiping out this foul blot upon American Christianity and American civilization. But Alas! our last General Conference was swept by the retrogressive wave now sweeping this whole country against the black man, and lost by a single act the fruits of twenty-five years of victories. But we have faith in the grand old church. Her errors have been few and her great heart is full of sympathy and love for all her people. We have faith in our colored brethren whether in a conference by themselves or with their white brethren. We have faith in all these because they are "in the service of the Lord." Honest differences of opinion as to modes of work may retard, but will not defeat the truth. The final victory is sure.

One thing is worthy of note. The separation of our Conference on the color line has not simplified or even helped to solve the question of "Fraternity" in the State of Georgia. The other day twenty-five hundred of our white people and friends assembled in Macon, and heard our leading Georgia men preach and lecture, at a District Conference, but no fraternal sign or greeting was seen or heard. Dr. Harrison of the Southern Methodist Church of Atlanta, whom the Methodist Advocate continues to pronounce one of the most eloquent divines in the South—in his late northern trip, improved every opportunity to state, publicly and privately, that our work in the South was a failure, and that we could build up nothing permanent in this region. We were told that the separation of our Conferences into white and colored, in Georgia, would open up the way to, and hasten a cordial fraternity with our Southern Methodist brethren. That statement can no longer be made.

The relation of the Methodist Episcopal Church to her colored people, has very little to do with the question of fraternity with the Southern Church, only as that relation indicated a fixed policy on the part of the M. E. Church to strengthen and extend her work in the South. If our colored people were of any other nationality the the same argument would be used in the South to show that they ought to be put to themselves, because in so doing, our church would at once leave large portions of the South and prepare the way to leave it, altogether. This accomplished and we are back territorially to 1844, from which our Southern brethren have never willingly let us move. The color question is only one of several questions involved in the matter of fraternity; and the more the Methodist Episcopal Church yields her convictions of right in this question to a domineering prejudice, the more she weakens her own strength and threatens the stability of her Southern work.

Another thing to be noted is that while Conference separation on the color line in Georgia, does not simplify the fraternity question any, the fact that we have a mixed Conference in Louisiana, does not hinder the frank and cordial adjustment, of the most aggravated property disputes between our own and the Southern Church. We refer to the ajustment published in this issue.

Dr. Fuller of the Methodist Advocate is spending a few weeks in the North.

Fraternity does not seem to grow rapidly in Georgia. At the late Macon District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church there was present on Sunday twenty-five hundred white people. Dr. Fuller, Rev. J. B. Ford and several other excellent speakers were present and the lectures and sermons as reported were excellent. Rev. J. Mitchell in reporting the conference to the Methodist Advocate says:

I suppose all the ministers of other Churches, especially the white, were out of town. I have been wondering where, and when, and with whom "fraternity," (that singular, nondescript arrival), will come in. Will it be with the white Methodists, or black Methodists? Will it be soon, or after 1880? Will it be with both races, or only one race of Methodists? Is the animal to fawn on the Methodists of the Northern States and to devour the Southern States—or—or, how is it? Will somebody please, please tell? for some of us are in danger of reconsidering our position on the whole fraternity question, and if we do on that we will on some other questions, in many places. I will not say all that is in my mind to say just now on that question.

The Independent says of the New York Witness:

"It was started as a religious daily and has been an utter and shameful financial failure, largely because it did not deserve to be a success. As a newspaper it has never been worth reading. As a vehicle of wishy-washy, goody-goody talk it has been quite respectable. It has had a great deal of sound moral sentiment, fairly expressed, but it has not had the news. It has starved, and when starving has begged. It has begged again and again. Good people have given it money. At last its printers have struck, because they were not paid. And then the editors have published the fact, and begged again, claiming to be the best tract society on the planet. It trusts in "the good providence of God"—and begging—for its continuance, and does not deserve any longer the forbearance of decent papers, which are ashamed to beg and which honestly pay their debts."

Mrs. Nancy Walker.

Sister Walker died March 22, 1877. She was a native of Baltimore, Maryland, and was converted at a camp meeting in Mt. Zion woods Maryland, at the age of fifteen years. She was brought by her owners to Louisiana about thirty years ago. Being deprived of her church privileges in Louisiana, she lost her interest in religion and wandered from the fold. In 1856 she was brought to think seriously of her soul's salvation in the midst of a severe thunder storm. She sought the Lord and found Him, and joined Wesley Chapel, New Orleans, and up to the time of her last illness was one of the most earnest and influential of church members. She was especially gifted in song, and her voice was to be heard leading God's people in the public worship and in the prayer and class room, in their hymns of praise. During revivals she would lead the singing for weeks at a time. When the old Mother Church came to re-organize her work in Louisiana, sister Walker was one of the first to greet her ministers, and up to the time of her death was always to be seen and her voice was to be heard in song at every Annual Conference held in New Orleans, at every corner-stone laying, and upon all occasions of special interest when the churches were called together. At times she would take her choir of trained singers and go to neighboring parishes and add greatly to the interest of the meetings. In 1869 she attended a dedication service with me in East Baton Rouge, and to this day the good effects of her sweet songs remain and are spoken of by the people of God.

Just before she died I visited her and she said: "I know all is white as snow up yonder; I have nothing to stay here for. God is keeping me here only until He moves all the old stains of sin away, then he will take me out of this world—write it in your book. There is not a cloud between me and my God; all are moved, I love the Lord, I am going to heaven in the Bible way." Her last words were: "There is nothing between me and my God." Her remains were deposited in Girod Cemetery, in the presence of a large company of people. Her memory will be preserved as precious while New Orleans Methodism lives. Her place in the church will be hard to fill. She has gone on before and will greet us who follow to the land of eternal rest.

Religious Items.

Twenty-two churches in New York city are without settled pastors.

The Congregational Methodists limited almost entirely to Georgia, reported at their last conference a membership of 10,000.

Bishop Peck is abundant in labors, if we are to judge from the number of his appointments at large churches and camp meetings.

Moslem pilgrims have left 200 millions of piastres at Mecca. This has been placed at the disposal of the Sultan of Turkey for the conduct of the war—the holy war.

The women of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, have organized a "Woman's Missionary Society," with head quarters at Nashville.

Kentucky has now over 1200 white regular Baptist Churches, with 750 ordained ministers, and 106,000 members. There are 250 colored churches with 40,000 members.

The latest statistics of the (American) Protestant Episcopal Church show that it has fifty-nine bishops and three bishops elect for Mexico, China and Cape Palmas, Africa. The present number of communicants is 268,534.

The Foreign Mission Committee of the Southern Presbyterian Assembly, at its recent session in New Orleans, reported its receipts for the past year $55,121; receipts of the sustentation fund, $19,877. Eighteen Presbyteries reported missions to the freedmen within their bounds.

Rev. A. H. Sutherland, superintendent of the Mexican Border District of the West Texas Conference of the Southern Methodist Church, reports ten native Mexican preachers, and nearly 300 members. Since last October 105 adults and 37 infants have been baptized.

The Peking Gazette of February 1st, has an article in which equality before the law and government of native Christians is emphatically set forth in an important State paper. As the edict is the spontaneous act of the Imperial Government, it will have great influence in directing public opinion in a right way to consider native Christian fellow-subjects of the Emperor as entitled not only to toleration and protection, but even equality.

If Methodism and Missions are a failure, it must be in some other way than numerically, for Gervase Smith says: "It is a glorious though that there are about three and a-half millions of members of the Methodist Society, and as they generally reckoned three or four hearers for one member they might conclude that there were 14,000,000 people worshiping every Sabbath-day in Methodist chapels in different parts of the world."

The Independent says: "Our mobs and riots are mainly carried on by foreign-born Catholics and their children, and we have the right to hold any religion responsible for the character of those who have been educated under it."

It is reported in Texas that 4000 immigrants from around Scranton, Pennsylvania, are coming to that State this fall to organize a colony in the vicinity of Fort Concho.

Thirty-five banks and insurance companies of Philadelphia guaranteed $35,000 for the pay of extra police to prevent the railroad riots, and have just footed the bill, amounting to $18,044.

The President is said to be contemplating a change in the Indian policy. The details have not been fully considered, but it is probable that some of the features of the Canadian system will be adopted. The Canadian plan is almost exactly opposite to our own, the Indians being treated as subjects to the Dominion government, and not as members of an independent nationality. They are made amenable to the law for all offenses, and are protected in all their rights under the law. There is a system of Indian magistracy and a mounted police.

An Act of Transfer.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, }
Parish and City of New Orleans. }

Be it Known, That on this fifteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and second, Before me, Andrew Hero, Jr., a Notary Public in and for the Parish and City of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, duly commissioned and qualified, and in the presence of witnesses hereinafter named and undersigned, personally came and appeared—

Robert M. Walmsley, of this city, herein acting for, and on behalf of the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Westley Chapel in the city of New Orleans, an incorporated Religious Association of this State, domiciled in this city, and instituted by virtue of Act No. 111, of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the year 1844, approved March 25, 1844, and so acting pursuant to the authority in him vested by said Trustees at their meeting held in this city on the sixteenth day of May last past, a duly certified copy of which said resolution is annexed, for reference to an act passed this day in this office.

Also, appeared Reverend Joseph C. Hartzell, of this city, herein acting for, and on behalf of the Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, a duly incorporated institution of this State, domiciled in this city, and instituted by virtue of an act executed under private signature, under date of March 9, 1846, and of record in the Mortgage Office of this parish, in Society Book, No. 6, folios 54 and 55, and so acting pursuant to the authority in him vested under and by virtue of a resolution of the Board of Trustees thereof, adopted at their meeting held on the twenty-seventh day of May, last past, a duly certified copy of which said resolution is hereto annexed for reference.

Which said appearers declared in their said several capacities, that whereas by an act passed before C. V. Foulon, a Notary in this city, on May 1, 1844, the aforesaid Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Wesley Chapel, in the city of New Orleans, represented by its then President, W. S. Mount, purchased from Charles Doughty, those two certain lots of ground, with the improvements thereon, and all rights, ways, privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging, or appertaining situate in the First District of this city, in the square bounded by Liberty (late St. Paul), Poydras, Howard (late Gironde) and Perdido streets, and designated as lots Nos. nineteen and twenty of square No. thirty-one, on a plan by C. F. Zimpel, Surveyor, dated September, 1836, of record in the office of Felix Grains, then a Notary in this city, which said lots adjoin each other, and measure each in American measure, thirty feet front on St. Paul (now Liberty) street, by one hundred and seven feet in depth, between parallel lines.

And Whereas, The said property was so purchased, and has always been held by said Trustees for the use and benefit of colored communicants of the Methodist Episcopal Church, until the division of the Church, and since then for the [illegible] of the Methodist [illegible] South.

[illegible] General Con- [illegible] Episcopal [illegible] at a session at [illegible] Tennessee, in eigteen [illegible] and [illegible] venty, provided for [illegible] a General Con- [illegible] the final and complete [illegible] of the Colored Metho- [illegible] Church, in America, [illegible] the Trustees [illegible] property for the use of the [illegible] members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, should [illegible] title to the same to the property constituted Trustees of the colored Methodist Episcopal Church in [illegible] to the Dis- [illegible] when or- [illegible] the Trustees of [illegible] never [illegible] of the [illegible] Metho- [illegible] in America; [illegible] of [illegible] South, [illegible] Kentucky, in [illegible] appointed [illegible] commission [illegible] Confer- [illegible] Episcopal [illegible] Church, as a [illegible] all exist-

"Elijah Steele Methodist Episcopal Church South," held in this city, on the seventh day of May, last past, it was directed that the aforesaid Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for Wesley Chapel, in the city of New Orleans, should make titles and conveyances of the afore described property to the properly authorized Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church; and the said resolution being approved or concurred in by Rev. Joseph B. Walker, the preacher in charge, the aforesaid resolution was adopted by said Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Wesley Chapel, in the city of New Orleans, empowering said R. M. Walmsley to act in their behalf, and do all things requisite to execute quit-claim titles for the afore-described property unto its present occupants, the aforesaid "Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church," under the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the United States of America, who, under present laws of this State have been constituted into a body corporate or politic in law.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises, the said Robert M. Walmsley, moreover declared that in pursuance of the agreement entered into by the aforesaid commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and agreeably to the authority in him vested under the aforesaid resolution adopted by the Quarterly Conference of the Elijah Steele Church Methodist Episcopal Church South, with the consent of the preacher in charge, and the aforesaid resolution of said Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Wesley Chapel in the city of New Orleans, he does by these presents, for and on behalf of said Religious Association, grant, bargain, sell, convey, transfer, assign and set over, without any warranty, and not even for a restitution of the value of said property in case of eviction unto the aforesaid Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church—a body corporate and politic in law as aforesaid in whom the use and occupancy of said property and actual possession thereof had been and now is, and herein represented by the aforesaid Reverend Joseph C. Hartzell, who is here present, accepting in its behalf;

All and singular, the estate, right, title, interest, share, property, possession, claim and demand of every nature and kind whatsoever, as well in law, as in equity, of the aforesaid Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Wesley Chapel, in the city New Orleans or of said Methodist Episcopal Church South, of, in and to the hereinbefore described two lots of ground, with the buildings and improvements thereon, situate in the First District of this city, in the square bounded by Liberty (late St. Paul), Poydras, Perdido and Howard (late Gironde) streets, designated by the Nos. nineteen and twenty, and measuring each, thirty feet front on Liberty (late St. Paul) street, by one hundred and seven feet in depth, between parallel lines.

To have and to hold the aforesaid described property and appurtenances unto the said Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, a body politic as aforesaid, in trust, that the said premises shall be used, kept, maintained and disposed of as a place of Divine Worship, for the use of the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America, subject to the discipline, usage and ministerial appointments of said church, as from time to time authorized and declared by the General Conference of said Church, and the Annual Conference within whose bounds the said premises are situate.

Said Walmsley, moreover transfers unto the said Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, all the rights and actions of warranty to which said Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church for Wesley Chapel, in the city of New Orleans or said Methodist Episcopal Church South, is, or are, or may be entitled against all former proprietors of the herein described property, subrogating said corporation, called the Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, to the said rights and actions to be by it enjoyed and exercised in the same manner as they might have been by said corporations.

According to the certificates of the Register of Conveyances, and the Recorder of Mortgages for this city and parish, dated this day, and annexed for reference to an act passed this day in this office, the hereinbefore described property has not been alienated by the present grantors, and is free from all mortgages or other incumbrances, save the privileges for drainage.

The herein conveyed property having been used for Religious purposes, is exempt from taxation.

Thus done and passed in my office, in New Orleans aforesaid, in the presence of Paul A. Conand and Charles H. Stocker, witnesses, both of this city, who hereunto sign their names with the parties and me, the said Notary, the day and date aforesaid.

Sept. 9, 1877.—PAUL AT EPHESUS.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts 19: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For our Gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."—1 Th. 1: 5.

TOPIC.—The Gift of the Holy Ghost.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

Paul once more turns his face towards Jerusalem. In leaving the shores of Europe behind him, however, he leaves it as a general leaves a land in which he has established some strong fortresses for his king. Macedonia and Greece were not subduced, but in them he had left a line of fortifications that the enemy could not conquer. Philippi, Thessalonica, Berea, and Corinth—churches in the all—a stronghold for Christ in each one of them, manned by disciples who not only meant to "hold the fort," but were actually sallying forth and conquering new fields for the Master.

On Paul's homeward journey Ephesus was his first stopping place. True to his instinct for work, he left his friends and immediately went into the synagogue to reason with the Jews from the Scriptures concerning Christ.

Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? There is no doubt but what this should be translated: "Did ye receive the Holy Ghost when ye believed?" The question apparently is very abrupt. It was doubtless, however, preceded by a conversation or by acquaintance sufficiently intimate to disclose certain things which made him doubt whether they had ever been endowed with this most essential gift. His manner of putting the question indicates its importance in his mind. The form of it, as given in the better translation, points to the time when they ought to have received it—viz., when they believed. Then is the time when all should receive it. Not in the same degree, of course, but in some degree. In some it will be manifest in exuberant joy; in others by a great peace, and in others still by happiness that, possibly, may not exceed a quiet satisfaction. Some will fervidly praise God in this new experience, some will be moved to tears, and others to prayer, and others, still, will be sensible of a strong re-inforcement of strength and purpose to obey the Heavenly Father in all things.

The answer of these disciples is, also, somewhat mistranslated, and should read: "We did not even hear whether there is a Holy Spirit." The idea is not that they were entirely ignorant of the existence of a Holy Spirit, for no one could be followers either of Moses or of John without having some instruction concerning that, but that at the time they were baptized, no mention was made of any expected special manifestation of his taking possession of the hearts of the believers. As Alford remarks: "So far from receiving the Holy Ghost, they did not even hear of his existence."

Unto what, then, were ye baptized? The full form of Christian baptism as dictated by Christ himself (Matt. 28: 19) was: "Into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." It could hardly have been possible, therefore, for one to have received Christian baptism without hearing something concerning the Holy Spirit. Paul's question evinces some surprise, and was as if he had said: "If you were not baptized in this name, into what religion were ye baptized?"

Unto John's baptism. The fact that Apollos had been preaching with power in Ephesus, and that he know "only the baptism" of John rather indicates that these men were his converts. While Paul is prompt to decide that this baptism is not sufficient, yet notice that he speaks with reverence of it. "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance." He admits that John's baptism, at the time he administered it, was good enough; but he points out to them, first, that it was a baptism of repentance only—not a baptism into newness of life and communion with the Spirit. Repentance alone is not enough, but faith in Christ as well, and the latter they did not have. Second, John baptized in order that his disciples should believe on a coming Christ, and lo, Christ was already come. No baptism of that sort should be administered, for it implied a denial, as yet, of his advent. They should have been baptized, not in the name of Messiah soon expected, but of a Messiah actually incarnated; not in the hope of a redemption yet to be accomplished, but in the assurance of one already realized; not that they might at some future time believe, but that they should then have faith in Christ.

The baptism of the Spirit (5-7).—When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. The indisposition of some to admit that these disciples were re-baptized, has led them to assert that these words are a part of Paul's conversation with the disciples, and refer, not to an act of theirs, but to an act of those who heard John preach. Plainly, however, it is meant to affirm that these twelve disciples, when Paul explained to them (probably much more fully than is here intimated) the new baptism into the life and death of Christ, desired to be re-baptized in his name. We should say that this does not affect the question of a re-baptism in other cases, nor does it absolutely decide the technical insufficiency of the baptism according to John. For teachers in the Sabbath-school there are better things than the discussion of this mooted point. Let the matter be for the controversialists.

The baptism of power. (8-12).—The length of time that Paul was permitted to preach in the synagogue was something unusual. Three months was a longer time than the Jews usually could sit still under his preaching. Possibly one of the reasons why they were slower to wrath than they were wont to be, was the fact that after his first sermon they had importuned him to stay. He did not trim his sails to please them, however—"he spake boldly."

But when divers were hardened. Under searching gospel preaching people become either better or worse. They either accept or array themselves in open hostility against it. How careful, then, one should be in regard to putting off the day of decision! Procrastination often indulged will surely lead one over to the camp of the enemy. To-day if ye will hear his voice harden not your heart."

The outcome of the opposition was that, as usual, he withdrew from the synagogue, but not to cease his work. Going into the school of Tyrannus he "disputed daily" or rather, "discoursing day by day." For two years he continued to present the word, so that as Ephesus was the commercial center of "Asia," a large portion of its inhabitants either heard it directly from his lips or from those who there had heard him preach. During this time "the seven churches which are in Asia" were formed, and were the result of his teaching.

An Interesting Incident.

A correspondent of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, who is a teller in a bank, give the following and vouches for its truth:

An old lady called at the bank with her book, and asked to have all her money. She had not been to the bank in nineteen years, and at that time she had a balance of five dollars only. The account with the accumulated interest, amounted to over fourteen dollars. She seemed overcome with emotion when she found out how much was coming to her, and went back to the teller, asking him to re-deposit five dollars, as she did not wish to have so much money about. In the conversation that followed, she told the clerk that she had passed through a great many trials, having lost her husband more than twenty years ago. For the past two or three years she has often been in extreme want; the only work she was able to procure latterly was making button-holes. Last week she obtained some coal from the city; but on Saturday she took back the shirts she had been working on for two weeks, expecting to get her pay, two dollars. But for some reason they could not pay her. She went home, not knowing what do. She had eaten nothing for a day. At last she knelt down and asked God to show her some way that she might not starve or be compelled to beg. Rising from her knees, the thought came to her to open a trunk that she had not opened for years. She hoped she might find something either to sell or pawn. On turning over its contents, she came across the bank book that I have mentioned, and which she had long since forgotten.

Montgomery, Alabama, can boast of the largest compress in the South, the largest cotton oil factory, a mill that turns out a barrel of flour every four minutes, and an ice machine that in one day can give every inhabitant in the State a pound of the cooling material.

Atlantic for September,

The article by Hon. D. A. Wells, in the September Atlantic is one of the most important essays ever written by this publicist. It treats of Property, Titles, and Debts, and of the question of their taxability; and assails the monstrous abuse of power by which the same property is frequently taxed in two States. Every man of means in the country will be interested in this masterly paper.

The short stories of the Atlantic this year have all been remarkably striking for certain qualities that distinguish them from the tales of other magazines. But for the high standard maintained by the Atlantic in these matters Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke's story in the July number would have been a literary event; and now in the September number appears another story of equal power. It is a painful but terribly faithful study of the life and career of a girl committed in childhood to the tender mercies of the Reform School. The Child of the State reads likn fact. It is too sad not to be true.

A Result of Obstructed Digestion.

Among the hurtful consequences of obstructed digestion, is the impoverishment of the blood, and since a deteriative condition of the vital fluid not only produces dangerous organic weakness, but according to the best medical authorities, sometimes causes asphyxia, it is apparent that to improve the quality of the blood by promoting digestion and assimilation, is a wise precaution. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is precisely the remedy for this purpose, since it stimulates the gastric juices, conquers those bilious and evacuative irregularities which interfere with the digestive processes, promotes assimilation of the food by the blood, and purifies as well as enriches it. The signs of improvement in health in consequence of using the Bitters are speedily apparent in an accession of vigor, a gain in bodily substance, and a regular and active performance of every physical function.

SITTING AROUND.

They are sitting around upon barrels and chairs,
Discussing their own and their neighbors, affairs,
And the look of content that is seen on each face,
Seems to say, "I have found my appropriate place,"
Sitting around

In bar-rooms and groceries calmly they sit,
And serenely chew borrowed tobacco and spit,
While the stories they tell and the jokes that they crack
Show their hearts have grown hard and undoubtedly black,
While sitting around.

The "loafer around" is a man of no means,
And his face wouldn't pass for a quart of white beans,
Yet he somehow or other contrives to exist,
And is frequently seen with a drink in his fist,
While sitting around.

The loungers they toil not, nor yet do they spin
Unless it be yarns while enjoying their gin.
They are people of leisure, yet often 'tis true,
They allude to the work they're intending to do,
While sitting around.

They've a habit of talking of other men's wives,
As they whittle up sticks with their horn-handled knives;
They're a scaly old set, and wherever you go,
You'll find them in groups or strung out in a row,
Sitting around.

Playing Chicken.

"I say, girls," said a little boy, "let me take your candy and we'll play chicken."

"Is it nice?" inquired a half-dozen six year olds in chorus.

"Nice! you bet it is. Let me show you. Now you all go down there, and come up when you hear me crow like a rooster."

The girls retired and gathered in a group about fifteen feet off, while the boy got on his knees, with his head over the candy, and began to call and strut, and flap his arms like a rooster's wings.

"Cluck, cluck, rat, rat, cluck," and all the girls came running up, and bent to pick up the candy, when the little fellow opened his mouth and took it in at one gulp.

"Is, you mean boy," they cried, "you have taken all our candy!"

"That's because I played rooster," said the boy; "roosters always call the hens up when he finds a grain of corn, and then picks it up himself."

MOODY: His Words, Work and Workers.

EDITED BY REV. W. H. DANIELS, M. A.

With an Introduction by Rev. Chas. H. Fowler, DD., LL.D.

Of the many volumes called out by the wonderful career of Messrs. MOODY AND SANKEY, all have hitherto been more or less fragmentary, and without systematic arrangement. In the above work the design has been to bring within the compass of a single volume of generous size

THE MAN HIMSELF: A full and Systematic Presentation of his Bible Doctrines: An account of his most prominent CO-WORKERS; and a chapter on that most marvelous movement in modern evangelism, THE GOSPEL TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

In order to make the volume fresh and complete, Mr. Daniels, who edits this work, has made a visit to Boston, to learn, by personal observation, as he has done in the case of the Moody and Sankey revivals in other great cities on both sides of the Atlantic, the progress of the revival work there.

This volume cotains 552 pages, crown octavo, including twelve full-page illustrations; is elegantly printed on fine paper; is handsomely bound; and is not only e book of the widest and most permanent interest and value of any yet published in this line, but is also the

KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

IMPROVED

CABINET ORGANS.

EXCELLING WHAT HAS PREVIOUSLY BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN POWER, PURITY AND DELICACY OF TONES.

THE LIST CABINET ORGAN

(Style No. 501.—Five Octave: Seven Sets of Reeds of Two and a Half Octaves each, and One Set of One Octave; Fifteen Stops; New Scale of Reed-Board, Reeds and Actions, with Ventrillo Chest and other Improvements, patented 1876-7.

Base.—Contra Basso, 16 ft.; English Horn, 8 ft.; Viola, 4 ft.; Viola Dolce, 4 ft.; Sub-Base, 16 ft. Treble.—Corno, 16 ft.; Melodia, 8 ft.; Piccolo, 4 ft.; Seraphone, 8 ft.; Voix Celeste, 8 ft. Throughout.—Full Organ, (knee stop,) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up,) knee Swell, I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Franz Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The orgin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Franz Liszt, in which full anorous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of th great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry ont and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new Instrument was seen and tested by n number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Conrier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class," evincing "extraordinary progress." After its receipt and trial, Dr. Franz Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

THE BIBLE.

Study it carefully,
Think of it prayerfully,
Deep in thy heart let its precepts dwell!
Slight not its history,
Ponder its mystery,
None can e'er prize it too fondly or well.

Accept the glad tidings,
The warnings and chidings,
Found in this volume of heavenly lore,
With faith that's unfailing,
And love that's prevailing,
Trust in its promise of life evermore.

With fervent devotion,
And thankful emotion,
Hear the blest welcome, respond to its call;
Life's purest oblation,
The heart's adoration,
Give to the Savior, who died for us all.

May this message of love,
From the Triune above,
To all nations and kindred be given,
Till the ransomed shall raise
Joyous anthems of praise—
Hallelujah! on earth and in heaven.

The Duty of the Preacher in Charge to the Sub-Preacher.

Modern civilization wheels round on the drill-sergeant. Discipline is the key that opens the future to the nations. Skill handles the bulk of society as a helm handles a ship. So the Church militant is pivoted on the drill-sergeant called a class-leader. The Church triumphant pitches its tune by the tuning-fork of the sub-pastor.

The class-leader can usher in the millennium in this century, or he can put it off another century. If every leader were reasonably faithful, that fidelity would double the Church every two years. To touch [illegible] any point is to [illegible] all worlds. To [illegible], is next to the [illegible]

[illegible] Discipline, which [illegible] out of the best [illegible] has had in the last [illegible] and out of the best [illegible] ever had, deter[illegible] relations and duties of [illegible] to the sub-pastors in a [illegible] powerful sentences: [illegible] all the leaders, to [illegible] when he sees it necessary to examine each of them [illegible] possible practness, at least [illegible] his meth[illegible] to hold a [illegible] and stew[illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] duties are [illegible] Let us put them [illegible]

gest the proper admixture of exhortation and of singing, the spirit and directness of admonition, the varying modes of conducting the services of the successive meetings of the class; but his duty extends beyond all this. He must furnish the leader with ideas. Ideas are of great service in religion. They are priceless in personal experience. The greatest need, after common sense, in leading a class is ideas. A certain humdrum round of stale experience soon becomes profitable chiefly as penance. But stir up the thought of the members to a careful consideration of the meaning of the word of God, to the use of the promises, to the application of the precepts, to a measure of their responsibility, to the need of activity, to the breadth of the cause, to the great benevolences of the Church, to the vast connectional interests of Methodism; give them some idea of their true character, as soldiers fighting in a mighty army for an infinite cause—and you have elevated them. This supply of ideas can be furnished by conversations with the leader on his work; by giving him books that bear on his work, such as the biographies of some of the great leaders and great saints, and select portions of the Bible and suitable hymns. Much of our vitality depends upon the hymns used in class-meetings, and we have never seen any hymns that combine sound theology and deep experience as well as the hymns of the Wesleys. Whenever these are crowded out a breach will be made in our doctrinal fidelity. We have never done much with our Catechisms. We have done much of our doctrinal teaching by our hymns. We have never had a schism on doctrine. Sing our Methodist hymns, and we never will have. The pastor that introduces other hymns but narrowly, if at all, escapes committing high treason against Methodism. When Presbyterians desert their Catechism we can consider the propriety of deserting our hymns. Attention to this interest is among the duties of the pastor. Make the leader familiar with the material required in building up saints, and he will inevitably use it in his work.

This instruction involves a careful discussion with the leader of the needs of each member, and especially of each peculiar case in his class. The pastor is a counseling physician, and he must examine the patient and the case before he can advise concerning the remedies. The provision made by the last General Conference for the careful training of leaders by the pastor in charge is the beginning of a great revival of Methodism. The pastor cannot give attention enough to the qualifications of the leaders, to select books for them, and examine them in those books, without greatly improving the leaders. With a temporary pastorate we must make the most of our leaders. This examination must elevate the grade of the work. Whatever exalts and renders more efficient the class-leader will add to the usefulness and power of Methodism. Faithful, conscientious pastors studying the Discipline, and studying to carry out its provisions, will transform the Methodist Episcopal Church into a vast college for the training of our leaders, and, through them, of our members.

5. The pastor must understand the cases of all absentees, must know how often the leader has visited them, and see to it that this part of the sub-pastor's duty is faithfully done. The blessing of the feet of those who bring glad tidings belongs to the leader who pursues into the wilderness his straying or lost lambs. A large per cent. of the power of Methodist machinery depends upon the constant and prayerful visitations of the leaders upon absent members. The great wheel that is to bring salvation to the nations goes round under the tread of 150,000 leaders, provided for in the Discipline, where each class is supposed to have twelve members.

The responsibility of this work is placed upon the pastors. When they are faithful, unselfish, godly men, the work goes forward. When they seek other ends than the good of the Church, or through indolence seek no ends at all, then the cause languishes. Everything depends, humanly speaking, upon good management. The pastors are called to this work. The burden of it rests upon them. Good leaders can cause Methodism to take the world in this century. If the leaders are not good the pastors are responsible. God will not hold them guiltless.

As Methodist preachers, we are under solemn covenant—as solemn and binding as it is possible to put upon a human conscience—to en[illegible] the Discipline, and make [illegible] do its best for Christ. [illegible] are no classes or leaders [illegible] is the pastor's first [illegible] them. If they are [illegible] fallen into disuse, he [illegible] This is his duty [illegible] ministry. God holds us as pastors under the Discipline to the high duty of taking the world for Christ in this generation. We accept our part of the responsibility in his name.—Christian Advocate.

Our Mission Work in Italy.

The Mission Rooms have Dr. Vernon's quarterly report of July 10. It abounds with interesting statements. He thinks we have unquestionably the best native church in the city of Rome. Two cultured and intelligent young ladies, daughters of a late superintendent of the Mosaic Manufactory, in the Vatican, have been converted and recently received into full connection. The congregations are fair, despite the heat; there is uninterrupted peace and harmony in the Church.

"At Naples all goes well. The work increases in strength and depth. At Terni some fifty persons have been received on trial, most of whom are now to be received into full connection. Our cause there is on good credit with a large part of the community. At Perugia there are frequent conversions and additions to the Church. Our place of worship is too small at Florence. Three weeks ago I preached there on Sunday night; some twenty persons or more were standing in the space about the door. But even this place we must leave at the end of the year. The character of the city, its inhabitants, the general air of culture, leave us at an indescribable disadvantage while working without a church edifice. There is a most eligible place we could have—all complete, and affording church, parsonage and some premises extra—for $12,000 or less—and all this in Florence!

"At Bologna our progress is not rapid, yet certainly in no other church is the Gospel more faithfully and ably preached. At Milan our numbers are small, but the material is good. The difficulties are serious. We are meanwhile lifting up a faithful standard, making some progress and expecting a Providential solution and melioration of the case. Venice has not yielded largely to our labors, yet some very interesting people have been brought to the Gospel, and we have no reason to be dissatisfied with what God has done by us, much less with the indications of what he is like to do. Flori is difficult ground, but we have a well ordered congregation there—some very interesting people.

"I would see greater triumphs. I long for richer outpourings of grace. More rapidly would my heart see the desert blossom as the rose. Yet withal I can never sufficiently thank God and magnify his grace for what has already been done. By His help we are daily conquering territory for Christ; we are even thrusting our brave, blessed, blood-stained banners into the tottering, breaking ranks of the foe, to the cry: Make way for the God of Israel, the Prince of Peace, the Captain of our salvation!

"I am thrice confident in conviction and faith that through God we have found here a spiritual force that shall bye and bye shake all this old classic Peninsula, and make it resonant with songs of praise and holy triumph. Whoever else goes on 'flowery beds of ease' it does not appear to the mission worker in Romanist lands. Agitation, however, is always helpful of Protestantism. In the darkest seas God's truth can kindle at least phosphorescent constellations and corruscations, and hower wild the waters on which it is tossed it can kindle forms of beauty."

Dr. Vernon's report to the Missionary Secretaries says of Daniel Gay, one of our preachers, that "a Capuchin" Monk attacked him from the pulpit while he was in the church; tried and well nigh succeeded in exciting a mob against him, and afterward attacked him in a pamphlet. The next day some two hundred liberals, favorable to Gay, went to the church where the Monk preached, resolved to resent any offense proffered. The Monk took the hint and so escaped with only a hissing at the close. Various citizens replied to the Monk's pamphlet, and Gay also responded in a considerable and spirited pamphlet.

Dr. Vernon had an opportunity to exhibit the Christian grace of patience. He had anticipated the formation of our Italy Conference, by Bishop Andrews, at his late visit to Rome. He was hugely disappointed that the Bishop did not see it well to do so at that time. It was the first meeting of the mission in Rome, and they had a new church and "the dream" of the formation of an annual conference there and then, and the sense of "the fitness of things" seemed to render it very desirable that it should have been done. It would have been "rich in coincidences" as Dr. Vernon says. But he protests against any interpretation of his disappointment reflecting on Bishop Andrews' course, or of dissatisfaction with his action. He speaks with gratefulness of the Bishop's "most affectionate and considerate bearing for him;" of his most judicious and wide-ranging counsels;" of his "gentleness and large Christian liberality," and "uncommon discernment of our peculiar circumstances." It certainly is very creditable to Dr. Vernon's Christian spirit that in the face of his disappointment he can thus speak of the official who was the agent of it. He adds: "It is scarcely possible that any one could have in the same time made himself more useful, more respected, or more loved by all who had the fortune to know him."

A New Catholic Crusade.

The Central Advocate has the following on the New Catholic Crusade, the organization of which we have already mentioned:

For some time past correspondents of European journals known to be in sympathy with the Papal conclave have been hinting of a new movement in the interests of Catholicism. The vail is now lifted in part, at least, and the outlines of the scheme have been made known. The new society, modeled upon an organization devised by St. Dominic, is called "The International Catholic League," and has for its object the restoration of the spiritual and temporal power of the Papacy. Having obtained the consent of the Pope, a central committee established at Rome will exercise supreme authority and be in the most intimate correspondence with subordinate branches in all countries in which Romanism has obtained a hold. Following the example of the great monastic and benevolent orders of the Roman Church, women, as well as men, are received into membership and assigned to appropriate duties. The Pope has issued a private circular urging the co-operation of all Catholic associations in this project on which is staked the hopes of the Roman Catholic Church.

The plan of operation is comprehensive. A general fund is provided by penny collections to which everyone it is supposed will contribute. The direct, practical work of the league will be: the defense of the civil rights and freedom of Catholic citizens against laws passed in opposition to the claims of the Church; the establishment of a Catholic press wherever possible, which shall be the organ of the central committee; the opposition press is to be held to a strict responsibility, and prosecuted for calumnious publications. In connection with this open and active movement is a still larger organization, the militia of Jesus Christ, which has already spread so widely as to cause concern in those States that have resisted the demands of the Pope. It is not now a military organization, since its members are not trained to the use of arms, but its transformation into a camp ready for active service would be the natural and almost inevitable consequence in case an appeal to arms were made. At present it proposes to re-establish the social power of the church, and especially to circumvent the plans and operations of those secret societies in league against the church. The members pledge themselves to separate from all associations condemned by the Pope, to show openly the most perfect submission to the laws of the church, forwardness in religious observances, zeal in sustaining the Catholic press, and to wear constantly the badge of the order where it may be seen, except under circumstances when it would work harm to themselves and the cause. Certain indulgences are offered to all members of the order.

The Eastern war and the submission of President MacMahon to the Legitimist and the Ultramontane leaders have excited the hopes of the Pope and his advisers. They cannot fail to perceive that their position is critical, and that they cannot extricate themselves except by a bold stroke and the largest resources. If they are compelled to elect a new Pope under the present condition of things, a concession is made that is really a surrender of the temporal power. The clerical victory in France is recognized as a victory for the Pope so far as it goes. Should the Republicans be defeated in the coming elections the new crusade will be fairly entered upon. If there were not so great interests at stake, in which even we in America are deeply concerned, the boldness of this movement might challenge our admiration. But we can have no sympathy with a church that would plunge Europe in bloodshed to regain an authority that has never been wielded in the cause of pure religion. And it will not succeed. The League has the tactics of the Middle Ages. The nations that once responded to the Pope are now the strongholds of Protestantism, or indifferent to his call. This latest movement may prove the weakness, not the strength, of the Papacy.

If the storm of adversity whistles around you, whistle bravely yourself; perhaps the two whistles may make melody.

The Gospel in Egypt.

Bishop Marvin says, in his letter of March 25, 1877: "The population of Egypt is set down at 8,400,000. Of these about 200,000 are Copts. They are generally found in the towns and cities. They are largely employed in places of official trust, or as clerks and accountants in business houses. The Copts are Christian, but as in the Greek and Latin Churches, so in theirs there is little else than dead formality. Holy places and holy relics abound among them, with the use of the crucifix, and lights always burning.

"Our Sunday was spent with the Missions of the United Presbyterian Church. This is the only Protestant Church engaged in missionary labors in Egypt. The first missionaries entered the field in 1854. The first Church was organized in Cairo in 1863. They are now at work in Alexandria, Cairo, Mensura, Sinoris, Osiut, Motea, Nakhaleh, Koos, and several smaller places. There are now eight missionaries in the field. The Report for 1875 shows a membership of 676. The Sabbath-school attendance is set down at 658. Pupils in day-schools, 1,040; in boarding-schools, 66; in college, 84; in theological school, 10. Present statistics would put up all these figures considerably. Congregations in some places are small, in others quite large. The missionaries are full of hope and zeal, and abundant in labors. Their success is confined almost entirely to the Copts, though there are instances of conversion among the Mohammedans."

The Fountain Head.

A stream may be defiled. A reservior may become polluted. A cup may be poisoned, but the fountain will still remain pure. The Gospel comes to us to-day in many forms and through many channels; it comes to us tinged with the feelings, thoughts, and fancies of a multitude of men of passions like our own, and often the honest inquirer is perplexed and misled by the wordy strifes of discordant teachers who profess to draw their differing faiths from a common source, and to bend their steps to a common destination.

There is nothing better for us to do under such circumstances than to go to the fountain head. The Christ who died on the cross still lives; the Holy Spirit which brings all things to our remembrance yet abides in the world; and the sacred Scriptures, which contain the truth as it is in Jesus, are within our reach. Nothing but our idleness and indifference can prevent our searching for ourselves to see if these things are so; and if we will turn away from the devices of man, and draw our faith from the Fountain Head, the Word of God, we shall attain a knowledge of the truth, pure and unadulterated, which we may not hope to gain in any other way.

"Search the Scriptures!" Within the pages of that Word, which "liveth and abideth forever," the inquiring soul may find his doubts resolved, his faith nourished, his soul purified, and his heart made glad; for he shall find that the Holy Scriptures are able to make him "wise unto salvation, through faith that is in Christ Jesus."—The Observer.

The Workingman and the Capitalist.

We use the term workingman to represent that large class of persons who depend upon their daily, weekly, or monthly wages for their means of living. They are the sellers of labor and have nothing else to sell. They must sell at the time, or lose the wages altogether. They cannot hold it for a future and better price, and they cannot supply their own immediate wants without the sale. Whether it be their misfortune or their fault, they generally manage to consume all their earnings as they go, and, hence, are no better off at the end of the year than at its commencement. They are permanently poor; and when their labor stops they must either starve or become objects of charity.

What these people want is a labor market, constantly demanding their services and at short intervals paying them an adequate remuneration therefor. Not being the buyer of labor, and, indeed, having nothing with which to buy it, they cannot furnish such a market. The real rate of wages paid to them is not the nominal amount which they receive in the form of money; but rather the purchasing power of that money, considered relatively to the commodities which they buy with it and on which they live. And this is determined by the average rate of prices. Justice requires that there should be a reasonable proportion between the rate of money wages and general prices; and in a free market these two things are so mutually independent that, unless affected by special causes, which can never be more than temporary, they regulate themselves with reference to each other by a natural law. They may be subject to occasional oscilliations, that for the time being work hardships; yet, where competition is free, their fixed tendency is towards a just equilibrium.

By a capitalist we mean any person who spends less than he earns, and, hence, gradually accumulates a surplus, which he employs as the means of increasing his earning or productive power; or any person who, by bequest or legal inheritance, has received such a surplus, as the fruit of the labor and self-denial of others, generally his ancestors. Every such person is a capitalist, larger or smaller, according to the amount that he holds. There certainly is no sin in being a capitalist; and no wrong is done to others when the capitalist seeks in a just and proper manner so to use his capital as to promote his own advantage. In so doing he simply does what he has a right to do and what it is for the interest of society that he should do. He may lend his capital to others for an interest income; or he may use it himself in some form of productive business, for the sake of the profits. It is in this way only that the general stock of capital in human society gradually increases, and the whole body politic, in its individual members, becomes richer and more competent for all the purposes of civilized life. The institution of private property being granted, and at the time real, which is undoubtedly the order of Nature, as well as of justice, then the accumulated wealth of a nation is mainly that of the persons who compose it; and the amount of this wealth is one characteristic mark of the stage of its civilization.

The capital thus accumulated, and in the ownership of some persons and not of others, and by them employed in the industrial operations of society for the purpose of increase, furnishes to the laborer the only market in which he can sell his labor. The capitalist is the only man that can give him any employment for wages; or who can use his services and pay for them as he uses them, and then wait for the sale of the products to remunerate himself. He is the only man who can advance the wages three, or six, or it may be twelve months before he realizes the profits. While the workingman must have his pay in immediate connection with his work, the capitalist can wait for his pay, because he is a capitalist, and, in the meantime, support both himself and the workingman out of his accumulated capital.

These facts and principles, that are as fixed in the constitution of all civilized society as the laws of Nature, settle the question that the so-called antagonism between the interests of capital and those of labor is the sheerest nonsense that fools ever uttered or believed. It being a fact given that multitudes of men have nothing but labor to sell, and can live only by selling it, then it is equally a fact that their interests are best served by having capitalists to buy it. It being also a fact that capitalists need to buy labor in order to make a productive and profitable use of their capital, then they best serve their own interests by making the purchase. The interests of both parties are mutually served in the purchase and sale of labor. Each needs the other and each is profited by the other. They are not enemies, but industrial friends. They are as really such as the grocer and his customers. They trade with each other—the one giving services for commodities, and the other giving commodities for services. Their business intercourse is not a matter of charity on either side, but simply of bargain and sale; as much so as one man buys and another sells a house. There is no reason in the nature of the transaction why both should not make a good trade; and for a general rule this is the fact.

The only question that admits of dispute between these parties relates to the terms of the trade. The workingman naturally wants to get the highest price that he can for his labor; and the capitalist, just as naturally, wants to buy it at the cheapest price. In this matter both study their own interests, and both have an equal right to do so—to sell, or buy, or do neither, just as shall seem most expedient. How shall this apparent conflict be settled between them? In a free country, under a free government, and with freedom of contracts, all of which holds true to the United States, there is but one rule of justice, of common sense, and of general utility; and this rule is free and unrestrained competition between the sellers of labor, on the one hand, and the buyers of labor on the other, leaving the seller to sell for the highest price he can get, and the buyer to buy as cheap as he can. This rule makes a market price, under the great law of supply and demand; and every attempt to defeat the operation of the rule or permanently change it is doomed to failure.

Laborers may discuss the question as much as they please; they may organize trades unions; they may get up strikes and temporarily disturb the natural course of events, even if they forbear to commit crimes; yet they have no power to raise the rate of wages or prevent a reduction of wages, either when the sellers of labor are too numerous for the demand or the profits derived from the purchase of labor will not justify the scale of wages they claim. They may by combination temporarily make a "corner" on buyers and seem to succeed. In the end they will make a "corner" on themselves. No man will long continue to buy labor at a loss. If his business yields no profits or inadequate profits, he will either reduce its expenses or quit the business. He is the judge in this matter; and, as the question is not one of charity, but of business, he will consult his own interests and has a right to do so. One of the great difficulties with the workingmen at this moment consists in the fact that the buyers of labor are not in a condition to give employment to them all; and they may be sure that they cannot create this condition by labor-strikes. The tendency of all such strikes is in the opposite direction.—Independent.

"Do those bells sound an alarm of fire?" said a stranger the other Sunday as the church-bells were calling together the worshippers. "Yes," was the reply, "but the fire is in the next world."

The following advice is appropriate just now: "No prudent business man takes down his sign or stops his advertisement on account of hard times. This is the time when he should, on the contrary, spread his flag to the fullest so that he may be found at the top when the weak and poor spirited have left or disappeared from the scene."

Captain James B. Eads, engineer of the iron bridge at St. Louis, has made elaborate plans for a grand iron bridge over the Bosphorus, connecting Pera—European Constantinople—with the Asiatic shore. The bridge, if built, will be about 6,000 feet long—over a mile—will have fifteen spans, will be 100 feet wide, and, save the masonry and flooring, will be of iron. The height of the roadway above the surface of the water will be 120 feet. The central arch will be 750 feet span. The two central piers will be fifty feet thick, of solid granite blocks, locked together with iron braces. The main piers will be 270 feet high from the foundation to the summit. It is estimated that the cost of construction will not exceed $25,000,000, and the time six years. Captain Eads is now 58 years old. This bridge will probably be the crowning point of a great engineering experience.

There have been shipped from Crystal Springs, Copiah county, this season, nearly forty thousand boxes of peaches, which have netted about fifty cents per box; besides these, other fruits and berries have been shipped in smaller quantities. Terry, Hinds county, has done nearly, if not quite, as well as Crystal Springs. Byram, Hazlehurst and Beauregard, have also been in the business upon a smaller scale. We have seen it stated that Holly Springs, Marshall county, has shipped about 20,000 boxes of peaches and pears, and we have been informed that West Point, and several other places on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, have also been shipping fruit quite extensively. Our seashore towns, besides their great lumber interests, are also building up quite an extensive trade in the semi-tropical fruits, such as oranges and figs.—Miss. Clarion.

The President and Mrs. Hayes have been invited to a hospitality never before extended to a President, and never to any woman in the United States. The abbot of the Trappists, at Gethsemane, Kentucky, has invited them to visit the monastery during their proposed visit to Louisville. By the rules of this rigorous order no woman is allowed within the walls of their monasteries unless she be "the wife of the ruler of an empire, kingdom or republic; and should Mrs. Hayes accept the invitation, it is said that she will be the first American woman who has ever seen the inside of such an establishment. The monastery at Gethsemane is one of the two Trappist communities in this country, the other being near Dubuque, Iowa. It was founded in 1848 by Monks from the parent institution at Citeaux, France. The spacious buildings are in the form of a quadrangle, the interior space being occupied by a garden of rare flowers, and within the walls are understood to be many paintings of great value brought from the mother country. As is known, the Monks of the order are bound by the strictest vows to the hardest manual labor, to unusual abstinence in food and water, and to perpetual silence. The abbot, who is a well-born Frenchman, shares with the humblest Monk all these observances, with the exception, perhaps, of the last—else the reception of the Presidential party would be dull indeed. He added to his invitation (transmitted through General Pennebaker, U. S. A., in charge of the department at Louisville) the assurance that the President's reception at the abbey "should be marked by all the distinction shown to the ruler of a great nation."

Bishop Marvin's letters were most excellent, and, we hope, will be published in a book.

The mouth of Red River has, of late, become almost blocked; it is said that the closing of Toncs' Bayou, together with dredging, will remove the obstruction to navigation. This is a most important matter, which cannot be too soon effected. It is of the first consequence that our internal navigation, by rivers and bayous, should be unimpeded, and liberal appropriations should be made by the State for this purpose. Not only is commerce facilitated, but the clearing of the bayous is of the greatest importance to the surrounding country, in a sanitary point of view, for as the water falls, malarial, and kindred diseases, are generated in the stagnant waters.

Another great work has been projected, viz: what is termed the Barratoria Canal. A company has been formed to execute this project. At a point on the right bank of the Mississippi, the canal is proposed to be commenced, to terminate at the Bay of Barrataria, through which vessels from New Orleans would be enabled to reach the Gulf of Mexico. The company have sought no aid from the State, but they seek for all the land which they may, by their operations, reclaim. To this, there can be no objection, as, in fact, they would form the land, and in doing so, they would benefit the State, and increase its salubrity.

PUBLIC FEELING IN LOUISIANA.

Since the accession of Governor Nicholls, it is most gratifying to note that a feeling of greater confidence is arising in the State, as a consequence of which real estate is improving in value. Merchants are hopeful for a sounder and improved business, and lands are being freely bought for cultivation. There needs but manufacturing to be introduced into the city, to make it one of the most prosperous cities of the Union. To facilitate this, efforts should be made for the admission, duty free, of all sorts of manufacturing machinery, and of the raw materials of manufactures. This well deserves the attention of Southern members of Congress.

IMPROVED SALUBRITY OF NEW ORLEANS.

Yet more it deserves to be noted, that the salubrity of the city is yearly improving. Already, it is one of the healthiest cities of the Union. It requires but due attention to the cleansing and drainage of the city and surrounding swamp lands, to make this one of the most delightful residences of America. It enjoys a splendid winter climate, and the heats of summer are really less oppressive than those of Northern cities."

Southern Methodism in the North.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is pushing her church work with a good degree of earnestness and success in several of the Northern States and Territories. This is to be commended in our Southern brethren. Wherever there are people who prefer the Southern Church, the authorities of that church should look after them, and, if possible, give them the gospel.

Rev. Dr. J. B. McFerrin, Missionary Secretary of the Southern Church, gives an account in the Western Methodist, of the late Methodist Denver Conference. Bishop McTyeire presided. The Conference includes Colorado and Montana. In Colorado, there are 391 members, and in Montana 238; local preachers 10; churches 10; probable value $19,200. Dr. McFerrin understands that the Southern Methodist is the strongest protestant church in Montana. There are eight appointments in Montana in one District presided over by E. J. Stanley. In Colorado, there are ten appointments in one District, presided over by W. M. Smith. Six ministers were transfered from this Conference. Dr. McFerrin says:

"There are Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists, Northern Methodists, and others in this country. They are all doing something, but altogether they cannot meet the demands of the people. There are hundreds of places where the inhabitants have no preaching at all. These must be reached by the itinerants if they hear the gospel at all. Must these people be given up? Let the Church at home answer."

The amount of Missionary money apportioned to this work by the Southern Church is not stated, but we believe Colorado and Montana receive several thousand dollars this year.

Mars and His Moons.

The scientific world has been surprised at the late discovery by Prof. Hall of the fact that the planet Mars has two moons. They are only 1400 or 1500 miles from the planet. Scientific men say this proves that Mars is inhabited, but scientific men make so many mistakes that this can be put down as a guess which may or may not be true. Mr. Parkhurst says:

"Now that they have been found, how large are they? In brightness they are eight magnitudes smaller than Vesta. This would correspond, at the distance of Vesta, to one-fourtieth its diameter. But, being three times as near, at this time that reduces the diameter again to one-third. We must allow one-half for their being nearer the sun, and, therefore, more strongly illuminated. So that, assuming Vesta to be 269 miles in diameter, and the satellites of Mars at equally reflective substance, their diameter cannot much exceed three miles. A little moon like that might fall into New York bay without much more damage than a "tidal wave." The wonder is that such a little speck should have been seen at all more than thirty millions mile away.

Annual Commercial Review.

The secular press of our city has given especial attention this year to the Annual First of September Trade Review. The daily papers, particularly, present their mammoth sheets, well filled with all that pertains to the productions, carrying and marketing of crops; internal improvements, manufactures, finances, and all else that concerns the material prosperity of the country. They tell of the abundant harvests which a kind Providence has bestowed upon the Mississippi Valley, and all agree that the outlook for the city of New Orleans is most encouraging. Nature designed that by the Great River should the products of this Valley, find their way to market. Artificial means have, in a great measure, diverted them into lateral courses, but they must eventually come as Nature intended with their tributes of wealth and greatness to this city. How soon this shall be, New Orleans must answer by her efforts in pushing her railroad and other interests for securing and caring for this immense commerce. We take from the New Era the following general comments on these subjects:

AGRICULTURE.

"At this season an approximation to an accurate estimate of the crops of the year can be made. The grain harvest is now nearly over, and the result may be declared to be, that the quality of wheat, corn, etc., is very fine this season. The yield will be a full average throughout the Union, with the exception of California, which has suffered very severely from great drought. This has caused a large diminution of the wheat crop, so that the export from San Francisco will be much under that of last year. The same cause has led to great losses of sheep and cattle in the Pacific States. In this connection it is very gratifying to know that throughout the South, the cultivation of grain has been much extended during the past year. This is sound policy on the part of Southern planters. Not only by their raising their own supplies of corn, etc., are they enabled to maintain their working stock off their own farms, and thereby greatly diminishing their expenditure for supplies, but they are at the same time improving their lands, as, by diversity of cropping, they increase the fertility of the soil. This is a branch of good farming which Southern planters will do well to maintain. The prices of grain will certainly be higher during the current year, than were those of last year, chiefly, because of the Russo-Turkish war. England and other countries will buy more largely from America, in consequence of their being shut out from the Russian grain markets of the Black Sea and adjoining waters. The deficient harvest in England this year will also oblige her to buy more largely abroad. The profits of the grain farmers of the United States will thus be greater than they were last year. The great State of Texas has, during the past year very largely increased her growth of grain. Texas is rapidly becoming one of the greatest grain producing States of the Union.

The tobacco crop in all the tobacco growing States is reported fine, and will show an increase.

The cotton crop will be abundant and of fine quality, while the acreage, particularly in Texas, will be much beyond that of last year. The war in Europe and the continued depression of trade in this and other countries will lessen the demand, and so prices will rule low.

The sugar crop, which is almost entirely confined to Louisiana, is expected to be good, probably not so weighty as last year, still it will be very fair to the acre. The prices will not be higher, probably a little less. The great depression in trading and manufacturing circles will act injuriously to the sugar planter, as it must tend to diminished consumption, and so no increase of price may be looked for. It is gratifying to note that there has been a considerably increased cultivation of cane in our State during the past year. With good government in the State, it is not to be doubted that capitalists will largely invest in the sugar lands of Louisiana.

The clip of wool will this year be less, in consequence of the great loss of sheep in California caused by the drought; while prices will not be higher from the same reasons which will operate against those of cotton. Sheep raising is much neglected in the Southern States, though they are remarkably well adapted for this very important branch of husbandry—of all stock, sheep are the most profitable.

A very important addition to the exports of the United States was made last year, viz. the export of live cattle, sheep, and meat to England. Large shipments of live cattle have been made to England. This trade will receive a check in consequence of a cattle plague now raging in Europe, which has caused the British Government to place increased restrictions on the landing of live cattle at the English ports. But the reduced export of live cattle will cause an increased export of meat from the United States, and as the principle of refrigeration is now so extensively employed on the Atlantic steamers, every facility is given for the conveyance of meat by them to England. This trade is yielding largely to the benefit of American farmers. The opening to them of so vast an outlet for their stock will tend largely to a great extension of stock-raising in the United States. Of this new trade, the Southern farmers have not as yet participated. Nowhere are there lands better adapted for stock-raising than those of the South, consequently the Southern planters will not be true to themselves or the country if they fail to become great stock-raisers. In doing so they would not only add largely to their receipts, but immensely improve their lands. This matter is to be hoped will have the most intelligent consideration of all good Southern farmers. A kindred trade, viz: canned meats, is becoming a great one in Chicago—the export is almost wholly to England.

The rice crop of the year is now being harvested. The quality is fine and the yield a full average. In Louisiana there has been an increased acreage this year.

TRADE BETWEEN NEW ORLEANS AND SOUTH AMERICA.

The trade between this city and various South American ports is very considerable, but is almost wholly an import one, the principal article of import being coffee. The want of an export trade has been long felt, the products of the Mississippi Valley, viz: flour, pork, etc., being in great demand in South American markets; but there being no regular line of traders, sail or steam, the exports from this city have consequently been small. To provide for this want, it is proposed that a [illegible] of steamers shall be formed to run to [illegible] ports of Venezuela, Brazil, etc. But it is feared that there would not be sufficient return cargoes; hence, there is a [illegible] to complete the enterprise, un[illegible] is obtained from the United States Government, in the shape of a subsidy. [illegible] very likely, will not be given. [illegible] the proposed trade cannot sup[illegible] is but faint hope of its [illegible] help of a subsidy crutch. [illegible] the United States [illegible] be separated from [illegible] wall of a Pro[illegible] correctly, a Pro[illegible] is vain to suppose that [illegible] addition to [illegible] How [illegible] ing in the [illegible] nations,

The British Wesleyan Conference.

The 134th Annual Conference of British Wesleyan ministers has just been held in Bristol. About five hundred ministers, including several returned missionaries were present at the opening. There had been several deaths during the year, and fourteen new men were elected to fill vacancies in the ranks of the Legal Hundred. Dr. Pope was elected President. Among the representatives from American churches, were Drs. Lowry and R. S. Rust, of the M. E. Church, and Bishop Marvin, of the M. E. Church, South. There were twenty-four candidates for ordination in the Foreign Missionary work, and sixty-eight in the English Home work; one hundred and fifty-one preachers were received as candidates for the ministry, and twenty-eight declined.

Rev. C. P. Wellman is the teacher of a colored school in Griffin Georgia. Not long since he was waited on by three young men—two of them from Methodist families, and told that he must leave the city or he would be "taken care of." The Mayor of the town has promised protection. Speaking of the outrage Rev. J. Mitchell of Georgia Conference says:

I had been fondly cherishing the hope that we had reached a better age; but no, the Rifle Club and Klan still claim to be the ruling forces of the South. One gentleman commenting on our State, said, "The Government is responsible for all this." I answered, "No, the pulpit is responsible. It is the duty of the pulpit to make a public conscience adverse to this state of things. It is the place of the pulpit to manufacture (by the use of the Divine law) a public opinion that will strengthen the hands of the magistrate—whether President or Mayor—for we are all sovereigns in this land, and the government is just what we make it. The responsibility remains with the pulpit, and to that responsibility the pulpit must be held."

The law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks in Maine is a success. Neal Dow has lately published a letter setting forth the facts. Both political parties now support the law.

"There never was a time when the policy of prohibition of the liquor traffic was more firmly established in the public opinion of Maine than it is now. The original Maine law was passed through the legislature of 1851 by a vote of 86 to 40 in the house, and 18 to 10 in the senate. At the last session of the legislature, January, 1877, after an experience of twenty-six years of the results of prohibition, an act additional, with greatly increased penalties, passed through both houses, without a dissenting vote. In Maine there is not one barkeeper known to the authorities. In New Jersey there are five thousand. In Maine there is not a restaurant known to sell liquor. In New Jersey there are 1,380. In Maine there is not a dealer in liquor, unless it be secretly and in violation of law. In New Jersey there are 665. In Maine there is not one brewer. In New Jersey there are 578. In Maine there is not one distiller. In New Jersey there are 43.

The Norway Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was opened by Bishop Andrews, at Horten, June 29. The Conference numbers twenty-three. A preparatory school was organized, and preachers appointed; 569,000 pages of tracts had been published during the year, and most of them sold. None of the preachers use tobacco, and strong grounds were taken on the subject of working to decrease intemperance among the people. The statistics show, societies, 20; missionaries, 23; members in full connection, 2,654; increase during the year, 409; on probation, 846; increase during the year, 233; total, 3,500; increase, 682; Sunday-schools, 43; increase 7; teachers, 254; increase, 42; worth of church property after the debts are paid, 184,534 Norwegian crowns, (a crown is 30 cents,) increase, 38,218; collected in the societies in all during the year, 74,214 crowns; more than last year, 21,691. These figures are telling; they show an increase of nearly 700 members, including those on trial, and are evidence that God is among our Norway brethren in his saving power.

The Turks still gain victories over the Russians.

Another of our churches has been burned in the South by some wicked incendiary. This time in South Carolina. Rev. A. Middletown, of Midway, South Carolina, reports the sad affair as occurring on Bull Swamp Circuit, Sunday night, Aug. 12th. It had been used all day by our people. The building was 30x46, and had just been erected, and as yet the seats were temporary. The people have struggled hard for two years to erect the church, and, with some assistance from the Church Extension, had succeeded. The day following the people met around the pile of charred ruins and, with tearful eyes, resolved to rebuild. God will help them as surely as He will curse the hand that applied the torch.

The good with the good is often at "cross purposes" in this world, but it isn't always so. The great benevolent societies sometimes collide a little, but their greater lines run parallel. The American Bible Society just now illustrates this afresh by sending Dr. Butler, of our Mexican mission, eight hundred copies of the psalms in Spanish for use in churches under his superintendence, besides a grant of money to the same mission for colporteur's expenses.

Bishop Keener, of the M. E. Church South, writes the Nashville Advocate from New Orleans, under date of Aug 24th:

"I am glad to hear of your escape from what might have proved a serious accident. I have just returned home from District Conferences, continued since the middle of April, at which I have seen many conversions. Our Church in Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama, is alarmingly neglectful of family prayer. A Church without family altars! Is that the Methodism of our fathers.

The Pope is reported sick again, and intriguing is going on to secure the election of a successor.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. George W. Baracy, Macon, Miss., says: "We have just closed a protracted meeting in which there were five conversions and twelve accessions to the Church. Our Sunday-school is doing well."

Rev. W. W. Brown, Marshall, Texas, says: "The good Lord has graciously blessed our Church in this place. In a meeting just closed we had forty-seven accessions, and on last Sunday I baptized twenty-nine adults and two children."

Rev. James J. Shampert, Corinth, Miss., writes: "At our protracted meeting just closed there were twenty conversions and seventeen accessions to the Church. Our church members are greatly revived and encouraged."

Rev. Wm. McKinsey, Anderson, Texas, writes: "We have been holding meetings during the past week in which a deep spiritual interest has been awakened. There have been already nine conversions. May the Lord continue His blessings unto us."

Rev. N. Cannon, Meridian, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a five week's meeting, which was a season of very great blessing to us. There were twenty conversions and twenty-three accessions to the Church. A great many whose hearts were touched by the Holy Spirit during the meeting are yet enquiring 'What shall I do to be saved?'"

Rev. P. Jamison, Shabuta, Miss., says: "Our protracted meeting closed last night. There were nineteen conversions and fifty-two accessions to the Church—adults baptized twenty-two, children thirty-six. We will commence a meeting to-night at an appointment four miles from this place in the country. May the Lord continue to direct and bless our efforts."

Rev. H. Green, pastor of Sixth Street Church, of this city, gives us the following statement: "We have had a very interesting meeting in progress during the past three weeks. So far there have been eight conversions and a number of accessions to the Church, and the good work goes on. Our people have no house of worship of their own and are compelled to pay rent. Notwithstanding the hard times they have commenced the work of raising funds to secure a property of their own, and now have one hundred and ten dollars of the amount in bank, which is very encouraging to us, considering the size of our congregations, and the scarcity of money."

Rev. Jas. Hayward, Donaldsonville, La., says: "The re-opening exercises of our M. E. Church at this place on last Saturday and Sunday proved a season of great interest and blessing to us. Not all of our ministerial brethren visited us on the occasion whom we had hoped to meet from abroad, but we were glad to welcome and have the aid of Revs. Smith and H. Green of your city. Many of our other friends from the city and elsewhere were present, and, with our own congregation, gave us large audiences. Bro. Smith gave us some able sermons and the words of our good old father in Israel Green, will not soon be forgotten in Donaldsonville. At the special service on Sunday afternoon we had the assistance of Bros. Green and P. Landry. The M. E. Church has to-day a stronger and deeper hold upon the hearts of the people of this community than ever before. Our camp meeting is to begin on Saturday, Sept. 22. On the next day there will be an excursion train from the city for the benefit of our Church, and we hope our friends will aid us all they can.

Religious Items.

The new Christian Advocate (Methodist) in the city of Mexico has attained to a circulation of 1,100.

A branch of the Evangelical Alliance has been formed in Spain, of which Rev. Thomas H. Gulick has been chosen President.

At Boston University rooms for twenty additional theological students are being fited up. They will be ready for occupancy at the opening of the scholastic year, Sept. 19.

There is some excitement among the Jews of Augusta, Ga., owing to the fact that Mr. Seligman Zimmers, of that city, was baptized as a Catholic just before he died. The Jews, after some hesitation on the part of the Catholics, took the body and burned it according to the rites of their Church.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church has now 2,196 auxiliaries, 53,438 annual members and patrons. Its income for the year ending February. 10, 1877 was $67,698. Since its organization in 1869, it had received $404,000. In this period its missionaries have accompanied those of the parent society to all foreign fields, except those of Africa and Europe. It has sent out thirty young ladies. Besides these, 140 Bible-women and other helpersare employed, and 130 day schools sustained. Three young ladies were sent out the past year.

The Indian Missionary Directory, issued at Lacknow, gives the number of native Christians now as 266,391 against 224,258 four years ago; and the number of communicants 68,689 against 52,816—a gain of about 10,500 in the former. The Directory gives the name and present address of 960 living missionaries and ordained native pastors in India proper; excluding Burmah and Ceylon. Further, in an appendix, appears a list of 166 lady missionaries conected with the various women's societies.

The Wesleyans have just been telling of an Italian Bible Society, the Mayor of Rome having granted the use of the theatre, holding three thousands persons, for a meeting. Not only was the meeting crowded, but there were as many more outside waiting for admission. It might be a matter of interest to know that the Emperor of Germany was an annual subscriber to the Bible Society, and that the Emperor of Russia had given full permission for the colporteurs to approach the soldiers engaged in the present war. It was very pleasing to know that amongst the Mohammodan troops in Syria there was a great desire to receive the Bible, and that the Committee of the Bible Society had given unlimited orders for as many Bibles and Testaments to be supplied as might be required.

Mr. Wm. B. Astor is reported as buying a good deal of land in Florida. That State seems to be capturing considerable Northern capital, and a good many capital Northern people.

Frank B. Carpenter has sold his picture representing the Signing of the Proclamation of Emancipation, to an admirer of Lincoln, for $25,000. It will be presented to the Government to adorn the National Capitol.

Two of the largest silk mills in Paterson, N. J., have just received an order from Paris for silk goods. This is believed to be the first order received from Europe for American silks, and if it is satisfactorily filled, a considerable trade is anticipated by the Paterson manufacturers.

A Bull regulating the proceedure to be observed by the Conclave of Cardinals on the death of the Pope has been completed at the Vatican. It empowers the Cardinal Carmerlengo to either summon the Conclave immediately, or await the arrival of foreign Cardinals.

The Clay Statue, in Capitol Square, Richmond, Va., the fingers of which were broken off some years ago, is to be repaired. The hands ordered for it by the Legislature have been received from Italy. They are of pure white Italian marble and are of exquisite workmanship.

A large and influential company of American merchants and public men are seeking to promote the African Continental Railroad, which, although but a mercantile venture, will, if carried out, afford great facilities for religious intercourse with the natives of that continent.

Germany, on account of an attack on the German consul, Eisensturk, at Leon, in his private character, demands of Nicaragua thirty thousand dollars indemnity, and a salute to the German flag, threatening otherwise to send a squadron and army to enforce the demand. The matter is before the United States and England.

It can be stated upon high official authority, that before taking any further steps towards a recognition of the Diaz government, the United States Government will await the promised reparation for actual invasion and conflict by the Mexican troops upon the soil of the United States.

The first flouring mill in this city is now being built at Nos. 82 & 84 St. Peter St., by Messrs. Webster and Dillingham. E. P. Allis & Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., are the contractors and the mill is to be in operation by October 1. It will contain a Corliss Engine of one hundred and fifty horse power, and six pairs of burrs with a capacity of 200 barrels of flour per day. The cost will not exceed sixty thousand dollars.

Wiley University.

BUILDING.

We recognize that we are in the midst of an important work, almost greater than we feel able to meet. We have labored under burdensome disadvantage since the organization of the school in 1873. Lack of accomodations suitable for our school has been among the chief. The Freedmen's Aid Society has firmly purposed to erect suitable buildings, and has secured the grounds at a cost of about $1800. The work could be begun this fall by a hearty response from the different charges of our Conference. The Texas Annual Conference at its last session passed a resolution, making it the duty of every preacher in the Conference to lift a special collection for Wiley University. We sincerely hope that our preachers will not come up to the next Conference without pressing this matter upon the people. This is too important a work to be neglected. It is admitted by all that our schools, and especially our schools for training teachers and preachers are an absolute necessity. The church of our choice is to-day spending more money, and sending more men into this field than any other. The Church says that we must support good church schools in the South; and right nobly has she done this important work. But with all the demands that are made upon her treasury, the amounts that can be given to this department are too meager for the demand. We have been bountifully blessed by the liberality of the "Old Mother Church;" but it is poor policy to continue to lavish upon a son that does not do something for himself. We ought to do more for ourselves. We now appeal to the members of the Texas Annual Conference in the letter and spirit of our last Conference resolution, to take this collection. The resolution referred to reads as follows: "That we will take up a special collection during the year for Wiley University, and report the same at our next Annual Conference." With effort on the part of every member of the Conference we could put up our building with ease, and do it speedily. $10,000 is required to erect such a building as is needed. The Freedmen's Aid Society will furnish half that amount at any time we can raise the other half. Marshall and vicinity can raise half of the remaining half, leaving $2,500 for the remaining part of our Conference. This divided among eighty charges would not be burdensome, about $31 each. Houston, Galveston, Jefferson, and many of the stronger points could easily raise from $100 to $200, Jefferson has promised $150 on subscription. Our poorest charges if the matter was presented would give from $10 to $20. "Many hands make light work." We can do all that is asked of us with ease. Let us do it.

INFORMATION TO STUDENTS.—ADMISSION.

Any one giving satisfactory evidence of good moral character, and agreeing to observe faithfully all the rules of the school, and far enough advanced to read well in the 3d Reader, may become a member of the school and shall have the privileges of the same so long as these rules are obeyed, and they are, in the judgment of the Faculty making sufficient progress to justify their continuance at school.

RULES.

1. All are required to attend Sunday-school and public worship on the Sabbath, and to attend Chapel service every morning during the week.
2. No tobacco allowed in or about the buildings.
3. None are permitted to indulge in the use of profane or vulgar language, or to use any kind of intoxicating drinks, while members of the school.
4. Students rooming on the grounds are permitted to be absent from 4 to 6 of each school day, Saturday afternoons until 6, and to attend regular religious services on Sabbath. They will not be permitted to absent themselves any other time without permission.
5. Students on the grounds are required to be in their places from the beginning to the close of study hours.

A violation of any of the foregoing rules, or any other misdemeanor subjects the perpetrator to discipline, and if persisted in to expulsion.

Francis Phillip, is combatted. Mr. Stephens holds that the real author will probably never be known, but the letters bear the marks of the pure and lofty sentiments of an incorruptible patriot, and should be cherished by every friend of Constitutional liberty, in every country, age and clime.

In the article on The President's Southern Policy, we have an exposition of the Constitutional powers of the Federal Executive. The Constitution declares that: "The United States shall guarantee to each State a republican form of Government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the Legislature (or of the Executive, when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence." This clause, according to our author, obligates the United States to insure local self-government, demanding only that it be Republican in form, the fundamental idea of which is, that the government should be in the hands of those for whom it is instituted. The conclusion reached is, that "the phraseology of the Constitution implies that the United States is endowed with no general supervisory authority in respect to the domestic affairs—the internal economy—of any State." This is all right with one exception—an exception that needs to be emphasized just now. The Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution, guarantee all the rights of American citizenship to the colored people, and Congress is given special power to legislate to that end. Now, if any State should see fit not to carry out these amendments, it would be the Constitutional duty of the United States to enter the domain of that State and see that it was done. No call from Governor and Legislature would be necessary.

St. Nicholas, for September, leads off with "Young Folks' Fun in Central Park," and is brimful of attractive and instructive papers for the young, including the very little ones. $3 a year: Scribner & Co., New York.

Scribner's Monthly, for September, contains ninety-eight illustrations, accompanying eight papers, viz: "The Immigrant's Progress," "The Fan," "The Land of the Arabian Nights," "Old Streets and Houses of England," "An Island of the Sea," "Wells and Cisterns as a Source of Water-Supply," "Microscopical Corals," and Dr. Holland's Nicholas Minturn—to be concluded next month. There are many other papers of great value, of which we mention specially one on "College Instruction," giving interesting comparisons of instruction in leading colleges. In his department, the editor, Dr. Holland, indulges in "Summer Dreams." Other departments have the usual variety. $4 a year: Scribner & Co., New York.

How the Apostles Died.

1. Peter was crcified in Rome, and at his own request, head downward.
2. Andrew was crucified by being tied to a cross by a cord, on which he hung two days—exhorting the people till he expired.
3. James the Great was beheaded by order of Herod at Jerusalem.
4. James the less was thrown from a high pinnacle, then stoned, and finally killed with a fuller's club.
5. Philip was bound and hanged against a pillar.
6. Batholomew was flayed to death by command of a barbarous king.
7. Matthew was killed with a halbert.
8. Thomas, while at prayer, was shot with a shower of lances, and afterward run through the body with a lance.
9. Simon was crucified.
10. Thaddeus or Judas was cruelly put to death.
11. Matthias; the manner of his death is somewhat doubtful; one says stoned, then beheaded; another says he was crucified.
12. Judas Iscariot fell, and his bowels gushed out.
13. John died a natural death.
14 Paul was beheaded by order of Nero.

The Happy Man.

The Happy man was born in the city of Regeneration, in the parish of Repentance unto life. He was educated at the school of Obedience and lives in Perseverance. He works at the trade of Diligence notwithstanding he has a large estate in the country of Christian Contentment, and many times does jobs of self-denial. He often walks in the valley of Self-abasement—sometimes climbs the mountain of Heavenly-mindness; he wears the plain garment of Humility, but has a better suit to put on when he goes to court, called the Robe of Christ's Righteousness. He break[illegible] every morning on Spiritual Prayer, and sups every evening on the same. He has meat to eat which the world knows not of, and his drink is the sincere milk of the world of God. Thus happy he lives, and happy he dies. Happy is the [illegible] gospel submission in his [illegible] peace in his conscience, [illegible] grace in his heart, the [illegible] yoke on his neck, a [illegible] over his head, and [illegible] under his feet. Happy [illegible] man. In order [illegible] believe firmly, pray [illegible] work [illegible] live [illegible] your heart, [illegible] your time, [illegible] glory.

SEPT. 16, 1877—POWER OF THE WORD.

SCRIPTURE—ACTS 19: 17-28.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For the word of God is quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword."—Heb. 4: 12.

TOPIC—The Sword of the Sirit.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

The name of Jesus was magnified. People ceased to speak of it deridingly—they did not know what the consequences might be. Many who had spoken "evil of that way" no doubt began to be cautious, not daring to oppose this mysterious power. As in the case of the judgment upon Ananias and Sapphira, "of the rest durst no man join himself unto them, but the people magnified them." The exorcists were taught a lesson—the people were taught the truth. It was the name of Jesus that was magnified—not that of Paul. Even the evil spirit put the one above the other. Happy is the man whose evangelistic work is recognized, not as his but as his Master's. Man's work is lightly esteemed by men—but they bow before the work of the Spirit.

The Commission 21, 22.—After these things were ended. The public demonstrations, and not the influence that gave rise to them. The "word" still, most probably, continued to grow. He purposed in the spirit, etc. Whether that "purpose" was the result of a revelation by the Spirit, or whether it simply represented his own inclinings the wording does not permit us to know. Toward these places his heart and his thoughts were turning. The first was his mission field in Macedonia and Achaia. The length of time that had elapsed since he had established the churches in those districts, and the rumors that had come to him of immoralities, practiced specially by the one at Corinth, had begotten in him a strong desire to revisit them, and grave concern for the future of at least that one.

The second place be desired to visit was Jerusalem. The occasion of his intention to go to Jerusalem was, probably, as before, to be present at some feast, to give a report of his labors, and to carry thither the collections for the poor that he had received from the churches to which he had been ministering: 1 Cor. 16: 1-4. But beyond these was another city—a remoter field than any he had yet visited. That was Rome. He purposed in his heart to go there. He saw in it a strategetic point. Rome ruled the world, and if Rome were only right how much her influence would do for his cause! He did go, but oh, how differently from what he expected! He intended to go to deliver its inhabitants from spiritual bondage, but went there in outward bonds himself.

The Commotion (23-28).—The tumult that was fomented by Demetrius is too vividly and simply told to need much exposition. There are a few things only to which the the teacher's attention need be called. First: The shrines. They were miniature models of the temple either in wood, silver or gold. They were used in processions, on journeys, and were worshipped in the household. Inasmuch as the worship of Diana extended all through Asia, and even farther, the manufacture of these small shrines were indeed a profitable business. Few persons came to Ephesus without carrying home one of these shrines as a memorial. Second: Demetrius' involuntary testimony to the greatness of Paul's work. "Almost throughout all Asia this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people." He averred that on account of it not only was their craft in danger, but also that the great temple of Diana, reckoned then among the seven wonders of the world, was likely to become despised, and her own magnificence destroyed. Demetrius, though animated by unworthy motives, yet saw clearly that Paul's religion could not go on growing without destroying that of Diana. It was not like the introduction of a new God, room for which could have been made without misgiving. These who became disciples of this new deity abjured all other gods, and even declared them to be no gods at all. Demetrius had good reason to believe what he declared. Third: The character of Paul's preaching. He had declared, most likely, however, without specially mentioning Diana, "that they be no gods that are made with hands." The intense prepossession of the people in favor of this goddess had not deterred him from preaching very plain truths.

And, lastly, he awakens their fear, for they were actually in danger of being "called in question for the day's uproar," for however great were the privileges allowed to such an ancient and loyal city by the Romans, they were liable to have them all forfeited by permitting such a tumult so dangerous to the public peace. Under this method of treatment the mob that had been roaring like a lion was dismissed as meek as a lamb. It is a great deal easier to get up a tumult than to allay one. Considering his purpose merely, the actions of Demetrius were admirable, but the complete mastery of that excited multitude by the town clerk was a far finer sight. In him Demetrius had more than met his match. The mob dispersed without having accomplished anything that Demetrius had intended.

"A Great Man in a Great Book."

SYSTEMATIC THEOLOGY,

By Miner Raymond, D.D.,

Professor in Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.

TWO VOLUMES.

Royal 8vo. Cloth, Per Vol. $3.00.

20 per cent. Discount to Preachers.

A long-felt need has been supplied—a standard of Arminian theology written by an American Methodist. Watson's Institutes served the church well for a half a century; but the style was heavy, and many topics were not discussed that have grown of late to great importance. This work, when complete, will be worthy a place beside that of Edwards, Finney, or Hodge. There are a few features of Dr. Raymond's method that attracted our special attention: 1. His summary treatment of theories; 2. His submission of every view, first of all, to the Scripture text; 3. His hasty dismissal of some points long since settled beyond controversy; 4. His respectful bearing toward opponents. It ought to be read by all who are in danger of falling into the looseness of New England divines. The publishers have done their work admirably.—S. S. Encampment Journal.

The Western Book Concern has published Dr. Miner Raymond's work on "Systematic Theology," in two portly volumes, with handsome type and on good paper. The work will command attention without any help from us; it will be read by our thoughtful ministers, and its place will be settled by the carefully matured opinion of the church. The subject is of such gravity that we should be ashamed to attempt rushing the Methodist public to a decision, or to pronounce ex cathedra in favor of or against the book. The author is a professor of systematic theology, of age and reputation. Let his book be carefully studied; if it renders Whatson's Institutes unnecessary, let us adopt the new work. So grave a matter requires time and agreeing witnesses, and editors have no function therein except to place the new book fairly before the church.—The Methodist, New York.

Relief Without a Doctor.

Though we would by no means be understood as deprecating, but rather as recommending, professional aid in disease, there are multitudes of instances when it is neither necessary or easy to obtain. A family provided with a comprehensive household specific like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is possessed of a medicinal resource adequate to most emergencies in which medical advice would be otherwise needful. That sterling tonic and corrective invariably remedies, and is authoritatively recommended for debility, indigestion, liver disorder, an irregular habit of body, urinary and uterine troubles, incipient rheumatism and gout, and many other ailments of frequent occurrence. It eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers, relieves mental despondency, checks premature decay, and invigorates the nervous and muscular tissues. Sleep, digestion and appetite are promoted by it, and it is extremely useful in overcoming the effects of exhaustion and exposure.

MOODY: His Words, Work and Workers.

EDITED BY REV. W. H. DANIELS, M. A.

With an Introduction by Rev. Chas. H. Fowler, DD., LL.D.

Of the many volumes called out by the wonderful career of Messrs. MOODY AND SANKEY, all have hitherto been more or less fragmentary, and without systematic arrangement. In the above work the design has been to bring within the compass of a single volume of generous size THE MAN HIMSELF: A full and Systematic Presentation of his Bible Doctrines: An account of his most prominent CO-WORKERS: and a chapter on that most marvelous movement in modern evangelism, THE GOSPEL TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

In order to make the volume fresh and complete, Mr. Daniels, who edits this work, has made a visit to Boston, to learn, by personal observation, as he has done in the case of the Moody and Sankey revivals in other great cities on both sides of the Atlantic, the progress of the revival work there.

This volume contains 552 pages, crown octavo, including twelve full-page illustrations; is elegantly printed on fine paper; is handsomely bound; and is not only a book of the widest and most permanent interest and value of any yet published in this line, but is also the

A Comprehensive and Critical History of all the Books of the Bible; A History of all the Religious Denominations of the World, and the various Sects, both ancient and modern; a History of the Translation of the English Bible; Chronological and other valuable Tables, designed to promote and facilitate the Study of the Sacred Scriptures; Bible Analysis; Description of the Animals, Birds, Insects, Trees, Plants and Fruits mentioned in the Bible; Oriental Habits and Usages; the Forty-years Wanderings in the Wilderness; the Public Worship of the Jews; Idols and Idolatry of the Ancients; Countries and Nations mentioned in the Bible; the Holy Land; the City of Jerusalem and its Environs; Historical Connection between the Old and New Testaments; Bible Prophecies and their Fulfillments; Missionary Travels of the Apostle Paul, etc., etc., all of which has been compiled especially for this Edition from the Works of the most renowned Evangelical Scholars, making a complete and popular Encyclopedia of Biblical Knowledge.

EMBELLISHED WITH OVER 1,000 FINE SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATIONS AND MAPS.

WE CLAIM FOR OUR NEW ILLUSTRATED FAMILY BIBLE that it is superior to any edition heretofore published in the following points:—

It is printed on better paper, from larger, clearer type, is more profusely and beautifully illustrated, more substantially and handsomely bound, and contains a larger amount and greater variety of extra matter in aid of Bible Study. The following are some of its features:—

1. The Old and New Testaments of Apocrypha, and Psalms in Meter, and a complete Dictionary of the Bible.
2. Table of Contents of the Old and New Testaments, so arranged that any subject or occurrence mentioned in the Bible can be readily referred to.
3. A complete Concordance, by which any passage can be found if any principal word in it be known.
4. Nearly One Hundred Thousand Marginal References and Readings, arranged in the center of the page.
5. More than 1,000 fine Scripture Illustrations, accurately showing the Manners and Customs of the Period, Biblical Antiquities and Scenery, Natural History, etc.
6. History of the existing Religious Denominations in the world, and the various sects, both Ancient and Modern.
7. A History of the Translation of the Bible; and Chronology of the Books of the New Testament, with the Times and Places at which they were written. A History of the Books of the Bible by Wm. Smith, L.L.D.
8. Names and Order of all the Books of the Old and New Testaments, and the Apocrypha, with the number of their chapters.
9. An Index, giving an account of the most remarkable passages in the Old and New Testaments.
10. The Parables, Miracles, and Discourses of Christ, in Chronological order; Tables, and Chronology of the Saviour's Life.
11. A Harmony of the Four Gospels, and Analysis of the Old and New Testaments.
12. Tables showing at a glance how the Patriarchs succeeded each other, and, consequently, how easy it was to hand down from Adam to Isaac (a period of 2,128 years) the particulars of the Creation and Fall of Man.
13. An Alphabetical Table of the Proper Names in the Old and New Testaments, with their meaning or signification in the original languages, and a plan showing how to read the Bible most profitably in one year's time.
14. Description of Judea and Palestine, with a Table of the remarkable Mountains and Rivers mentioned in the Bible.
15. Tables of Scripture Weights and Measures, with an Appendix, containing the method of calculating its Measure of Surface; a Table of the Coins of the Bible, with their value brought down to the American standard, illustrated with fac-similes.
16. Instances of Prophecy compared with History; Symbolical Language used by Poets and Prophets; Bible Aids for Social and Private Prayer; the Jewish Calendar, with corresponding dates of the Christian Calendar.
17. A beautiful Lithographic Family Record; Illustrated pages of the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments; a very elegant and unique Marriage Certificate; and Photographic Albums for Sixteen Portraits.
18. A Table of Kindred and Affinities, wherein those related are forbidden by the Scriptures to marry together; a Table showing how the earth was peopled by the descendants of Noah; a Table of Time, and the Offices and Conditions of Men.
19. A Chronological Table, showing the principal events of Jewish and contemporaneous History, from the the Creation of the World; a large number of other Chronological and valuable tables.

NELSON & PHILLIPS, Lock Box "B," New Orleans.

A Curious Piece of Poetry.

The initial capital letters spell "My boast is in the glorious Cross of Christ," and the words in SMALL CAPITALS, when read from the top to the bottom, and from the bottom to the top, make the Lord's Prayer.

Make known thy Gospel truths, OUR heavenly King;
Yield as thy grace, dear FATHER, from above;
Bless us with hearts WHICH feelingly can sing
Our life thou ART for EVER, God of love.
Assuage our griefs IN love FOR Christ, we pray,
Since the bright Prince of HEAVEN and GLORY died.
Took all our shame, and HALLOWED THE display.
In first BE-ing man, AND then being crucified,
Stupendous God! THY grace and POWER make known,
In Jesus' NAME let all THE world rejoice;
New labors in THY heavenly KINGDOM own.
That blessed KINGDOM, for thy saints THE choice.
How vile to COME to thee, IS all our cry,
Enemies to THY self, and all that's THINE;
Graceless our WILL, our lives FOR vanity,
Loathing thy truths, BE-ing EVIL in design.
O, God! thy will be DONE FROM earth to heaven;
Reclining on the Gospel let us live;
In EARTH from sins DELIVER-ed and forgiven,
Oh! AS thyself, BUT teach us to forgive.
Unless IT'S power TEMPTATION doth destroy,
Sure IS our fall into the depths OF woe;
Carnal IN mind, we've NOT a glimpse of joy;
Raised against HEAVEN IN US no hope can flow.
O GIVE us grace and LEAD us on thy way;
Shine on US with thy love and give US peace;
Self and THIS sin which rise AGAINST us slay;
Oh! grant each DAY our TRESPASS-es may cease.
Forgive OUR evil deeds THAT oft we do,
Convince us DAILY of THEM to our shame;
Help us with heavenly BREAD; FORGIVE us our
Repentant lusts; AND WE adore thy name,
In thy FORGIVE-ness WE AS saints can die,
Since, for US and our TRESPASSES so high,
Thy Son, OUR Savior, bled on Cavalry.

A Bad Cat.

Let me tell you what this cat did.

She actually clambered up to the top of a narrow fence, with the object of getting at a blackbird's nest, when it was full of helpless little birds that could not fly away or help themselves. Just imagine the state the whole family must have been thrown into! One moment, safe and comfortable, and [illegible] there could be danger anywhere—for what can seem safer [illegible] comfortable than a little, [illegible] nest full of birds!—and [illegible], I suppose, very [illegible] we should, if while sitting [illegible] the fire, a large, [illegible] came and glared [illegible] window.

[illegible] noble hen flew out of [illegible] almost within reach, in [illegible] to entreat her to leave [illegible] unharmed, uttering [illegible] screams, which only [illegible] a bad cat could be [illegible] to resist. But I am [illegible] say this particularly bad [illegible] sneered at her.

[illegible] dashed the cock, uttering [illegible] of vague defiance [illegible] flying round and round [illegible] actually every now [illegible] settling just before her on [illegible] being unable to [illegible] at him, because the [illegible] so narrow she would [illegible] her balance and tumbled [illegible] done so. At last the [illegible] (of which, indeed, [illegible] no want before) and [illegible] settled himself [illegible] back, and pecking [illegible] violently with his [illegible].

[illegible] have been either [illegible] astonished. She [illegible] he was [illegible] feel him [illegible] too. She [illegible] and tried [illegible] nothing to [illegible] the clever black- [illegible] fixed on her [illegible] and [illegible] till she [illegible] nothing left [illegible] and run away [illegible] the victorious [illegible] perched upon [illegible] most beautiful [illegible] triumph that [illegible] hen flew [illegible]

AMES' PORTABLE ENGINES.—2,200 IN USE. From the uniform satisfaction our Engines have given, we feel gratified that we have accomplished our aim—to give the best, strongest and most perfect Engine in the American market.

We have received and are constantly receiving the most flattering testimonials of their utility as regards their power, simplicity, and of the general good workmanship in their construction, and we hare challenge other manufacturers to build an Engine superior to our own.

All Engines made on separate bed-plate, so they can be used as Stationary Engines.

Improved Eagle Cotton Gins,

PRICES REDUCED TO $4 A SAW.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best-built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinder of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only ten-inch cylinders, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in large-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

The bale of cotton which received the grand prize at St. Louis, and has won so many thousands of dollars at numerous fairs, was ginned on the Eagle Cotton Gin.

Prices Have Been Greatly Reduced, to $4 a Saw.

Victor Sugar Mills
—AND—
Cook's Evaporators,

Purchasers of machinery of our manufacture are notified that WM. L. CUSHING, No. 61 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., is our only authorized agent in that city, and no other house is authorized to sell our celebrated Victor Cane Mills, Cook Evaporators, Engines and other machinery of our make.

The Victor Cane Mills are the only ones suitable for Southern sugar cane and the Cook Evaporators the only successful ones for making sugar.

Cane growers can't afford to risk crops with light, unfinished mills, liable to break in the middle of the season; they can't afford to waste crops with mills that don't press out all the juice, or evaporators that make sugar unfit for market, and too little in proportion to the labor and fuel they require.

In purchasing the Victor Cane Mill and Cook Evaporator you get perfect sugar machinery and will have no drawbacks to contend with. Mr. Cushing is authorized to make terms and liberal discount to merchants.

BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO.

STEDMAN'S
IMPROVED SELF-SUPPORTING
NEWELL SCREW
COTTON PRESS.

Now the Most Convenient, Speedy and Reliable Screw Press in Use.

The Advantages Secured in this Press will Commend it to the favor of every one.

1. It is so very simple in its workings and construction that any one can operate it, and there is no necessity for sending a mechanic a long distance to set it up.

2. It is all complete, with all the woodwork.

3. It may be used either as a Portable or Stationary Press.

4. The horse power being directly applied to the Screw, there is no necessity for Cog Wheels or Gearing of any kind, thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and liability to get out of order.

5. The horses occupy the room under the platform, which is less available for any other purpose, leaving the space surrounding the platform entirely clear for baling Cotton, so as to be convenient to the Press, or for storing purposes. And when it is desirable to make a covering for the Press, the same roof which covers the Press will cover the horse-walk also.

6. The Cotton is put into the Press and taken out at about the same point, making a great convenience for the operators, as they have all their work on the same floor. And the bales are already at a convenient elevation for loading in a wagon or storing away.

7. These Presses never require any repairs; after using for thirty years they are as good as when new.

8. More Cotton can be put into the Press at a time than in any other Press, making a greater saving.

9. No Press in use puts so much weight in so small a bale. The bales, as they come from these Presses, are about square at the ends; whereas from most other Presses they are from twelve to fifteen inches higher than they are wide, making them very bulky, without a corresponding weight, while their shape makes them extremely inconvenient to handle.

10. The character of this Press is such that it is alike suited to a large or small operating force. One man and a boy can operate it to good advantage, or half a dozen may be fully employed.

11. There are no patents on this Press, except those held by STEDMAN & CO.; hence those who secure the right to these Presses will not be liable to pay a second fee.

The man tramping has his head and shoulders out of the Press all the time. The top Follower, or Platten, is hinged at each end; being made in two parts, it is thrown open allowing the top of the box to be used for putting in Cotton. No time is lost with this Press, as the Cotton is tramped in while the Follower is run down. The advantage to those who operate the Press of having head and shoulders above the top of the Press, while tramping the Cotton, instead of commencing at the bottom, after the Follower is down, will commend it to all. We use the best of oak for the Straining Beams, the Box doors are made of yellow pine or ash, and are framed together entirely with bolts, avoiding mortises and tenons, iron plates are used at all joints where any strain comes.

DURABILITY.

STEDMAN & CO., the manufacturers of the Improved Self-Supporting Newell Screw Press, have been engaged in the manufacture of Presses for 39 years. The application of the Screw for Pressing Cotton was the original invention of the late Dr. Thomas Newall, of Grand Gulf, Miss., Over 30 years ago Mr. Stedman made for Dr. Newell a Cast Iron Screw; this Screw was in constant use by Dr. Newell as a Horse Power Press for 15 years, during which time he pressed over 900 Bales of Cotton. The old reliable Newell Screw, since its invention, has been in constant use by the largest Planters, and has always been the only reliable Press in use, never requiring any repairs. The improvements which STEDMAN & CO. now offer on the old and reliable Newell Screw are such as to add to its already good qualities convenience of operating and speed.

With our improvements we do away with the three great objections to the old-style Newell Screw Presses; First, we reduce the cost one half. Second, takes up less room. Third, requires no heavy frame work in building to support the Press, and the heavy corner posts of the Press are replaced by Iron Rods. This is strictly a Portable Press, and can be moved from place to place at small cost, and at the same time it answers fully the place of the old-style Stationary Press.

It takes 8 feet less Screw to work this Press, with a ten foot Cotton Box, than any Revolving Press known, thus saving 86 revolutions in making each bale, which, providing the pitch of the Screw is 2 inches, as in all Revolving Presses, means 1,80 feet of travel saved to the mule each bale, or some 18 miles in making 40 bales. Price, Horse Power Press, complete, with wood work......$200

CABINET ORGANS,
EXCELLING WHAT HAS PREVIOUSLY BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN POWER, PURITY AND DELICACY OF TONES.

THE LIST CABINET ORGAN

(Style No. 501.—Five Octavo; Seven Sets of Reeds of Two and a Half Octaves each, and One Set of One Octave; Fifteen Stops; New Scale of Reed-Board, Reeds and Actions, with Ventrillo Chest and other Improvements, patented 1876-7.

Throughout.—Full Organ, (knee stop.) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up.) knee Swell, I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Franz Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The origin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Franz Liszt, in which full sonorous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of the great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry out and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new instrument was seen and tested by a number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Courier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class," evincing "extraordinary progress." After its receipt and trial, Dr. Franz Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. For sale by all druggists and country stores.

The Soul's Desire.

Oh, to be calmly patient,
When daily cares perplex!
Casting on Christ our burdens,
Then they no longer vex.
Telling them all to Jesus,
However great or small,
Knowing his ear is ever
Open to each and all.

Oh, to be more in earnest!
For the night is creeping on,
And shadows dark are falling—
Soon will the day be gone;
E'en now the sun is setting;
God grant we may not wait,
But haste us to the rescue,
Lest we should be too late!

Oh, to be always working
Throughout the "little while!"
Waiting His returning,
And His expected smile,
These words of sweetest welcome
Will greet each "faithful" one;
Into his joy we'll enter,
Our work forever done.

Oh, to be daily growing
More like our blessed Lord,
Changed into his image
By contact with his Word!
Seeing Him there reflected
From morning until night,
May Jesus fill our vision,
And be our heart's delight!

Soon we shall be with Jesus,
Yea, see Him face to face,
And find Him all the glory
Of heaven's most holy place.
And we shall share His glory
In those bright courts above,
And bask ourselves for ever
In the sunshine of his love!

Elements of Ministerial Success.

BY T. EDW. MADDEN.

Success is a desirable achievement. That is the ultimate aim of every thinking mind. To accomplish the undertaking in hand, is the object of him who aspires to be great or noble. Every [illegible] is intended to be a success [illegible] possible. As far as the elements of success go, so [illegible] thoughts apply to the [illegible] as well as to every other [illegible]. That there are grand [illegible] the ministry, as well as [illegible], none will deny. [illegible] failures arise from human [illegible]. There is no such thing as [illegible] the part of God. What [illegible] done well, and what He [illegible] not done because it [illegible] do it. [illegible] who fail, then [illegible] who succeed. They [illegible] as well as the belief of a falsehood, in relation to spiritual things, will ruin any man's spiritual nature so as to completely wreck his eternal salvation and defeat all his efforts in this life. He is a traitor to his own best interests who doubts. The Minister of Christ must have a whole-souled faith in the work he is doing, not for men, but for God. What he believes he must believe wholly without reserve; wherefore the only perfect and satisfying object of his faith should be God. Completeness, boundlessness, are indispensible to faith. The Minister of Christ must have this faith. He may not live to see his fondest expectations realized, but that does not lessen his responsibility to perform the work to the best of his ability, aided by the Holy Spirit. His faith must step beyond the possibilities of sight, and grasp the probabilities of the future. When Archimides was asked: "In what does a constant mind differ from an inconstant?" he replied, "Chiefly in Good Hope." So we say in regard to the faith of Christ's minister. It must excel chiefly by having in it a large share of hope.

2. CHRISTLY AMBITION AS AN INCENTIVE. All ambition is not sin, nor is it sinful to be ambitions. No man ever succeeded who had no ambition. God has implanted in the breast of all creation an eager desire for superiority. Has He not given this desire to those whom He has called to the highest office in the world? Most assuredly he has. How strong an impulse this desire becomes when Christ takes hold of a man's soul, and the whole of his powers are consecrated to one work. The mighty motive power of the Cross gives a man an impetus predicable of no other force in the universe. How holy that life becomes when thus indued with power from on high. The minister of the Cross thus supported cannot fail. Success is assured him, and knowing this he goes forth to certain victory.

Pity makes the true minister of our Lord Jesus Christ ambitious. As he looks at the harvest and reflects on the small number who are laborers, he feels excited to put forth every effort to save the greatest number. He who is possessed of a kindred spirit with the Man of Sorrows weeps as he looks over the vast domain of sin, and behold multitudes running to do evil. Snatching the blood-stained banner of the Cross, heedless of everything else, he goes forth unfurling it to the breeze of heaven, that perchance on it, as on the serpent of old, some one may look and be saved. Say you there is no need of such an incentive as this? Look at the price paid for the world's redemption. Look at the unfolding of the grand scheme of salvation. Look within and see the effects ot redemption on your own soul, and swear anew an eternal fidelity to Jesus and you cannot fail. With such an incitant as the Cross of Christ inspires, he who needs any other better get out of the ministry, if this is not enough to stimulate him to the exhibition of a matchless zeal.

3. COURAGE TO PAY CHRIST'S PRICE FOR SUCCESS. "I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake." Here was the price demanded of Paul. He paid the price and succeeded. To-day he is held up before the world as the human pattern of ministerial excellence. But Paul paid the price. It took courage to do this. Poor human nature doubtless shrunk from all this even "for Christ's sake." But Paul counted the cost. To-day the unconverted know not what to make of the zeal of sanctified laborers in Christ's vineyard. It is a mystery solvable only by experience. The materialist is not able to grasp the possibilities of faith, and of course knows nothing of the power of spiritual forces. Only what is tangible is satisfactory to him. There is a great deal of materialism in the world, but the power of the cross is more than a match for the man who simply says, I have no faith. It takes courage to put your trust in spiritual force entirely. But this is the secret spring that operates on all ministerial success. He who works for Christ finds that he is not a sinecurist. It requires courage to work in an ever present material world with spiritual forces little understood and basely maligned. Yet this is the work of the minister. He works through want, care, anxiety, self-denial, sacrifice, sorrow, death like his master. He who preaches Christ crucified must himself be ready for crucifixion. "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me," is not without significance. It shows the greatness of the sacrifice you are called to make. Not a part but the whole, and it must be acceded [illegible] Then if you mourn over your [illegible] of success to-day, look to see [illegible] much you have been paying to [illegible] Christ has put a value [illegible] having in the [illegible] would secure [illegible] possessions, the [illegible] that [illegible] to seek the [illegible] you must be willing to pay the price. Here comes the struggle. Christ demands all our life; all our talents; all our intellectual strength, with all its possibility of development and growth; all the sweetness of temper that we possess, that we may "win souls;" all our social influence and its power for good; all our time lest we fail for want of it to make due preparation for the work to which he has called us; all the faith we can exercise with its growth and increasing capacity for exercise and enlargement; all we are or ever hope or expect to be; all these to the fullest extent and limitation; then He will use us for His glory as he sees fit and thinks best. Here is the price.

If you feel that you have failed, look well to the price of success. Pay it with all the unreserved powers of your soul and body, and then you will not cry out for leanness, or hunger for souls in vain. It will cost you everything, and you must pay everything, or fail. It cost the Master tears, loneliness, midnight vigils, want of human sympathy, calumny, betrayal, death. If you are not willing to be misunderstood, slandered, abused, and slain, then do not stand in the way of, or say unkind things of those who do not count their life dear unto them, so that they may win Christ, and who by grace are willing to pay even Christ's price that they may succeed.

Free Homesteads in Texas.

When Texas joined the Union it reserved its public lands. They do not as in all other States and Territories without exception, belong to the United States.

Perhaps few immigrants know that they are entitled to locate upon and own these lands. Such is the law. Following is the statute law on this point:

"To every head of a family who has not a homestead there shall be donated one hundred and sixty acres of land out of the public domain, upon the condition that he will select, locate and occupy the same for three years, and pay the office fees on the same. To all single men, twenty-one years of age, there shall be donated eighty acres of land out of the public domain, upon the same terms and conditions as are imposed upon the head of a family."

A homestead cannot be seized for debt. Following is section 2 of the law exempting personal property from the seizure by the sheriff or constable:

"There shall also be reserved to every family in this State, free and exempt from force sale or debts the following property: All household and kitchen furniture; all implements of husbandry; and tools and apparatus belonging to any trade or profession, and all books belonging to private or public libraries; five milch cows and calves; two yoke of oxen; two horses and one wagon; one carriage or buggy; one gun; twenty hogs; twenty head of sheep; and all provisions and forage on hand for home consumption; all saddles, bridles, and harness necessary for the use of the family; and to every citizen not a head of a family one horse, bridle and saddle, all wearing apparel, all tools, apparatus and books belonging to his private library."

These are wise and wholesome laws. They keep the poor from being turned out of doors and stripped of all he has.

It will be seen that any immigrant arriving in Texas, or any one here now, can help himself to one hundred and sixty acres of land if he is the head of a family, and his son eighty, where he can find any belonging to the State of Texas. This is quite enough to gave any one a good start. With this nucleus other acres can be added without limit.

We wish the above was shown to thousands upon thousands of poor men in the older States who are wearing their lives away upon rented, worn out fields with no prospects of doing aught more than eking a miserable existence.—Houston Age.

At Once.

"How long does it take to be converted?" said a young man to his father.

"How long," asked his father, "does it take the judge to discharge the prisoner when the jury have brought him in not guilty?"

"Only a minute."

"When a sinner is convinced that he is a sinner, and is sorry for it; when he desires forgiveness and deliverance from sin, and believes that Christ is able and willing to save him, he can be converted as speedily as the prisoner can be discharged by the judge. It does not take God a long time to discharge a penitent soul from the condemnation and power of sin."

The officers of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad say that they have not presented any bills to the government for the transportation of troops from the South as has been erroneously reported.

Perpetual Forces.

If we were truly to take account of stock before the last Court of Appeals, that were an inventory! What are my resources? "Our stock in life, our real estate, is that amount of thought which we have had," and which we have applied, and so domesticated. The ground we have thus created is forever a fund for new thoughts. A few moral maxims confirmed by much experience would stand high on the list, constituting a supreme prudence. Then the knowledge unutterable of our private strength, of where it lies, of its accesses and facilitations, and of its obstructions. My conviction of principles, that is great part of my possessions. Certain thoughts, certain observations, long familiar to me in night-watches and daylights, would be my capital if I removed to Spain or China, or, by stranger translation, to the planet Jupiter or Mars, or to new spiritual societies.

Every valuable persons who joins in any enterprise, is it a piece of industry, or the founding of a colony or a college, the reform of some public abuse, or some effort of patriotism,—what he chiefly brings, all he rings, is not his land or his money or body's strength, but his thoughts, his ways of classifying and seeing things, his method. And thus with every one a new power. In proportion to the depth of the insight is the power and reach of the kingdom he controls.

It would be easy to awake wonder by sketching the performance of each of these mental forces, as of the diving-bell of the Memory which descends into the deeps of our past and oldest experience, and brings up every lost jewel; or of the Fancy, which sends up its gay balloon aloft into the sky to catch every tint and gleam of romance; of the Imagination, which turns every dull fact into pictures and poetry, by making it an emblem of a thought. What a power, when, combined with the analyzing understanding, it makes Eloquence, the art of compelling belief, the art of making people's hearts dance to his pipe! And not less method, patience, self-trust, perseverance, love, desire of knowledge, the passion for truth. These are the angels that take us by the hand, these our immortal, invulnerable guardians. By their strength we are strong, and on the signal occasions in our career their inspirations flow to us, and make the simple wise, the weak able, and the timid brave, make the selfish and protected and tenderly bred person strong for his duty, wise in counsel, skilful in action, competent to rule, willing to obey.

I delight in tracing these wonderful powers, the electricity and gravity of the human world. The power of persistence, of enduring defeat, and of gaining victory by defeats, is one of these forces which never loses its charm. The power of a man increases steadily by continuance in one direction. He becomes acquainted with the resistances, and with his own tools; increases his skill and strength, and learns the favorable moments and favorable accidents. He is his own apprentice, and more time gives a great addition of power, just as a falling body acquires momentum with every foot of the fall. How we prize a good continuer, I knew a manufacturer who found his property invested in chemical works, which were depreciating in value. He undertook the charge of them himself, began at the beginning, learned chemistry, and acquainted himself with all the conditions of the manufacture. His friends dissuaded him, advised him to give up the work, which was not suited to the country. Why throw good money after bad? But he persisted, and after many years succeeded in his production of the right article for commerce, brought up the stock of his mills to par, and then sold out his interest, having accomplished the reform that was required.

In each the talent is the perception of an order and series in that department he deals with,—of an order and series which pre-existed in nature, and which this mind sees and conforms to. The geometer shows us the true order in figures; the painter, in laws of color; the dancer in grace. Bonaparte, with his celerity of combination, mute, unfathomable, reading the geography of Europe as if his eyes were telescopes; his will an immense battery, discharging irresistible volleys of power always at the right point in the right time.

There was a story in the journal of a poor prisoner in a Western police court who was told he might be released if he would pay his fine. He had no money, he had no friends, but he took his flute out of his pocket, and began to play, to the surprise and, as it proved, to the delight of all the company; the jurors waked up; the sheriff forgot his duty, the judge himself beat time, and the prisoner was by general consent of court and officers allowed to go his way without any money. And I suppose if he could have played loud enough we here should have beat time, and the whole population of the globe would beat time, and consent that he should go without his fine.

I knew a stupid young farmer, churlish, living only for his gains, and with whom the only intercourse you could have was to buy what he had to sell. One day I found his little boy of four years dragging about after him the prettiest little wooden cart, so neatly built, and with decorations, too, and learned that Papa had made it; that hidden deep in that thick skull was this gentle art and taste, which the little fingers and caresses of his son had the power to draw out into day; he was no peasant after all. So near to us is the flowering of fine art in the rudest population. See in a circle of school-girls one with no beauty, no special vivacity, but she can so recite her adventures that she is never alone, but at night or at morning, wherever she sits, the inevitable circle gathers round her, willing prisoners of, that wonderful memory and fancy and spirit of life. Would you know where to find her? Listen for the laughter, follow the cheerful hum, see where is the rapt attention, and a pretty crowd all bright with one electricity; there in the centre of followship and joy is Scheherazade again.

See how rich life is; rich in private talents, each of which charms us in turn and seems the best. If we hear music, we give up all to that; if we fall in with a cricket-club, and see the game masterly played, the best player is the first of men; if we go to the regatta, we forget the bowler for the stroke oar; and when the soldier comes home from the fight, he fills all eyes. But the soldier has the same admiration of the great parliamentary debater. And poetry and literature are disdainful of all these claims beside their own. It seems as if the story were gospel truth, of the boy who thought in turn each one of the four seasons the best, and each of the three hundred and sixty-five days in the year the crowner.

The sensibility is all. Every one knows what are the effects of music to put people in gay or mournful or martial mood. But these are effects on dull subjects, and only the hint of its power on a keener sense. It is a stroke on a loose or tense cord. The story of Orpheus, of Arion, ot the Arabian minstrel, are not fables, but experiments on the same iron at white heat.

By this wondrous susceptibility to all the impressions of Nature the man finds himself the receptacle of celestial thoughts, of happy relations to all men. The imagination enriches him, as if there were no other; the memory opens all her cabinets and archives; Science her length and breadth, Poetry her splendor and joy, and the august circles of eternal Law.

These are means and stairs for new ascensions of the mind. But they are nowise impoverished for any other mind, not tarnished, not breathed upon, for the mighty Intellect did not stoop to him and become property, but he rose to it and followed its circuits. "It is ours while we use it, it is not ours when we do not use it."

And so, one step higher, when he comes into the realm of sentiment and will. He sees the grandeur of justice, the victory of love, the eternity that belongs to all moral nature. He does not then invent his sentiment or his act, but obeys a pre-existing right which he sees. We arrive at virtue by taking its direction instead of imposing ours.—Ralph Waldo Emerson in North American Review.

Female Influence.

The influence wielded by woman is one of the many blessings that surround the pathway of man, leading him in the road to honor, virtue and happiness, guarding his conduct and ruling his actions, moulding his character and shaping his destiny for good or evil. Where is it that she does not control the obdurate heart of man? Where is the man who is so degraded, so lost to every noble quality of the heart, that he cannot be moved by the sweet smile of a good woman, who can touch the sympathetic chords of the human heart, and cause it to vibrate to the hidden depths of the soul? How many a gay and thoughtless youth has been reclaimed from the haunts of vice by the sweet, persuasive voice of this guardian angel of man, who is ever removing the thorns from life's dreary pathway with her own willing and devoted hands! When will we ever learn to prize female affection?

"Oh, what joys from woman spring!
Source of bliss and purest peace!
Eden could no comfort bring
Till fair woman showed her face."

Just permit your imagination for one moment to be carried back to the old days of the Roman Republic, and view the state of the brave and proud patrician, Coriolanus, when banished from the home of his honored ancestors and found refuge among the fierce and barbarous Volscians, and when he had returned, and was encamped around the walls of the "eternal city" with those bloodthirsty and revengeful hordes, ready to wreak vengeance upon the inhabitants of that devoted city whose anticipated doom was almost sealed. After the deputies were sent to entreat him to spare their city, their homes, their wives and their children, they were dismissed with haughtiness, and their proposals treated even with contempt. But when the mother, wife and the children of Coriolanus were sent to intercede with him, and his mother began to reproach him for his cruelty toward his countrymen, how soon his proud heart began to soften under her gentle supplications, and his sad and bitter exclamation, "Mother, I yield! you have saved Rome, but you have destroyed your son." Ah, see what that mother, by her persuasive eloquence, accomplished; even that which the force and valor of the Roman legions could not do!

Look again at the beautiful and accomplished, but wicked, Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, whose cunning wiles and fascinating graces gained complete sway over the heart and mind of that stern and valiant warrior, Mark Antony, that noble triumvir, whose prowess in arms had hitherto been almost invincible, until he came in contact with that dazzling but dangerous beauty, whose presence was as poisonous as the shades of the deadly upas. We see the sceptre of his glory depart; the strong become more weak, exchanging the glory and the hardships of the tented field for the altar of amatory bliss, and becomes a devotee at the shrine of her peerless beauty. He became a victim to the "conquering power" of the Cæsars, and died a lamentable and ignoble death by suicide.

When languishing on a bed of sickness, who is it that brings consolation to the desponding mind? Who throws a ray of hallowed sweetness over the aching brow, bidding the heart take renewed courage and in pointing the soul to brighter hopes and nobler anticipations? Where is a more peerless gem to be found in all the wide domains of earth?

"Not Temple's vale nor Eden's bower
Were graced with so divine a flower."

While virtue, modesty, cheerfulness and true dignity—crown jewels of the female heart—adorn the walks of noble and devoted women, ever ready and willing to share alike our joys and sorrows; rejoices in our prosperity, and is contented even in adversity. Such are the noble charms of female influence; and well may we exclaim, in the language of Campbell—

"And say, without our hopes, without our fears,
Without the home that plighted love endears,
Without the smile from partial beauty won,
Oh! what were man?—a world without a sun.
Till Hymen brought his love-delighted hour—
There dwelt no joy in Eden's rosy bower.
* * * * * * * * *
Still slowly passed the melancholy day,
And still the stranger wist not where to stray.
The world was sad! the garden was a wild!
And man, the hermit, sighed till woman smiled."

Waverly Magazine.

Pre-requisites of Success.

Integrity of character and truth in the inner man are the pre-requisites of success in any calling, and especially so in the merchant. These are the attributes which never fail to command respect and win admiration. No one fails to appreciate them, and if they "do not pay" in the vulgar sense of the phrase, they bring an amount of satisfaction and peace to the owner that all the wealth of Crœsus could not yield. There is no better stock in trade than these principles; no capital goes so far or pays so well, or is so exempt from bankruptcy and loss. When known they give credit and confidence, and in the hardest of times will honor your paper in bank. They give you an unlimited capital to do business upon, and everybody will endorse your paper, and the general faith of mankind will be your guaranty that you will not fail. Let every young man, upon commencing business, look well to these indispensible elements of success, and defend them as he would the apple of his eye. If inattentive and reckless here, he will imperil everything. Bankruptcy in character is seldom repaired in an ordinary lifetime. A man may suffer in reputation and recover; not so the man who suffers in character. Be just and truthful. Let these be the ruling and predominating principles of your life, and the reward will be certain, either in the happiness they bring to your own bosom, or the success which will attend upon all your business operations in life, or both.

Married Life.

Julius Moser gives the following counsel from a wife and mother: "I try to make myself and all around me agreeable. It will not do to leave a man to himself till he comes to you, to take no pains to attract him, or to appear before him with a long face. It is not so difficult as you think, dear child, to behave to a husband so that he shall remain forever in some measure a husband. I am an old woman, but you can still do what you like; a word from you at the right time will not fail of its effect; what need have you to play the suffering virtue? The tear of a loving girl, said an old book, is like a dew-drop on a rose; but that on the cheek of a wife is a drop of poison to a husband. Try to appear cheerful and contented, and your husband will be so; and when you have made him happy, you will become so, not in appearance but in reality. The skill required is not so great. Nothing flatters a man so much as the happiness of his wife; he is always proud of himself as the source of it. As soon as you are cheerful you will be lively and alert, and every moment will afford you an opportunity to let fall an agreeable word. Your education, which gives you an immense advantage, will greatly assist you; and your sensibility will become the noblest gift that nature has bestowed on you, when it shows itself in affectionate assiduity, and stamps on every action a soft, kind and tender character, instead of wasting itself in secret repinings." This is most excellent advice, and worthy of being treasured up.

Home Conversation.

Children hunger perpetually for new ideas. They will learn with pleasure from the lips of parents what they deem it a drudgery to study in books; and even if they have the misfortune to be deprived of many educational advantages they will grow up intelligent if they enjoy in childhood the privilege of listening daily to the conversation of intelligent people. We sometimes see parents who are the life of every company they enter, dull, silent and uninteresting at home among their children. If they have not mental activity and mental stores sufficient for both, let them first use what they have for their own households. A silent home is a dull place for young people, a place from which they will escape if they can. How much useful information, on the other hand, is often given in pleasant family conversation, and what unconscious but excellent mental training in lively social argument. Cultivate to the utmost the graces of home conversation.

The labratories for women, which were established six months ago at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, are said to be successful. Some of the pupils are fitting themselves to teach. Two have made special study of some subject, for the purpose of assisting their husbands in business; others take the course as a part of their education, without definite plans for applying their knowledge; and others take some subject that will enable them to make collections at home.

American tourists have spent some $45,000,000 in Europe this season.

Two-thirds of the sheep of California perished by reason of the recent drought; about 2,500,000.

The University of the South, at Suwanee, Tennessee, has created a chair of Biology and The Relation of Science and Religion. Professor McCrady is elected to fill it.

A Southern educational convention is to be held in Atlanta, Ga., the 7th of November. It is likely to be well attended by delegations from all of the Southern States.

The Marshall (Texas) Herald says five hundred bushels of wild grapes could be gathered within a mile of that town.

There is a cheese factory close to Waco, Texas, which is said to be turning out a merchantable article of cheese, equal in every respect to the best made Northern or Western cheese.

There is only 420 square miles of anthracite coal in the whole United States. The Reading Company owns no less than one-third of the whole. Of bituminous coal land there are in America 200,000 square miles, and 8000 in Great Britain.

The Bonham (Texas) News says: Sixty-six varieties of peaches, fifty-three of apples, twenty-three of pears, thirteen of grapes, besides nectarines, oranges, lemons, figs and various other fruits and vegetables, were exhibited at the Pomological Fair in Houston. W. M. Klyce, of Paris, was the only exhibitor from this section.

The Dennison (Texas) Crescent says the two car loads of beef recently shipped to Chicago by the Refrigerator Company as an experiment, proved a success beyond the expectations of the most sanguine. The beef when examined at Chicago was found to be perfectly sweet as the day it was first put in the cars. The importance of the success of the experiment cannot be over-estimated, and we may now expect to see the refrigerator works in full blast.

The Piedmont cotton mill, near Greenville, S. C., will, by October, have 11,376 spindles, consuming twenty-two bales of cotton a day and producing daily 7500 pounds of goods. The company is free from debt, and has ample means to pay for the five hundred tons of new machinery lately purchased. It seemed a desperate and hopeless undertaking years ago. Colonel Hammett, however, by dint of hard work and perseverance obtained the capital to start with, and from a small beginning has sprung a large manufacturing company, whose prospects are as bright as those of any similar undertaking ever established in South Carolina.

A consolidation of the two leading telegraph companies of the country has finally been accomplished. 71,000 shares of the Atlantic and Pacific Company have been purchased by the Western Union at .25, to be paid for in Western Union stock at .72. This amounts in effect to the union of the companies, though they will continue nominally their separate corporations. Another agreement is that the gross earnings of the companies shall be divided between them, the Western Union to receive seven-eighths. In many cities and towns the offices of one company will be discontinued, and a general advance in rates will soon be made.

The Galveston News mentions a number of "pasture lots" in different parts of the State, the size of which is from 80,000 to over 200,000 acres: Colman, Mathias & Fulton have in Aransas, San Patricio and Nueces counties, pastures under fence, enclosing 209,428 acres; Capt. Kenedy has, to the southwest of Corpus Christi, 132,000, and Capt. King 175,000 acres. In the same vicinity other parties have, in the aggregate, 200,000 acres; and above Indianola, in Calhoun county, there are 60,000 acres belonging to different persons. In Refugio county there are 83,000 acres. McCampbell & Bros., near Rockport, have 30,000 acres; John Wood, near St. Mary, has 65,000 acres; Thomas O'Connor has 40,000 acres; John Wealder has 28,000 acres; Henry Scott has 15,000 acres; Jerry O'Driscoll has 20,000 acres, the last four all in Refugio county. In Bee county, sundry persons have 42,000 acres; and in Atascosa county, 75,000 acres. In Live Oak there are 80,000 acres; in Victoria county there are 45,000 acres. Mr. Butler has, in Galveston and Harris counties, 60,000 acres; Mr. Samuel Allen, in the same two counties, has 120,000 acres. Mr. Kuram, in Jackson county, has 75,000 acres; Pierre Vayle & Co., same county, have 30,000 acres, and sundry persons in that and adjoining counties 160,000 acres.

Justification is Not by the Deeds of the Law.

"Law," as used by Paul, strictly means the ceremonial law—this was its meaning to the Jews. In its broader sense it means the moral law of which the ceremonial law was but an instrument. This broader sense is the one which we mean. Our point then is this—man by no sort of legal obedience can be justified before God.

This may be proven in different ways. One proof lies in man's inability to keep the moral law. The requirements of the moral law are absolute. They call for a perfect obedience. One, two, three or a dozen Christian Graces are not enough. The words are "cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." Here then is the standard: it is perfect obedience. One violation of the law brings all its curses upon the violator. He that offendeth in the least is guilty of all.

Now the question is, can this perfect obedience be rendered? The answer is, it can not, and the proof is that no man has ever done it. The fall of Adam, and the consequent sin in all hearts makes it impossible for man to render a perfect obedience. And even if from any given point in a man's life he may begin and continue in all things written in the book of the law to do them—another difficulty would arise. What about the sins committed before that hour? Who would atone for those? The law could not, for its only work is to condemn. The man could not, for to him the past is a sealed book, never to be opened until the judgment. And even if the past could be recalled and the long list of sins recalled, the only possible effect would be to increase remorse without the possibility of amendment. All law is absolute in its demands. It knows no compromise, can show no favors nor grant any reprieves. To be justified by it, obedience must be perfect. Man in his sinful state cannot render that obedience. Therefore justification by deeds of the law is impossible.

This position is fully sustained by the enlightened conscience. When this faculty is not perverted it gives no peace to the man that does wrong. The wrong deed may be ever so small, it may be disapproved by the judgment, the man may even repent of it, still no matter, the conscience that is not perverted will neither excuse it, nor cease upbraiding the one who did it.

Nothwithstanding this doctrine is so clearly revealed in the Bible, and may be so well understood by the reason, still men hope to be saved by their works. They think their good works and bad works will be compared and if the good is the greater, they will be saved. But this is the height of folly. It is to expect God's laws to be administered in a way that would destroy even human law. Our laws for example forbid stealing. Now suppose a man would say after having stolen, that he had done many good things in his life—he had fed the hungry, clothed the naked, visited the sick, supported the church, and therefore ought to be excused for this one bad act. The answer would be, no sir, though you have been a moral man all your days before—this one acts condemns you, and you must go to prison. But, says the prisoner, "I am sorry for what I have done, I will never do so again." No difference, "Your repentence is nothing, nor are your good resolutions, you are a thief and must suffer the penalty." Any other course would be subversive of all law. If a man does not wish to be arrested for theft, he must not steal. So of all legal demands; to be just before them we must obey them. Now remember that the law of God extends to every thought and purpose of the soul, and we see that to be justified by our works, we must not only be tolerably good, but our obedience must be absolutely perfect. This is impossible.

Our friends, in sending notices of Camp Meetings, District Conferences, etc., should be careful to send them soon enough. Several [illegible] notices have recently come too [illegible] for insertion, the occasion [illegible] before a succeeding [illegible] reach our readers. Forfeiting the Right of Appeal.

A brother desires to know whether an expelled member forfeits the right of appeal to the Quarterly Conference, if he does not give notice that he intends to appeal at the time he is expelled.

The right of appeal is a sacred one, guaranteed by the law of the Church. The Bishop, Traveling Preacher, Preacher on Trial, Local Preacher, Deacon or Elder, and private member, each and all, are given the right of appeal from the decisions of the committees trying them. The Discipline is not specific in every case as to the time when notice of the appeal must be given. The Bishop and Traveling Preacher must give notice of his intention to appeal "at the time of his conviction, or when informed thereof." The Preacher on Trial, if expelled by a Quarterly Conference, has "a right to an appeal to the next Annual Conference." Here the time of his giving notice is not definitely stated. The Local Preacher, Deacon or Elder, in cases of condemnation by a Quarterly Conference, may appeal to the next Annual Conference, "provided that he signify to the Quarterly Conference his determination to appeal." This, no doubt, means the Quarterly Conference which condemns. In the case of private members the Discipline reads:

"If there be a murmur or complaint from any excluded person that justice has not been done—he not having absented himself from trial after due notice was given him—shall be allowed an appeal to the Quarterly Conference."

Here it will be seen that no specific time is fixed for giving notice of the appeal, but evidently it must be before the next Quarterly Conference.

Our reply, then, to the above inquiry is this: An expelled member ought to know whether he desires to appeal from a decision by a committee at the time the decision is rendered; but if he is undecided on that point, and wishes a little time to consider the matter, it seems to us a preacher in charge should indulge him a little, and he should not lose his right of appeal. In all cases, however, the appeal must be made to the Quarterly Conference next succeeding the trial.

An Important Admission.

Rev. Father Giesen, a leading Catholic priest of this city, preached a sermon September 2 on the "Education of the young," in which he said:

"When we look about on the modern generation, instead of rejoicing or glorifying, we should sit down and weep bitter tears, for the young generation are traveling with railroad speed on the road to hell. The remarks of a writer in the American Review are true, and before him, of the Bishop of Charleston, that over three millions have lost the faith, and it can be proved by statistics that over sixteen or eighteen millions of people, who were baptized Catholics, have lost their faith in this country, and this is the case with two-thirds of all who come to America. One of the evils which lead to this falling off from the true faith and which has been again and again condemned by the voice of our Pontif, and by every shepherd in each separate diocese, is liberalism, and a great many are liberalists, my brethren, without knowing it. One of the greatest causes for this evil is in the early training of children, the manner in which their education is conducted, and the Mother Church is the appropriate one to undertake this important mission, for our Lord commands her to go and teach all nations; she alone has been commissioned to take charge of this great matter."

By "liberalism" Catholic priests mean the right of private judgment in matters of religion. This is considered by every true American citizen a God-given right, and is rejoiced in by all Protestants.

Catholics deny the right of private judgment in matters of religion. They must accept the interpretation of the Bible as given by the Pope and received through the priests. What, therefore, is a source of grief to Father Giesen is a source of joy to every lover of religious freedom.

The cause of this "liberalism," the Reverend Father says, is the manner in which "the early training of children is conducted. The Mother Church is the appropriate one to undertake this important mission." This is a thrust at our public school system and a statement that the education of children should be turned over to the Catholic Church. What nonsense to be spoken in an American city!

We quote the above, however, chiefly to call attention to the significant admission that two-thirds of the Catholics who come to America lose their faith, and that American schools are the chief cause. No greater compliment could be paid our public school system than this admission. Whatever awakens the thought of the masses of the Catholic Church and leads them to turn their backs upon the pretensions and deceptions of the Roman Catholic Priesthood, is a public good of great value.

A Mother in Israel Has Departed.

Our First German Church in this city is called to mourn the death of one of its oldest and most influential members, Mrs. Elizabeth Beckro. Mrs. Beckro was sixty-four years of age. She died August 24, in the full triumphs of faith. During her last illness her suffering was very great. She said during her sickness, "All is well. The will of the Lord be done." She would often request her friends to sing, "God is love," and other appropriate songs indicative of her state of mind. The funeral occurred on the 25th of August, at 4 o'clock, in the church corner of Franklin and St. Andrew. A very large audience was present. The pastor, Rev. J. Braun, preached the sermon from the text John 14; 1—4. The other ministers present participating in the services were Revs. J. Kienle and J. Uober, of our own church; Rev. Mr. Pouli, of the M. E. Church South, and Rev. Mr. Kleinhage, of the Lutheran Church. The remains were deposited in Washington cemetery. Mrs. Beckro was a widow for the second time. Her first husband was Mr. Abraham Ehinger, one of the first and most active laymen in the organization of Methodism among the Germans of this city.

Mrs. Beckro leaves one son and three daughters from her first marriage, and one daughter from her second, all of whom are married and living in this city. During her life she was a generous giver to the church, and being possessed of wealth always gave largely. Having expressed a desire to make a special donation to her church during her lifetime, her heirs since her death have given to the First German Church six hundred dollars. Mrs. Beckro was educated a Roman Catholic, and was at one time a member of that church. Her conversion occurred about thirty-five years ago, since which time she has been an earnest and faithful member of the Methodist Church. A mother in Israel has departed.

The Central Methodist, a journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, published at Catlettsburg, Kentucky, for the second time referred to the heading "Our Southern Methodism," placed each week at the head of a department of church news in the SOUTHWESTERN. That paper says: "The editor has not told us in what Northern Methodism in the South differs from Northern Methodism in the North. Will he please enligbten us?"

We are surprised that our sprightly exchange needs enlightenment. We would have answered the first time if we had not supposed the editor was joking. Is there not more than one Methodism in the South? Let us see: in the Southern States we have the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the African Methodist Episcopal Church, the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America, the Congregational Methodists and the Protestant Methodists. Are not all these "legitimate" branches of Methodism? And, therefore, can we not justly arrange the special news from our Southern Churches under the head of "Our Southern Methodism?" Is our brother enligbtened?

The Western Christian Advocate, after quoting a commendatory note on the recent editorials of the Northwestern and New York Advocate, says:

We presume that the Southwestern does not mean to intimate that any of the journals of our Church published in the North take a different view, but designs merely to acknowledge recent deliverances of the above named papers. We are glad to see our denominational journalism united on the right side of this question.

Just so. We rejoice to believe that our church press in the North is a unit in this point and that our Southern work is to be strengthened in every proper manner.

Freedmen's Cause.

Notwithstanding the terrible financial crisis of the past year, the Freedmen's Aid Society has laid deep, broad, and enduring foundations for coming ages. Its receipts have aggregated over $70,000. It has sustained twelve colleges, a number of schools of lower grade, and co-operated extensively in the maintainance of the Common School System. It has employed over sixty self-sacrificing Christian teachers, who have left home and the endearments of family, to teach the neglected ones of the South, for a mere subsistence as a salary, and to be subjected to reproaches and contumely innumerable. It has taught over 3000 pupils in the day schools, and even a greater number in the Sunday schools. It has prepared hundreds of ministers for the Southern work, and scores for African Missionary work. It has fitted for teachers, many promising young men and women. Lady missionaries have been sent to operate in the homes of the freed women. The mothers and daughters have been pointed to Christ, and in many instances, lead into the riches of religious experience. Indigent students have been aided in obtaining an education. Land has been purchased for sites for new buildings; repairs have been made in dilapidated buildings; a number of buildings are already in process of erection, and others will be begun when the necessary means are furnished. The out-look is hopeful. If the contributions could be increased fifty per cent. greater efficiency could be realized, and the demands of the work fully met. The preachers should take the collection prayerfully, and promptly, and God will give us a rich harvest.

Our German brethren in Galveston, Texas, are making a special effort to raise money to complete the chapel now being built. They have begun a simple plan by which many can help them and still get the full worth of their money in return. Their Sunday-School scholars have collected a large amount of rare specimens of shells on the Gulf shore and propose to send them, postpaid, to any one, on the following terms:

"Three star-shells, (very beautiful,) for twenty-five cents; six star shells, and a variety of other small shells, for fifty cents; six star-shells and a neat collection of small and medium-sized shells, for $1; and a superior collection of star-shells, sea-beams, and other shells, for $1 50. All the money received in this way is to be used in paying for the new chapel. The plan combines pleasure and blessing. Sunday School superintendents or teachers can send orders for schools or classes, and save expenses. Address orders to Rev. F. von Schlaembach, or Rev. E. Werner, German missionaries of the M. E. Church, at Galveston, Texas."

The Central Methodist has the following pertinent paragraph. It hits the nail on the head:

"If the mayor of a city has the power, when in his judgement it is expedient, to close the bar-rooms by proclamation, as a means of security to the people, have not the people the power, by their votes, to keep them forever closed? And if this power is conceded, have they not the further power to place a veto on its manufacture? This means absolute prohibition, and should be the objective point of the temperance efforts of the age. The lopping-off process seems to strengthen the main trunk, and now let the ax be laid at the root of the tree, and applied with vigor and skill. Let the war take this course, all along the line, and while the roar of our cannon may not attract much attention to-day, continued agitation will soon set the masses to thinking, and acting as well. On this question the great majority will be with us, provided it is judiciously managed, and properly brought before them. So we think, at least."

The President of the Swiss confederation gave Gen. Grant a grand dinner. The Federal Council and M. Staempfli, Geneva arbitrator in the Alabama claims Conference, were present. The President proposed the following toast: "To Gen. Grant, the most illustrious general, the ablest statesman, and the worthiest citizen of the United States." Gen. Grant said in reply that he was glad to be in a republic on this side of the Atlantic. He boasted of the kindly feeling which the American people entertained for the President of the Swiss confederation and M. Staempfli, for the part taken in the Geneva arbitration, by which the difficulties between two powerful nations were settled to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Our Southern Methodism.

An interesting communication from Rev. C. Gilbert, intended for this column, is received, but he fails to give his location or tell of what church it is that he writes.

Rev. P. Blue, Oxford, Miss., says: "We have just closed a three weeks meeting, in which there were twenty-six conversions and thirty-four accessions to the church, besides a number of wanderers reclaimed. Our Sunday School is constantly increasing in numbers."

Rev. L. J. Terrill, Holly Springs circuit, Mississippi, says: "The revival spirit is abroad in my work. At a meeting in progress at one of my appointments there has been one conversion and three accessions to the church. We have just built a new church on the circuit, which is now nearly completed. The people of the neighborhood in which it is located are greatly pleased and encouraged by its erection, and a very promising Sunday School has been organized in it."

Rev. M. Williams, Cooperstown, Tenn., writes: "We have just closed a four weeks meeting, in which there were eleven conversions and four backsliders reclaimed. Our friends of the Baptist and of the A. M. E. Churches gave us their aid with, Revs. B. Thomas and J. P. Andrews."

Rev. L. W. Woodward, Brenham, Texas, reports twenty-four recent accessions, and that Church and Sunday School are in good condition.

Rev. Wm. Leewood, Alexandria circuit, Tennessee, says: "We closed a few days since a meeting at Cherry Valley, at which there were twenty conversions. The church at that place had never been so revived before. We have now commenced a meeting at Alexandria, and there have been two conversions, and many are inquiring the way of salvation. Bless the Lord for his goodness!"

Rev. J. W. Dann, Presiding Elder of Greenwood District, Mississippi, in writing adds: "We are having many interesting revival meetings on this work. There are a great many conversions and large additions to the churches. The protracted meetings are proving to be more successful than I have known them before in any past year."

Rev. W. McDonald, State Line, Miss., says: "We have just closed a meeting in which there were four conversions and eight accessions to the church. We are building a new house of worship, thirty by forty feet in dimensions. Brother D. Gaines has donated to us a nice lot for the purpose, and our white friends have made liberal cash subscriptions, for which they have our hearty thanks. We have the lumber on the ground and paid for, and hope soon to have the work completed. Pray that the Lord's blessing may be with us."

Rev. Andrew R. Norris, La Grange, Texas, writes: "At our camp meeting, which has just closed, there were fifty-two conversions. Since Conference I have received one hundred and four persons into the church. A revival is now in progress in my charge, and many are inquiring the way of life. Our entire community seems to be pervaded by a deep religious feeling."

Rev. James H. Parker, Pickens' Station, Miss., says: "We have just closed a protracted meeting which was continued during two and a half weeks. There were twenty-three conversions and forty-nine accessions to the church—twenty-four being on probation and twenty-five in full membership. This work of grace commenced in our Sunday School, and at a time when our local preachers and many prominent members were away at camp meeting. But the revival influence spread until all classes of people were brought within its influence. Many of our white friends came regularly to our services, and united with us in the worship of God. Our Sunday School numbers seventy-five members. Pray for us, that the blessing of the Lord may continue with us."

Rev. W. M. Payne, New Albany, Miss., says: "We have had a meeting in progress for some weeks. Up to this time there have been sixty-four conversions, and forty-three have united with the church. The interest is unabated. May the Lord direct and bless us."

The third quarterly meeting for Houma was held September 2 and 3. The Presiding Elder preached at 3 p. m. on the Sabbath, administered the sacrament and baptized several children, and also preached Sunday night. After the Sunday night sermon mourners were invited to the alter, and nine presented themselves for prayers. A most excellent spirit pervaded the services all day. Among the auditors was State Senator Johnson. A protracted meeting has been in progress for several days, and still continues. The pastor, Rev. C. Rogester, seems to understand his work well, and commands the respect of the entire community. He was appointed to the church a few months since on the death of Rev. Mr. Taylor, but not until the church had been for some time without a pastor and became somewhat scattered. His labors have been blest, and he has won the confidence of his people. He has an excellent wife, who enters heartily into the work of the church. The Quarterly Conference was held Monday morning, September 3, and all the work of the church was carefully considered. Some matters which had led to unpleasant words and feelings were settled. The report showed that the pastor had been paid $111 50, an organ for the choir had been paid for, and considerable repairing on the church property had been done. There is a branch church at Dulack that was represented in the Conference by Mr. White, a local preacher. The membership at Houma and Dulack is 110. It is proposed to ceil the Houma church, and for this purpose over $50 are already in hand.

The third quarterly meeting at Terrebonne, La., was held September 2. The Presiding Elder preached at 11 a. m., and followed the sermon with the administration of the Lord's Supper. The pastor, Rev. A. Kennedy, reported an accession during the past six months of forty, and a steady increase in the size of the congregation. The Sunday School is at present not organized, but the Presiding Elder was assured that this defect in the church organization should not continue. Brother Kennedy is a diligent, successful pastor.

The first flouring mill in this city is now being built at Nos. 82 & 84 St. Peter St., by Messrs. Webster and Dillingham. E. P. Allis & Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., are the contractors and the mill is to be in operation by October 1. It will contain a Corliss Engine of one hundred and fifty horse power, and six pairs of burrs with a capacity of 200 barrels of flour per day. The cost will not exceed sixty thousand dollars.

Military Service in Turkey.

The following we quote from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate:

"Just now Turkey is doing her utmost to bring into the field an army sufficiently strong to drive back the invading Russians. During the past year she has been pressing into the service every able-bodied man in the country, except the Bedouin tribes of the desert—the very men she should have, but the Sultan has no control over that class of his subjects. They are the only independent people on the globe, living where they please, and doing very much as they please. In the Ottoman Empire all soldiers are conscripted, and no substitutes allowed. It is a remarkable fact, however, that the men who can afford to pay liberal backsheesh are never drafted. The law provides that only one out of a family shall be taken, but the demand for men is so great they take all old enough to serve. The law also exempts an only son and the husband of a helpless wife; no respect, however, is paid to this usage. After the conscription they are allowed to return home for a few weeks, but should they fail to report for duty at the proper time, and can't be found, the next akin—perhaps the father, or an elder brother—is arrested, and held as a hostage till the soldier is delivered up, who is severely bastinadoed as a deserter. You can conceive of nothing more heartrending than the removal of these conscripts from their villages. The friends gather round and sit and weep for hours. The whole village is in mourning, and when finally they are marched off, their relatives follow them as to the grave. To-day, 1,000 of these men left here for the seat of war. It was an affecting scene to see them first kiss and then embrace their loved ones. A long caravan of camels led the way with the baggage, then came the soldiers on foot, followed by their friends, wives with their babes either sitting on their shoulders or slung over their backs, and mothers weeping as if their hearts would break. One, both aged and blind, was led up that she might touch once more her son and only support, and as she laid her wrinkled hand upon his face, his manly heart gave way, and he wept like a little child. Poor wretches, well may they weep! for they serve without pay, have nothing to leave for the support of their families, and not one in ten will ever return again. But the saddest scene was after they had all left, when the crowd dispersed, and the wives and children, mothers and sisters, came back through the gates of the city to their desolate homes, with no religion to comfort, no friend to support, no Government to protect them.

The Russian Faith.

Are not the Russians a religious people? Most assuredly they are. They go to Church on Sundays and holy days; they cross themselves when they pass a church or an Icon (icons are pictorial half-length representations of the Savior, of the Madonna, or of a saint); they take the holy communion; they keep the numerous feasts of their church, and they make occasional pilgrimages to holy shrines. And this is all—this satisfies them. They have no doubts respecting their spiritual safety, no fear of future retribution, no dread of death. Their blind faith in the magical efficiency of church ceremonies enables them to live without spiritual anxieties, and to die with unreasoning stolidity.

The ethical value of this faith in ceremonial observances is very low. As in the Roman Catholic Church, religion is very generally dissociated from morality. "Hence," says Wallace, "such incidents as the following are still possible: A robber kills and rifles a traveler, but refrains from eating a piece of cooked meat which he finds in the cart, because it happens to be a fast day! A peasant prepares to rob a young attaché of the Austrian embassy in St. Petersburg, and ultimately kills his victim, but before going to the [illegible] he enters a church and com[illegible] undertaking to the pro[illegible] saints! A house[illegible] in the act of robbing [illegible] and makes [illegible] saint assists [illegible] worth of [illegible] for September.

Affairs in France.

President MacMahon is fast winning the reputation of being the leading tyrant of the age. He is determined to carry the approaching election if it can be done by using the whole power of the Government. The Depech, a newspaper at Toulouse, has been fined one hundred francs for refusing to print a speech made by the President. Hawkers of newspapers at Compeigne were recently required to furnish a list of newspapers they served customers in the arrondissement. Officials there suppressed the delivery of the Siecle, the Nineteenth Century, the Presse, the Republique Francaise, the National Bien Publique, the Petit Republique Francaise, and the Petit Journal, all republican journals. The Union Liberale, of Versailles, was sentenced to three thousand francs fine, and the manager imprisoned three months for insulting President MacMahon. The Nineteenth Century and Petit Parisean were prosecuted for publishing a colored map of France showing the political complexion of the departments. The court convicted them, but passed nominal sentences of fifty francs each. The Paris police have forbidden the street sale of photographs of Thiers. Two clubs at Arles have been closed, charged with being political assemblages. Ex-President Grant has been requested not to visit France while the elections are pending, lest his presence should encourage the republicans. We often accuse the French of being revolutionists, but their conduct under all these oppressions proves them a patient people. In America such high-handed measures would not be tolerated for a day.—Western.

The "Electoral Conspiracy" Bubble Exploded, by Hon. E. W. Stoughton, is a complete refutation of the bitter, partisan harrangue of Judge Black, published in the North American in the July-August number. Both articles should be read by every intelligent American Citizen.

"Fair Wages," by "A Striker," is a strong putting of the case for the rights of the laborer as against the privileges granted to and claimed by the railroad monopolies. On the other hand, Col. T. A. Scott discusses "The Recent Strikes" from exactly the opposite stand-point, claiming that the railroads are of such vast importance to the country that the United States should assume their protection. To do this he proposes that companies of United States troops be stationed at convenient distances all over the country, so as to promptly suppress any disorder. Both Col. Scott and "Striker" are wrong. Fair wages will never be secured by violence, and we want no immense standing army scattered over the country. Time and the spirit of mutual consideration and forbearance will settle all questions between capital and labor.

Robert Tombs of Georgia says that the capitalist who does not respect labor is a fraud, and the laborer who does not respected capital is a fool.

One of the discoveries made by latest Arctic explorers is that the length of the Polar night is one hundred and forty-two days. "What a glorious place that would be," says Brown. "In which to tell a man with a bill to call round the the day after to-morrow and get his money!"

President Hayes's old regiment, the 23d Ohio, will hold its annual re-union at Fremont, Ohio, September 14th. President Hayes, Gens. Sherman, Sheridan, Crook, Cox, Howard, Carroll, and other distinguished persons will be present. The citizens of Fremont are making great preparations to give them a splendid reception.

The celebration of the Centennial anniversary of the Battle of Bennington was a fine affair. The procession was four miles long, and the spectators are variously estimated at from 60,000 to 100,000 in number. The President and several Cabinet officers were present and made addresses. An oration was delivered by President Bartlett of Dartmouth College, and a poem by William Cullen Bryant was read by Prof. Churchill.

SEPT. 23, 1877,—PAUL AT MILETUS.

SCRIPTURE.—ACTS 20: 17-32.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake."—2 Cor. 4: 5.

TOPIC.—Faithful Service.

(Condensed from Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

PAUL'S PAST (17-21).—Paul's face was set toward Jerusalem. He hasted so as to be there, if possible, on the day of Pentecost. He, therefore sent to the elders of the church of Ephesus when he arrived at Miletus. They were only twenty-eight miles away. One can easily imagine the joy that was felt by them and by the church when they learned that their beloved Paul was so near, and with what alacrity they obeyed his summons. His address to them was exceedingly cogent and moving.

They knew: 1.—About his labor. He had been with them at all seasons. He never was off duty simply because the day was rainy. He never failed to be at his post. And that of itself is a grand commendation for any man. Neither heat, nor storm, nor threats, nor actual danger turned Paul away from his work. Where it was his duty to be, there he was.

2. About his humility. He had not been domineering, he only had been thoroughly in earest. He had desired to save and not to rule. His humility had been shown by manual labor. Here, as elsewhere, it had been his sturdy pride to minister to his own necessities, so that he could now say unto them: "I have coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel." 33. It had been shown by personal labor for the Master. He had gone publicly from house to house, talking privately with every one, thus proving that his desire was to build up the kingdom of Christ and not his reputation as an orator.

3.—He had served the Lord with tears. His heart had been in his work. He had not only argued, but he had plead with sinners until tears ran down his cheeks. Paul was something more than a logician. He was a tender friend as well. How many converts must his tears have purchased! "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him."

4.—Served him in temptation. "Trials" is the meaning. This cannot be, as has been thought by some, "the temptation in the flesh," referred to in Gal. 4: 14; for the "trials" are limited by the next clause to those "which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews." From this verse we get our only hint of the fact that his life was endangered here, likewise, by the secret plots of the Jews. Taking this fact along with the troubles more minutely described in the preceding chapter, and it is evident that Paul had no very easy time in Ephesus.

5.—They knew how conscientiously he had taught. He had "kept back nothing that was profitable" for his hearers. In the 27th verse he puts it: "For I have not shunned to declare unto you the whole counsel of God." He never considered whether his words would be popular, but only whether they would be profitable. No considerations of self ever made him keep back the truth. But he only uttered the truth as they were ready to receive and profit by it. Though it is never wise to deceive, it is wise, sometimes, to wait until truth can be heard with advantage. All Scripture is profitable—but not at all times.

6.—They knew his fidelity Had taught both publicly and from house to house. He had not "ceased to warn every one night and day with tears." 31. No minister can afford to confine his efforts to the pulpit—no teacher can afford to limit his or her efforts to presenting the truth on a Sabbath to the class. House to house work is the most effective, and is the best reinforcement for pulpit and class work. Paul succeeded in Ephesus all the more for these home visitations.

6.—They knew the character of his teaching. It had been "repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ" for the Jews as well as the Gentiles. He had made no discrimination as to classes. Never had he made it appear that the Jews needed less of a change than the Greeks. All alike were guilty before God. Note the order: he preached repentance toward God first, and then faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is useless to preach the last except as the first has been pressed home. No one will trust in a Savior who does not feel that he has need of one.

PAUL'S FUTURE (22-24).—That looked dark, so far as his own personal well being was concerned. He saw before him only black, lowering, threatening clouds. He was going "bound in the spirit" up to Jerusalem. There are differences of opinion on the meaning of that. The popular explanation is that he was constrained to go there by the Holy Spirit.

But none of these things move me. Grand declaration! It came from no untried man, but from one who fearlessly had looked infuriated mobs in the face, and read in their looks the intention to slay. He was not moved by thoughts of his own peril, but oh, how quickly and powerfully was he moved at the thought of the danger in which the souls of men were placed! Neither count I my life dear unto myself. He does not say his life is valueless, but estimates it by its worth in serving God and in saving souls. He was willing to lose it in such service, feeling that for him to live was Christ and to die was gain.

Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves and to all the flock. One must take heed to himself first. The man that does not do that is not fit to watch over others. The item under this charge is, to feed—or, rather, to shepherd, which includes the idea of feeding, but means more still—the church. The reasons given for this exhortation are: 1.—The church was purchased with Christ's blood. The higher the price paid for anything, the greater should be the care taken to keep it from being injured or destroyed. "Redeemed—with the precious blood of Christ." 1 Pet. 1: 18, 19. 2.—Grievous wolves shall enter in, not sparing the flock. False teachers from abroad, and yet within the church—not persecutors of it. Wolves in sheep's clothing. 3. "Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things."

The scene at parting is exceedingly touching. It is difficult to see how it could be better described than in the simple words of Luke: "And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down and prayed with them all. And they all wept sore and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him, sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake that they should see his face no more."

Little Things.

Solomon, the wisest of men, teaches us that it is "the little foxes that spoil the vines." (Sol. Song ii. 15). And the prophet Zechariah asks the question—"Who hath despised the day of small things?" (Zech. iv. 10) From this we are to learn that the day of small things ought not to be despised, for everything however great, has had its day of small things. The stately oak towering above the surrounding trees, which has stood firm against the winds and storms for centuries, perhaps, had a very small beginning. Once a little acorn lay upon the ground and was pressed into the earth by the foot of the beast passing over it. Then it began to grow; it shot its roots downward and its stem upward, and grew till it became the mighty oak, the king of the forest trees.

So with our majestic rivers rolling grandly on to the boundless ocean. First, there is a little bubbling spring at the foot of a hill, so small that you might think a thirsty ox could almost drain it dry. On it runs between the rocks, and winds its way along, other little streams running into it as it pursues its onward course. So it keeps on deepening and widening till it becomes the noble St. Lawrence, the stately Mississippi or the mighty Amazon, pouring its stupendous volume of waters into the vast expanse of ocean.

The lofty Pyramids, those marvellous works of antiquity, rearing their majestic forms high into the heavens, were not always there. The time was when the first shovelful of earth was raised in order to prepare the foundation for those massive structures, the first stone was laid, and step by step, stone by stone the prodigious piles were reared till the last one crowned the summit of the highest of the world-renowned pyramids of Egypt. All great things have their small beginnings.

And as it is in natural or material things, so it is in moral or spiritual things. Take, for example, the wicked blasphemer. He does not become profane in a moment, but little by little he indulged in unholy words, and the thoughtless taking of his Maker's name in vain, till now he utters without the slightest concern oaths which at first would have shocked his ears.

And so with the drunkard. He does not become the besotted drunkard in a single day. He first allowed himself to be led astray by evil companions, and little by little his desire for the fiery liquid was increased, till he gradually became, almost without knowing it himself, what he never intended to be—a miserable, besotted drunkard,—a disgrace to himself and a curse to society.

Look also at the smoker, the chewer or the snuffer of tobacco. We have never yet found anyone who had a natural relish for tobacco, so poisonous in its nature and so filthily prepared for its consumers. And if any of you ever have found such a person, you have found a natural curiosity—a very strange and unnatural human being. Chewers often begin by chewing bees-wax, india-rubber, gum, or other elastic substances, till after a time a little tobacco is taken. It only made them sick, and because it didn't kill them, they were emboldened to take a little more, till finally nature gave up, resisted no more and submitted to that which is against nature and contrary to nature's laws. The smoker begins generally in much the same way. People are not born smokers; they torture themselves into it, little by little, till they find they can stand it, and after a while they feel as though they cannot do without it. Snuffing, the most loathsome of all, must be acquired by persistent habit to the utter disgust of the finer sensibilities of nature and the final defeat of the nasal functions. —Watchman.

Dr. Redford, we are sorry to say, was thrown from his barouche, August 28, and sustained considerable injury. Mrs. Redford was also hurt. We hope neither is seriously injured. Yet, the Agent may not be able to fill all his engagements.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

"I am astonished, my dear young lady, at your sentiments! You make me start!" "Well, I have been wanting you to start for the last half hour," said she.

Relief Without a Doctor.

Though we would by no means be understood as deprecating, but rather as recommending, professional aid in disease, there are multitudes of instances when it is neither necessary or easy to obtain. A family provided with a comprehensive household specific like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is possessed of a medicinal resource adequate to most emergencies in which medical advice would be otherwise needful. That sterling tonic and corrective invariably remedies, and is authoritatively recommended for debility, indigestion, liver disorder, an irregular habit of body, urinary and uterine troubles, incipient rheumatism and gout, and many other ailments of frequent occurrence. It eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers, relieves mental despondency, checks premature decay, and invigorates the nervous and muscular tissues. Sleep, digestion and appetite are promoted by it, and it is extremely useful in overcoming the effects of exhaustion and exposure.

THE CHILDREN'S PICNIC.

'Twas the merriest, funniest picnic
That ever you did see;
They held it down in the orchard,
Under the apple tree.

The air was heavy with fragrance
And full of the hum of bees,
And the showers of the pink and white blossoms
Were wafted down by the breeze.

They scattered over the dishes
In a merry little whirl,
Till the table seemed decked for fairies
With a service of pink and pearl.

There were Nellie and Tom at the table,
And Pussy and Rover for guests;
Each with their well washed faces,
And their coats were the sleekest and best.

Nell gravely waited on Pussy,
And Tom gave Rover his share,
And the children loudly praised them,
For a well behaved pair.

And they purred and behaved politely,
But 'twas quickly forgotten all,
When a field mouse scampered past them
And a squirrel jumped on the wall.

Right over the table jumped pussy,
And Rover gave squirrel the chase;
Leaving the children in wonder
At their picnic turned into a race.

The chairs were o'erturned, and the table
Stood gracefully tipped on one side;
While the dishes and all their contents
Were rolling far and wide.

Tom laughed till the tears were falling
Over his cheeks like rain;
But Nellie in wrath, said she'd never,
Never invite them again.

AMES' PORTABLE ENGINES.—2,200 IN USE. From the uniform satisfaction our Engines have given, we feel gratified that we have accomplished our aim—to give the best, strongest and most perfect Engine in the American market.

We have received and are constantly receiving the most flattering testimonials of their utility as regards their power, simplicity, and of the general good workmanship in their construction, and we here challenge other manufacturers to build an Engine superior to our own.

All Engines made on separate bed-plate, so they can be used as Stationary Engines.

Victor Sugar Mills
—AND—
Cook's Evaporators,

Purchasers of machinery of our manufacture are notified that WM. L. CUSHING, No. 61 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., is our only authorized agent in that city, and no other house is authorized to sell our celebrated Victor Cane Mills, Cook Evaporators, Engines and other machinery of our make.

The Victor Cane Mills are the only ones suitable for Southern sugar cane and the Cook Evaporators the only successful ones for making sugar.

Cane growers can't afford to risk crops with light, unfinished mills, liable to break in the middle of the season; they can't afford to waste crops with mills that don't press out all the juice, or evaporators that make sugar unfit for market, and too little in proportion to the labor and fuel they require.

In purchasing the Victor Cane Mill and Cook Evaporator you get perfect sugar machinery and will have no drawbacks to contend with. Mr. Cushing is authorized to make terms and liberal discount to merchants.

BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO.

Improved Eagle Cotton Gins.

PRICES REDUCED TO $4 A SAW.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best-built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinder of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only ten-inch cylinders, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in large-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipments. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

The bale of cotton which received the grand prize at St. Louis, and has won so many thousands of dollars at numerous fairs, was ginned on the Eagle Cotton Gin.

Prices Have Been Greatly Reduced, to $4 a Saw.

All orders should be addressed to

30 CENTS A POUND FOR COTTON.—The New Orleans Cotton Exchange paid THIRTY CENTS A POUND for a bale of cotton ginned on the EAGLE COTTON GIN, and sent the cotton to the Centennial Exhibition as the best bale of cotton ever seen in New Orleans.

CENTENNIAL PREMIUM was awarded at Philadelphia to the EAGLE GINS over all others.

STEDMAN'S
IMPROVED SELF-SUPPORTING
NEWELL SCREW
COTTON PRESS.

Now the Most Convenient, Speedy and Reliable Screw Press in Use.

The Advantages Secured in this Press will Commend it to the favor of every one.

1. It is so very simple in its workings and construction that any one can operate it, and there is no necessity for sending a mechanic a long distance to set it up.

2. It is all complete, with all the wood-work.

3. It may be used either as a Portable or Stationary Press.

4. The horse power being directly applied to the Screw, there is no necessity for Cog Wheels or Gearing of any kind, thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and liability to get out of order.

5. The horses occupy the room under the platform, which is less available for any other purpose, leaving the space surrounding the platform entirely clear for baling Cotton, so as to be convenient to the Press, or for storing purposes. And when it is desirable to make a covering for the Press, the same roof which covers the Press will cover the horse-walk also.

6. The Cotton is put into the Press and taken out at about the same point, making a great convenience for the operators, as they have all their work on the same floor. And the bales are already at a convenient elevation for loading in a wagon or storing away.

7. These Presses never require any repairs; after using for thirty years they are as good as when new.

8. More Cotton can be put into the Press at a time than in any other Press, making a greater saving.

9. No Press in use puts so much weight in so small a bale. The bales, as they come from these Presses, are about square at the ends; whereas from most other Presses they are from twelve to fifteen inches higher than they are wide, making them very bulky, without a corresponding weight, while their shape makes them extremely inconvenient to handle.

10. The character of this Press is such that it is alike suited to a large or small operating force. One man and a boy can operate it to good advantage, or half a dozen may be fully employed.

11. There are no patents on this Press, except those held by STEDMAN & CO.; hence those who secure the right to these Presses will not be liable to pay a second fee.

The man tramping has his head and shoulders out of the Press all the time. The top Follower, or Platten, is hinged at each end; being made in two parts, it is thrown open allowing the top of the box to be used for putting in Cotton. No time is lost with this Press, as the Cotton is tramped in while the Follower is run down. The advantage to those who operate the Press of having head and shoulders above the top of the Press, while tramping the Cotton, instead of commencing at the bottom, after the Follower is down, will commend it to all. We use the best of oak for the Straining Beams, the Box doors are made of yellow pine or ash, and are framed together entirely with bolts, avoiding mortises and tenons, iron plates are used at all joints where any strain comes.

DURABILITY.

STEDMAN & CO., the manufacturers of the Improved Self-Supporting Newell Screw Press, have been engaged in the manufacture of Presses for 39 years. The application of the Screw for Pressing Cotton was the original invention of the late Dr. Thomas Newell, of Grand Gulf, Miss. Over 30 years ago Mr. Stedman made for Dr. Newell a Cast Iron Screw; this Screw was in constant use by Dr. Newell as a Horse Power Press for 15 years, during which time he pressed over 900 Bales of Cotton. The old reliable Newell Screw, since its invention, has been in constant use by the largest Planters, and has always been the only reliable Press in use, never requiring any repairs. The improvements which STEDMAN & CO. now offer on the old and reliable Newell Screw are such as to add to its already good qualities convenience of operating and speed.

With our improvements we do away with the three great objections to the old-style Newell Screw Presses; First, we reduce the cost one half. Second, takes up less room. Third, requires no heavy frame work in building to support the Press, and the heavy corner posts of the Press are replaced by Iron Rods. This is strictly a Portable Press, and can be moved from place to place at small cost, and at the same time it answers fully the place of the old-style Stationary Press.

It takes 8 feet less Screw to work this Press, with a ten foot Cotton Box, than any Revolving Press known, thus saving 36 revolutions in making each bale, which, providing the pitch of the Screw is 2 inches, as in all Revolving Presses, means 1,80 feet of travel saved to the mule each bale, or some 18 miles in making 40 bales. Price, Horse Power Press, complete, with wood work $200

CABINET ORGANS.

EXCELLING WHAT HAS PREVIOUSLY BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN POWER, PURITY AND DELICACY OF TONES.

THE LIST CABINET ORGAN

(Style No. 501.—Five Octave: Seven Sets of Reeds of Two and a Half Octaves each, and One Set of One Octave; Fifteen Stops; New Scale of Reed-Board, Reeds and Actions, with Vestrillo Chest and other Improvements, patented 1876-7.

Base.—Contra Basso, 16 ft.; English Horn, 8 ft.; Viola, 4 ft.; Viola Dolce, 4 ft.; Sub-Base, 16 ft. Treble.—Corno, 16 ft.; Melodia, 8 ft.; Piccolo, 4 ft.; Seraphone, 8 ft.; Voix Celeste, 8 ft. Throughout.—Full Organ, (knee stop,) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up,) knee Swell, I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Franz Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The origin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Franz Liszt, in which full enormous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of the great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry out and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new Instrument was seen and tested by a number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Courier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class," evincing "extraordinary progress." After its receipt and trial, Dr. Franz Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

THE ORIGINAL
KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,
Sure Cure for
CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

SOMEHOW OR OTHER.

Life has a burden for every one's shoulder;
None may escape from its trouble and care;
Miss it in youth and 'twill come when we're older,
And fit us as close as the garments we wear.
Sorrow comes into our homes uninvited,
Robbing the heart of its treasures of song;
Lovers grow cold, and our friendships are slighted,
Yet somehow or other we do get along.

Midst the sweet blossoms that smile in our faces,
Grow the dark weeds that would poison and blight;
And e'en in the midst of earth's beautiful places,
There's always a something that isn't quite right!
Yet oft from a rock we pluck a gay flower,
And [illegible] from a spring in a desolate waste;
They come to the heart like a heavenly dower,
And nought is so sweet to the eye or the taste.

Every-day toil is an every-day blessing,
Though poverty's cottage and crust we may share;
Weak is the back on which burdens are pressing,
But stout is the heart which is strengthened by prayer;
Somehow or other the pathway grows brighter,
Just when we mourned there was none to befriend;
Hope in the heart makes the burden seem lighter,
And somehow or other we get to the end!

Ultimate America.

It is not commonly known even in cultivated circles that the amount of arable soil in North and South America is greater than that in Europe, Asia and Africa taken together. Although less than half the size of the Old World, the American Continent contains a greater extent of productive soil. This supreme fact is nowhere noticed by De Tocqueville; but, astonishing as the assertion appears that the New World has more arable land than the Old, and can, therefore, sustain a greater population, we shall cease to doubt these suggestive propositions if we rise up for a moment in thought to a point from which we can see both the great lakes and the Amazon; and, letting the planet roll beneath us its green and yellow continents set in the illuminated emerald and purple and azure of the great deep, compare the [illegible] of physical [illegible] in the two hemispheres, [illegible] with the eyes of a [illegible] a Ritter, an Agassiz, a [illegible] Guyot. I find ten striking physical contrasts between the Old World and the New, [illegible] of the pro- [illegible] of the soil of America. [illegible] with a rain map of [illegible] it shows that my [illegible] the humid, and there- [illegible] of the world [illegible] continent is narrow [illegible] it well. [illegible] Hence the [illegible] Thibet; [illegible] We [illegible] so Per- [illegible] World; the moun- [illegible] of the [illegible] the Old World [illegible]

3. As the most important wind blows from the east, ours is the continent of wet ocean winds, the Old World of dry land winds. It is a dry land wind that makes Sahara; and this land is made dry by the breath of the Old World and its height on the east. Under the tropics, the Old World receives seventy-seven inches of water by the year; America, one hundred and fifteen.

4. The New World, therefore, as Guyot has shown, is the humid, the Old World the arid, side of the globe.

5. America, therefore, has great, the Old World small, river systems. There is no position in which the Mississippi could be placed in Europe, south of St. Petersburg, and find room. Join in one current the Lena, the Obi, the Amoor, the Yang tse, the Hoang-ho, the Yenisei, the Indus, and the Ganges, and these eight principal rivers of Asia do not carry to the ocean as much water as the Amazon.

6. America is the country of fat plains; the Old World that of frozen or scorched plains. In the New World the Mississippi and the Amazon traverse plains whose fertility no other part of the globe can equal; but in the Old World the great plain extending from Norway to Kamtschatka is locked in perpetual frost; and that which stretches from the Western shoulder of Africa to the heart of Asia is made barren by tropical heat.

7. America is a concave, the Old World a convex, continent. Our mountain chains run north and south; those of Asia and Europe east and west. Ours, therefore, have the sun on both sides, and culture with us can climb the mountains; those of the Old World have the sun on the south side, and on the north side are comparatively infertile.

8. Cooling inlets of the ocean, like the Gulf of Mexico and the Carribean Sea, are found in America under the equator; but the hottest regions of the Old World are distinguished by distance from the ocean. The Mediterranean lies too far north to be of as much service to the Old World's fertility as the gulf is to that of the New; and it is, besides, shut up by the Alps and Sahara.

9. America is high and the Old World low, under the equator. The table lands of Mexico and Brazil are comparatively cool, although in the tropics; the Sahara is so low that it might be, it ought to be, made a navigable sea, by a channel from the Mediterranean or the ocean.

10. The New World is narrow under the equator; the Old World is wide there. The fertility of the New, therefore, loses less than that of the Old by tropical scorching. The equator, it is true, hangs under Orion, directly above the mouth of the Amazon. But the isotherm of greatest heat runs through the mouth of the Orinoco. It cuts only through the narrow neck of South America, neck-laced by oceans and fanned by wet winds; but it burns through Africa from tawny shoulder to tawny shoulder, each unsprinkled by the dew of the sea.

Cut out from the 31,000,000 square miles of the Old World and the 15,000,000 of the New all mountains, frozen and arid regions. The remnant of productive soil scholars say is about 10,000,000 square miles in the Old World and 11,000,000 in the New. In America, in this estimate, I reject as frozen all territory north of a line running through the Straits of Belle Isle, the south end of Hudson's Bay and the north end of Vancouver's Island. I exclude the ranges of sterility in the Rocky Mountains and the Andes. I omit the dry regions east and west of Colorado and on the coasts of Chili and Peru. I exclude the sterile portions of Patagonia. In the Old World I shut out Sahara, great parts of Arabia, Persia, and Central Asia, and Northern Russia and Siberia.

Here then bursts upon us the greatly suggestive and organizing fact, that the New World can sustain a greater population than the Old. If it can, probably it ultimately will. In this majestic circumstance I hear the footfalls of fate, with which it infinitely behooves the dim stir of present ages keep step! America is yet in the cradle. Her soft, young feet, not without some stains of bloody dew, have wandered so little inward on the continent of unexplored American time, that the eternities, breaking on the shore, kiss them yet with spray out of pity for their infancy.

Some of us here are young, but we have seen the population of our country increase from 17,000,000 to 40,000,000. In this audience are [illegible] who may live to see it increase from 40,000,000 to 100,000,000. Sir Henry Holland thought that America [illegible] so rapidly as to require a [illegible] once in five years. It has been proved by the experience of the United States that a prosperous [illegible] in possession of abundance of unoccupied soil and not [illegible] by immigration, will double [illegible] in twenty-five years. [illegible] populations of the [illegible] as a whole, double once [illegible] quarter of a century. But the doubling is now of great and growing numbers. The civilized white population of the United States increases at the rate of three per cent. annually. De Tocqueville calculated that, on a breadth extending from the Lakes to the Gulf, it advances westward seventeen miles each year, and he professed to be profoundly moved by the spectacle of this deluge of men, driven on by the hand of God; but the human surge moves yet more rapidly now. Its progress was little checked by the Revolution, and not very greatly impeded even by the civil war.

In 1790, the pivotal point or center about which all the population of the United States would balance, was a little east of Baltimore. It has been moving westward; in the year of Lincoln's election it had crossed the Ohio; and if its position were, as it should be, marked by a blazing star at the summit of the monumental shaft carried from time to time towards the setting sun, that star would rest now a little east of Cincinnati. It is a narrow outlook that pauses at a time when a continent that can sustain a larger population than the Old World shall have 100,000,000 people. But, at that date the popular imagination stops. At the place where the popular fore-sight pauses, I would begin. Suppose that there are 100,000,000 people in all America in the year 2000. It would not be at all extravagant to suppose that there will be that number in 1900; but I wish to make my statement mildly moderate. England and Prussia, the most thickly populated parts of Europe, now increase at the rate of more than 1 per cent. annually. But let our immigration fall away; let wars storm over our territory, from time to time; who shall say that our rate of increase, now three per cent. annually, will in a hundred or two hundred years not be at least equal to that of suffocated England and Prussia to-day? Call it less, only 1 per cent. annually, after the year 2000. Even at this per centage of increase we should double once each hundred years.

At the ludicrously cautious estimate that after the year 2000 our population will increase only one per cent. annually, or less rapidly than that of England and Prussia to-day, and that in the year 2000 all America, now having 84,000,000, will possess only 100,000,000 of inhabitants, we should have in 2100, 200,000,000; in 2200, 400,000,000; in 2300, 800,000,000; in 2400, 1,600,000,000; in 2500, 3,200,000,000. The capacity of the continent is supposed to be equal to the support of 3,600,000,000. Call such number extravagant; it is certain that these calculations fall short of those which average German, Scottish and English scholarship is now making as to the future of America.

I am aware of but three methods of estimating the future of our population. We may take as a standard of judgment either the capacity of our soil, or the law of growth ascertained by our own experience, or the law of increase exhibited by other parts of the world. Two or three methods I have already used; but take the last, and to what astonishing results it leads! This was the standard employed by De Tocqueville. Europe, under the bayonet and the cannon wheel, and the hoofs of war, charging in squadron after squadron; Europe, which sent half the population of Germany to death in the thirty years' war; Europe, staggering under a thousand impediments inherited from the Middle Ages, and unknown and likely to remain unknown in America; Europe, from Charlemagne to Napoleon, smitten, scarred, peeled and sliced, has yet attained an average population of eighty inhabitants to the square mile. Will America have a harder fate in the next than Europe has had in the last ten centuries? What shall hinder all America from ultimately as large an average population as all Europe? But we have 15,000,000 of square miles and Europe only 3,000,000. Look forward, then, to a population in America equal to the average of that in Europe, that is, to 1,200,000,000.

With whatever telescope I sweep the horizon I for one stand in awe. I set no dates; I seek to establish approximately no definite numbers. I assert only that America can sustain a larger population than Europe, Asia and Africa together; that since it can, probably it ultimately will; that we may expect as large an average population as Europe now possesses; that America is therefore yet in its infancy; that for these immense numbers of the human family we stand in trust, and that the age, therefore, has not yet ceased to be a crisis.

It would have been worth something at Thermopylæ to have foreseen Salamis; and at Austerlitz, Sedan; and at Runnymede, America. It would have been worth something to Paul, when he went out of the Ostian gate to die to have foreseen Constantine, and Augustine, and Luther, and churches on which the sun never sets. It would have been worth something at the parting from Delft Haven, or among the secreted graves on Plymouth Hill, to have foreseen the savages shut up behind the Mississippi, and church bells mingling their murmurs with the Pacific seas. But, undoubtedly, God's plans for the future are as majestic as those for the past; and so it ought to be worth something now to foresee what can be in America, and, therefore, probably will be.—From the Rev. Joseph Cook's Lecture.

Abstract of Annual Report of American Bible Society of 1877.

During the past year the following officers have died, viz: Joseph A. Maylin, Vice President; Chandler Starr and W. R. Vermilye, Managers, and Bishop E. S. Janes, of the Committee of Anniversaries.

Twenty-five life directors and 655 life members were constituted.

Only ten new auxiliaries were recognized. This small number is in accord with the present policy of the Society, to reduce the number of axiliaries to such as may be relied upon for activity and efficiency.

RECEIPTS AND PAYMENTS.

The aggregate amount of receipts for the year was $543,579 55; of this amount $188,013 05 were from legacies; from rents, $32,376 77; from foreign lands, $15,707 12.—These receipts exceed those of the previous year, $16,381 28. The payments amount to $414,807 95, and $96,400, set apart for the foreign field.

LIBRARY.

There have been added to the Society's library, one copy of King James's version of 1611; six editions of the same version, published previous to 1826; —— editions of the Rheinish Testament of 1582, 1600 and 1788; Douay Bible of 1635; Mathew's version of 1549; a quarto edition of the Vulgate of 1480; Bishop Lloyd's edition of 1701, and the Vinegar Bible of 1717.

INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

There were sold, during the exposition, 25,155 copies of the Scriptures, in forty-five different languages. This was sowing the seed far and wide. It is estimated that more than 200,000 persons entered the pavilion, and saw this manifestation of the unity of Christian sentiment and life. The British and Foreign and the American Bible Societies were here represented.

TRANSLATIONS.

The Society now has translations in progress into the following languages: Dakota, a Turkish version of the Bible, (this version will be reproduced in Arminian character;) Japanese, Gilbert Islands, Siamese and the Mandarin Old Testament, with "Shangti" in place of "Tienchee," as the name of God. Four new sets of electrotype plates for the year.

BOOKS PUBLISHED ABROAD.

The Society is now publishing books at Constantinople, Birnt, Bremen, Berlin, Paris, Stockholm, Foochow, Shanghai, Lucknow, Lodiana, Yokohoma, Bangkok and Vienna. Some versions can be published cheaper at these points than at New York.

ISSUES.

From the Bible House, 621,720 copies; from abroad, 259,330 copies; total 881,056. Issues of the Society since its organization in 1816, 34,006,822 copies. During the year there were 347 volumes, in raised letters, sent out to the blind, making a total of 10,715 volumes in the past thirty-five years, to this unfortunate class. Most of these were donations by the parent society.

GRATUITOUS WORK BY THE SOCIETY.

The Society has made the Bible the cheapest, as it is the best of all books, selling it without profit. A good reliable Bible for thirty-five cents. And yet the benevolence of the Society has for the year amounted to $230,435 68. Of this amount $78,655 have been expended in foreign lands.

MODIFICATIONS IN THE HOME WORK.

These have been mainly in the interests of economy, and of identifying pastors and churches more closely with the Society, in its great work, believing that there is such a mutual dependency between them that the one cannot do well without the other. The district superintendents have been reduced from thirty-nine to eighteen, with their fields greatly enlarged. It is expected that the auxiliaries will attend to all their affairs, and relieve the district superintendents of the annual visits made them—the district superintendent to give particular attention to those societies that cannot be relied upon to do this, and to those counties where there are no organization; that the pastors of all co-operating churches will appoint a Sabbath in each year for presenting the Bible cause; that the money that would be spent for the support of these general and local agencies be employed for the supply of the destitute with the Scriptures.

VOLUNTEER WORK.

The Society has adopted a plan for the voluntary distribution of the Scriptures, claiming that when it makes grants of books, to supply the destitution of the poorer sections of the country, there ought to be found Christian workers to distribute them free of charge. It is believed that this will furnish a pleasant and profitable employment to many, both male and female, who desire to do something in the Master's vineyard.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS.

That theirs is no sinecure office, may be seen from the following statistics:

Sermons and addresses delivered for the Bible cause, 2128; official letters sent out, 17,943; official documents sent out, 109,992; miles traveled on official duty, 216,089; raised in contributions from churches, individuals, and from sales by auxiliaries, $143,787 23.

AGENCIES ABROAD.

Dr. Isaac G. Bliss has charge of the Society's work at Constantinople, Rev. E. H. Lewis at Beyroot, Rev. S. C. Ewing at Alexandria, and Rev. M. D. Kalopothakes at Athens. The Society is represented in Japan and China by Dr. Luther H. Gulick; Uraguay, by Mr. Andrew L. Milen; in Brazil, by Rev. A. L. Blackford; and in Venezuela, by Rev. J. de Palma.

The True Riches.

There are riches which do not take to themselves wings and fly away. Banks may break, corporations may fail, business come to a standstill, yet he who has the true riches will possess his soul in patience and peace, for the true riches are essentially indestructible. It is often necessary for a man to lose his material wealth in order that he may become aware how rich he is in that which cannot be taken away from him. "As darkness shows us words of light we never saw by day," so days of adversity bring to our knowledge resources of which we were ignorant and unconscious, but which as far surpass in value and extent what we had called ours as the heavens surpass the earth.

"A still and quiet conscience" gives "a peace above all earthly dignities," and he who has this is rich, though the possessor of naught beside. If the right were always easily distinguished from the wrong, if our judgments were unwarped by prejudice or passion, if our perceptions were always clear and our conclusions always sound, if the moral and mental atmosphere in which we live were always free of mist or mirage, we might perhaps with certainty choose the right and resure the wrong. But as it is, we must be often in doubt, and in our ignorance and uncertainty are sure to fall into many errors and to lay hold upon many mistakes. He who can acquit himself of intentional wrong-doing, who bears with him a conscience void of offence toward God and man, he is rich in that which cannot be taken away from him. A genuine and sympathetic love of Nature in her various forms and moods is inexhaustible wealth. Friendship with the sky, the air, the trees, the stars, the sea, the birds, the flowers, never fails in its power to divert, to soothe, to cheer. For a time, indeed, by bereavement, by pain, by trial, the beauty of Nature may be veiled, but it shines forth again all the more potent in its spell because of its temporary eclipse. He who can evermore keep his soul in sympathy with the great soul of nature, in sunshine as in storm, may claim for his own those lines of Whittier:

"Too near to God for Doubt or Fear,
She shares the eternal calm."

A sincere interest in the general good is an unfailing source of wealth. "No man liveth to himself," though a great many men and women have no love or hope or aspirations, that does not begin and end with self. Such narrow souls, no matter how splendid may be their outward surroundings, know nothing of real felicity. The greatest joy of the noblest life is the consciousness of conferring benefits upon others. Not for self have those lived whom we delight to honor, not to hoard up gold or join lands to lands, but to serve their generation in honor, in truth, in simplicity. We often hear of those, who in such a world as this, have nothing left to live for. For such can there be anything to die for? While there is a wrong to be righted, a tear of woe to be wiped away, there is something yet to live for.

An intelligent love for literature, for art for science, for one or all of these, makes its possessor wealthy. Plato, Milton, Shakespeare have ever a welcome for the loving disciple, live he in palace or cabin. The illustrious army of great men that have made the annals of the race bright with their intellectual achievements have no frown or sneer for the humblest student who listens attentively to their teachings. Though ignored by the living, the voices of the mighty dead are full of counsel and companionship and instruction for him; nay, to him also speak continually, though not face to face, the thinkers and writers of the present time. Furrowed in the current literature of the day are the thoughts of our wisest, and he who runs may read.

An unfaltering trust in the Divine goodness is the sum of all wealth. He who has this has all things, though he be in immediate possession of but few things. Arid deserts, sterile mountain chains, the wastes of ocean, the frozen regions of the North are as necessary, so the wise ones say, to the highest welfare of this planet as are tropical luxuriance, fertile fields, productive valleys, peaceful lakes and gliding rivers. There is not one of us who has been tried in the furnace of affliction that has not found the richest joys springing from the deepest griefs. It is easy of a sunny day, when everything is well with us, to believe in the goodness of God, but when no light blesses our eyes, and we walk in darkness and cloud and storm, doubts creep in, and we need to fortify our faith, to strengthen our confidence, to rest our souls in an unfaltering trust, and wait patiently until the morning.

The War in Europe.

Russia is evidently making gigantic preparations for another great struggle in the present contest with Turkey, which will probably result in a disastrous defeat to the Turkish arms, unless prevented by extraordinary military sagacity on the part of the latter power, already weakened by loss of territory and an apparent dissension in her home government. While Russia's advance has been extraordinarily slow, more so than many anticipated, her movements have been characterized by a prudence and cautiousness that will eventually secure for her a substantial triumph and final victory. With a watchful and jealous eye the great powers of Europe are observing the progress of events which may at any moment produce a revolution of more than ordinary magnitude. While Turkey is able to hold her own, and does not show any evidence of extreme weakness, there will be no intervention by the English government, but a series of Russian successes, followed by a rapid acquisition of Turkish territory, the natural result thereof, would leave Constantinople at the mercy of a Russian army of invasion, and force England to intervene for the protection of her own interest. What course other powers would pursue in such an emergency is very doubtful at present, and entirely beyond the penetrating foresight of statesmen and diplomatists. Nations are like individuals, envious, selfish and grasping, ever auxiously and earnestly looking after that "balance of power" which has done more to disturb the amicable relations existing between friendly powers than all the other causes combined. It has been a serious barrier in the history of Europe and is materially instrumental in creating a feeling of antagonism between nations which often lead to anarchy and revolution. This plea and cry against inhumanity and oppression is a mighty and dangerous pretext for the acquisition of territory, regardless of sacred promises and protestations to the contrary. This is Russia's position in the present contest. Any government so despotic and tyrannical over its own subjects at home cannot consistently and conscientiously interfere in the internal affairs of another power for the purpose of preventing oppression abroad. Let England beware of this iron mask worn by Russia to conceal her intentions and real designs, and which may eventually prove materially detrimental to the general peace of Europe.

Keep Straight Ahead.

Pay no attention to slanderers and gossip mongers. Keep straight on in your course, and let their back-biting die the death of neglect. What is the use of lying awake at night, brooding over the remark of some false friend, that runs through your brain like lightning? What is the use of getting into a worry and fret over gossip that has been set afloat to your disadvantage, by some meddlesome busybody who has more time than character? The things cannot possibly injure you, unless, indeed you take notice of them, and in combating them give them standing and character. If what is said about you is true, set yourself right; if it is false, let it go for what it will fetch. If a bee sting you, would you go to the hive to destroy it? Would not a thousand come upon you? It is wisdom to say little respecting the injuries you have received. We are generally losers in the end, if we stop to refute all the back-biting and gossiping we may hear by the way. They are annoying, it is true, but not dangerous, so long as we do not stop to expostulate and scold. Our characters are formed and sustained by ourselves, by our own actions and purposes, and not by others. Let us always bear in mind that "calumniators may usually be trusted to time and the slow but steady justice of public opinion."

A Clever Squib from Italy.

The following squib is in circulation in un-orthodox society in Rome. It takes the form of a dialogue, the parties to which are Pasquino and Marforio, who thus discourse:

"What do you hear of the Pope?"

"Rumore." (rumors.)

"What says the rumor?"

"That the Pope is kept a prisoner."

"By whom?"

"Take away the first letter of rumore, and you know it."

"'Umore.' (by his humor or caprice.) And is the imprisonment a heavy one?"

"Take away one letter."

"'More.' (he will die in it.) And when will this occur?"

"Omit another letter."

"'Ore.' (soon.) And who will be his successor?"

"Sacrifice another letter."

"'Re.' (the king.) Which king?"

"Suppress but one letter."

"'E.' Emmanuel!"

A Colonization Convention was held at Corinth, Mississippi, a few days ago, at which there were 3500 persons. The African scheme was not favored, but places in Arizona, New Mexico, and Western Texas were considered.

Mr. Jake Marshall, of Texas, has invented a machine by which locomotives can take in wood while the train is moving. It is done by means of a platform on which the wood is placed, which recedes as the tender comes under it, and the wood falls into its proper place. It is claimed that this is a success. If it be true it will save many hours.

The political complexion of the next Senate, which meets in special session, October 15, is as follows, so far as the politics of the Senators is at present defined: Republicans 39, Democrats 33, Independent Republican 1. There are three vacancies—one from South Carolina, caused by the retirement of Senator Robertson, and two from Louisiana, one being the vacancy caused by the retirement of Senator West, and the other being known as the Pinchback vacancy, which has existed for four or five years.

The New York Tribune says: "By a recent decision in Chicago, the Newberry estate, of which half was left to found a great library in that city, must be divided at once. An appeal has been taken to the Supreme Court, but Chicago expects to have the funds in hand within a year or two. This bequest, amounting to $2,500,000, will provide a permanent income surpassing that of any library in the country, including the Boston Public, and is further interest as showing how in this country private beneficence may take the place of Governmental endowment."

Sad reports continue to come from Mysore, India, concerning the great famine in that region. A recent letter says: "The railway is taxed to the utmost limit, and is bringing four thousand tons of grain a week into the province; but as this will only feed a million and a half of people, the other three million and a half in Mysore must starve, as all the stores of grain in the country are exhausted. Already the sufferings of the people are awful; there is a regular service organized, in addition to the police, to keep the streets of Bangalore clear of the dead and dying, but outside the municipal limits dead bodies are lying in all directions; the lower castes are cooking and eating the bodies."

The funeral of M. Thiers took place in Paris, September 8, from the Church of Notre Dame de Lorette. Immense crowds attended, despite a pouring rain. The open hearse, drawn by six horses, on which the coffin rested, was covered with palm branches, wreaths of flowers, immortelles, and tri-colored bows and rosettes. The shops were all closed, and displayed on their shutters a placard bearing the words "National mourning." Everything passed off quietly and without political manifestation, even during the speeches in the cemetery. The speeches were remarkable for moderation. M. Grevy, ex-President of the Chamber of Deputies, first recapitulated the deceased's political career, particularly dwelling upon the great and patriotic sacrifice he had made by renouncing his earlier monarchical convictions in favor of the Republic. Admiral Pothuan and MM. Sacy and Vitry then variously eulogized his splendid administrative, literary and oratorical talents. M. Jules Simon made the principal oration. The funeral was very imposing. All the diplomatic corps were present, including Gen. Edward F. Noyes, United States Minister, and Hon. Elihu B. Washburne.

Southern Methodist Publishing-house at Nashville, has, according to the estimate of the Book Committee: Assets, $402,753.26; liabilities, $261,200.81—leaving balance in favor of the House, $141,552.45. The establishment is very much embarrassed by its indebtedness.

The Western Christian Advocate of the 12th instant says: "Bishop Haven was taken seriously ill on Saturday last during the session of the Cincinnati Conference. Fears were entertained that he was threatened with paralysis. At last accounts, however, he was better."

The Periodicals issued by the Southern Methodist Publishing-house have the following circulation: Christian Advocate, 9,200; Sunday-school Magazine, 13,500; Lesson Paper, 114,700; Our Little People, 68,000; Weekly Sunday-school Visitor, 15,000; Semi-mothly Sunday-school Visitor, 14,500; Monthly Sunday-school Visitor, 9,500—total 245,400.

We regret to learn, from our Mission Rooms, by the latest mails from India of the extreme illness of the Rev. Henry Jackson, of the India Conference. He has been an active missionary; speaks the Hindustani language with fluency and elegance, and has done efficient service in the school, the bazar, and the pulpit, where he is equally at home whether teaching and preaching in the vernacular of that country or his own. We hope to hear better tidings of his health soon.

We were in error in stating that [illegible] five hundred people [illegible] gathered at the Macon District Conference, in Georgia, were white people. They were colored. Rev. C. O. The Leaven in the Meal.

The leaven was taken and hid in the meal. It was an element different from the society into which it was introduced. This illustrates the nature and origin of the Gospel of Christ. It is not of this world. It is not one throne or worldly power striving to dislodge or overturn another—it is not a combination of men determined to bring about certain results. It is not a union of the philosophies and wise sayings of earth, brought to bear upon the customs and manners, and the people of the earth. No, it is none of these. It has a different source: it comes from above:—God is its author. It is a strange, warming, purifying, sanctifying influence coming down direct from the throne of the eternal. It has to do with the spiritual nature of man. It unites with the mortal but is itself immortal. It takes up its abode in that wonderful, mysterious, something we call soul. It is hid in the world and not being of the world, the world with its carnal eye cannot see it. It is known only by its effects, and these in the heart can only be understood when we come under its influence.

When the leaven is placed in the meal it begins its work immediately. So with religious truth. Personified in the person of Christ, its influence was at once extended to those around him; and these in turn catching the holy unction, started at once upon their mission of scattering the divine fire. If we admit and retain divine grace in our hearts we cannot suppress the glow of its animating impulse. If we cherish and welcome its influence its power will at once be felt. There can be no neutral ground. Either the spark will increase in warmth until it extends above all and consumes all the dross of sin; or else covered up by wicked thoughts and wicked intentions, and baffled by an ungodly will, its light will become extinguished and it will take its departure.

The leaven is silent in its operations. Small in quantity, still less in proportions, it begins its work of transformation quietly. This is the true spirit of Christianity. It conquers not as the world conquers. The emperor who would subdue a neighboring kingdom, begins by making the greatest possible preparations. He sends forth his edict that war has been declared. Orators and documents of every kind are sent throughout the land to awaken the people, until the whole realm is ablaze with patriotic fire. From hillside and mountaintop, from valley and from plain, men are seen gathering. They are collected with camps, drilled and organized with brigades and armies; and months of labor and millions of treasure are spent in procuring arms and equipments. When fully prepared they go forth followed by the shouts of millions; and amid the flashing of bayonets—the shrill notes of drums and fife—the deep toned echoes of the trumpet—the flying of banners, and the roaring of artillery they march on to victory. Not so with the workings of the leaven of the Gospel of Christ Its victories are preceded by no tempestuous shoutings, nor followed by magnificent earthly displays. It begins to work silently. It enters the province of superstition without ostentation and scatters its seed. It aspires not to high things but condescends to men of low estate. Passing the temple and palace it enters the hamlet; and turning aside from the rich who fare sumptuously, it comforts the beggar by the roadside. No sounds of revelry mark its progress; and, although men may be changed from fiends into saints—confusion and disorder into quiet and peace, barbarian into civilization; and although its mighty hammer break in pieces the graven image: and batter down the many forts of idolatry: the temple of earthly fame totter and fall to the ground; and thrones crumble beneath crowned heads—yet we listen in vain to catch the echo of the falling ruins. The majestic tread of God's providence is our world, are silent. The most stupendous of God's works are silent in their onward march. Nature, in grand, and man stands in dumb amazement, when viewing her wondrous achievements. Her operations are ever [illegible] "There is no reading [illegible] the broad tide of light [illegible] world, and floods [illegible] day bright wave [illegible] falls from the foun[illegible] tain millions of miles away. There is no creaking of heavy axles nor groaning of cumbrous machinery, as the solid earth wheels on its course, and every planet and system performs its revolutions. The great tree brings forth its boughs and shadows the earth, beneath them the plants cover themselves with buds and the buds burst into flowers; but the whole transaction is unheard. The change from snow and wintry winds, to the blossoms, fruits, and sunshine of summer, is seen in its slow development, but there is scarcely a sound to tell us of the mighty transformation. The solemn chaut of the ocean as it raises its unchanged and increasing voice—the roar of the hurricane and the soft notes of the breeze—the rushing of the mountain river, and thunder of the black browed cloud—all these are the music of nature; a great and swelling anthem of praise breaking in on the universal calm." 'Tis thus with religion; unobtrusively and silently its mighty influence goes through the world; while the aspirations of love and the sounds of praise—the shouts of joy, and the acclamations of the redeemed, are its music, pointing to its far off, eternal and all powerful source. This is equally true concerning the workings of the leaven of truth in the heart. The ear never catches a single echo of sound from that wonder working power which changes and purifies the soul. The work is a mighty one, so great is it that it is called the standing miracle of the world. It breaks the stubborn will, it crushes the hard heart, it reverses standing habits, it changes the great currents of thought, it purifies the affection, elevates the aims and enobles the desires—yet not a single echo of its wondrous movements reaches the ear.

Murfreesboro District Conference.

This body met Aug. 22nd at Lebanon, Tenn., Rev. C. Pickett, P. E., presiding. The former secretary was re-elected, and, after the appointment of the Standing Committees, the regular work of the session was entered upon with business like determination. Reports came in promptly and furnished an encouraging showing. A mighty impulse had been given to the spiritual life of the churches within the bounds of the district, and it was found that the financial interests had grown apace. The reading of the Presiding Elder's report was listened to with profound interest, partly because of its array of facts and many pertinent suggestions, and partly because it was his eighth, and consequently, his last. It is but paying a well-deserved tribute to true worth to say that during the four years of his administration he has been untiring in his efforts to build up the various enterprises of the church. That he has succeeded in placing the work upon a more permanent basis is a surprise to no one who is acquainted with his characteristic energy. The examinations were protracted and thorough. We observed no disposition on the part of the local preachers to shirk. The course of study prescribed for them will, if rigidly adhered to, develop a higher standard of attainment among them, and prepare the way for greater usefulness than has hitherto marked their career. Out of the great number of applicants for license to preach, only three were judged competent. Those rejected were urged to attend school for a session, if practicable, or, at any rate they must provide themselves with suitable books and study diligently to obtain the literary qualifications necessary to render them eligible to the ministerial office.

Resolutions were passed condemning the use of intoxicating drinks as a beverage; also discouraging the use of tobacco in any form. Short speeches from several brethren relative to the destructiveness of these giant evils, and the duty of the church to lift up her voice against them, were poured forth with the most convincing effects. Much was said in commendation of the SOUHWESTERN ADVOCATE, and of the course pursued by its efficient editor. The best reports came from those charges where the paper has the largest circulation.

Owing to the brevity of the session and the pressure of other matters, only a few of those whose names occurred on the programme of literary exercises were called out for duty. Prof. W. Patterson delivered an able temperance address. He seemed greatly impressed with the importance of his subject and treated it in a manner that produced a marked effect. At times every face brightened with laughter, and then before you were conscious of the transition almost every one might have been seen shedding tears. Some young men will doubtless become fearless champions in the struggle because of the inspiration received from that felicitious speech. Rev. J. G. Thompson, the veteran itinerant, read an interesting paper on the duty of pastors to the benevolent collections. He presented, in a condensed form, all those passages in our Book of Discipline having a bearing upon the subject, and added such comments as the occasion demanded.

Dr. Braden, who never rises up to speak without having something to say, held the attention of the Conference for half an hour, discoursing upon the relation of education to the success of the pulpit. He drew a striking contrast between an ignorant, inefficient ministry and a ministry abreast of the times in intelligence and enterprise. The demand for the first had ceased. The latter had a mission in the world. Since a thorough education enhances the preacher's power for usefulness, it should become an object of earnest, prayerful search. No preacher should be continued in the work who manifests no desire for improvement. He was heard throughout with respectful attention. The one hundred members in attendance will likely assume higher grounds hereafter in favor of an educated ministry and an educated pew. Rev. P. C. Lewis, of the Central Alabama Conference, was present the second and last day of the session. He was called out and made a brief but pointed speech, which was well received. The introductory sermon preached by Rev. S. J. Harris was a commendable effort. Bro. Harris is an eloquent speaker and is never heard but with delight. To conclude, I will say it would be hard to find a more hospitable people than those who entertained the Conference at Lebanon.

Mexican Correspondence.

The "rainy season" has thus far not been very "wet" in this part of Mexico, and ten days ago the prices of grain were taking quite an upward tendency in anticipation of a failure of crops. However, last week we were favored with several hard rains, which have greatly relieved the anxiety about scarcity of corn. But in the coming of these bountiful rains the populace see a remarkable miracle wrought by their patron saint "Our Lady of Guanajuato." The rains commenced bountifully in June and were very good for two weeks. They then ceased and during the month of July we had little showers occasionally, but no general rains. This was attributed to the perversity of the people, so many having become Protestants and abandoned the "Holy Mother Church." The Most Holy Virgin had become incensed, and must be propitiated before we could have rain. For this purpose a Novena (nine days prayer) was dedicated to her, and at the close she was taken from the altar and borne in solemn procession about the church. To propitiate her entirely it was deemed necessary to take her out of the church, which was attempted, but promptly forbidden by the Governor, as a violation of law. This was on Sunday, and on Monday the rain came in abundance, but it is confidently asserted that if the Virgin had been allowed to remain outside a few minutes longer the rain would have come on Sunday. It is proclaimed as a remarkable miracle and a proof of the protecting care of the Patron Saint. But even thinking Romanists see through the sham, and ask why it was arranged so that the Novena closed just about the time of the new moon, when the weather prophets had predicted bountiful rains? They also begin to wonder why it is that she always performs these miracles in the "rainy season" instead of in the dry. Oh, when will men cease to play upon the ignorance and credulity of the people to augment their own power?

The country has at last come to comparative rest throughout nearly all its borders, and there seems to be evident indications of a firm government under Gen. Diaz. From American papers we hear rumors of another revolution after the rainy season, but within the country there is little indication of it. The papers for some weeks have been principally occupied with the question of the frontier, and a great deal of alarm has been created by the wild, fanciful speculations of such sensational sheets as the N. Y. Herald. Nearly all its delirious imaginations and propositions are translated and republished here, being received as the sentiments of the people or even of the government of the "neighboring Republic." There has been a disposition to doubt the good faith of the United States Government, and to look upon the order to Gen. Ord as the beginning of an attempt to annex a part of the Mexican territory to the United States. The people have not forgotten the unjust war waged by President Polk in the interests of slave territory, and they think the same desire to acquire still dominates. It cannot be denied that the tone of some American papers gives nutriment to such ideas, and excites distrust. If our latest news proves true, and Gen. Ord having been called North to suppress the strike, arranged with Gen. Trevino to guard both sides of the Rio Grande, it may allay some fears. The news of the proclamation of the Commune in the States by 200,000 armed men fills us with alarm and anxiety. We can only hope and pray that it is a false report.

The work of evangelization goes steadily forward in all points of the Mission. Being hindered from making further advances into new fields because of the lack of funds, we have more opportunity to deepen the work already begun. In the congregation in this city we note a very marked progress in spirituality and purity of life. Many are coming into a personal experience of pardoned sin, and peace with God. We have recently established three new services of a social character. One is a woman's meeting under the direction of my wife, and it is having a very gracious influence. The other two are held at different times in private houses. We are working these into experience meetings as fast as we can, and already they are proving very beneficial and helpful to those who attend.

We have also organized a Temperance Society, and the members have gone to work with a will to counteract the great vice of this as it is of all other countries—drunkenness. Several of its members were formerly greatly addicted to strong drink.

The "baby" Advocate is growing in influence and beauty monthly, and promises to be a great weapon in the warfare with sin in this poor, priest-ridden country. It is a publication that would honor any press, and in mechanical finish finds no rival in Mexico. Its publication lays a heavy burden on our good Superintendent, but he is here to work rather than to be an ornament, and labors through sickness and health with an untiring zeal. More anon.

The New Orleans University.

This institution located corner Camp and Race streets, New Orleans, will begin its next term Monday October 1st. This school is under the direction and supported by the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Rust, the well-known Corresponding Secretary of the Society, has, in consultation with the local advisers, secured an able and efficient corps of teachers for the coming year.

Dr. Godman has resigned the Presidency. His parting words, published below, addressed to the students, patrons and friends of the University, will be read with great interest. They express the feelings of a noble, conscientious man, seeking to be directed always by the Spirit of God. Into his new work and responsibility he will be followed by the prayers and sympathy of all our ministers and people here. Of the "Home" and its works we will speak again.

Prof. J. S. Bean, of this city, has been selected to take charge of the University, and will act as President. Prof. Bean has, for several years been principal of one of the largest schools in this city, and has the experience and culture to qualify him for his work. Miss DeWolf who taught in the University last year, will return again. Mr. Coit, a graduate of Middletown University, the son of a Methodist minister in New Jersey, takes the professorship of Natural Sciences.

The school will open with these three teachers, and as more are needed they will be supplied.

We call upon all our friends in this city to rally to the support of the New Orleans University.

The following from Dr. Godman will be read with interest:

Dear Students, Patrons and Friends of the New Orleans University.

By God's good guidance it appears to be my duty to consecrate my efforts to the relief and direction of the ORPHANS' HOME AND THE LOUISIANA TECHE SEMINARY, I cannot successfully carry the University and the Home together any longer. Having been assured that my place in connection with the Home could not easily be filled, I have, with mingled pleasure and pain, put myself in the Lord's hands to raise the money required to relieve the Home. This severs me from the beloved University, the joy of my heart. I've never been so much attached to any work of my life as to that I've found in the New Orleans University. I should have been very happy to continue so long as to graduate the present Senior Class, to whom I am ardently attached. But the financial necessities of the Home require immediate action. The Lord's will be done. I live in hope that before many months we may return to Louisiana and devote ourselves to the blissful work of building up the Orphans' Home. Pray for us. These times are dreadfully hard. But the Lord raises up friends for His Kingdom. Our place in the University will be ably supplied and I anticipate a good year for the University. Let all the old students rally, and let hosts of others be at hand. May the Lord smile upon them and give them richly of His grace. The religious influences and experiences of the last two years have consecrated the halls of the University in our hearts. May the Holy Spirit be poured out powerfully during the coming year. Let me exhort all to love the University more and more, and to work for it. Let us make of it a pride and a glory for the ages to come. Let every Methodist in Louisiana look to it as his own charge and give it his prayers, his means. Let every charge in the Louisiana Conference give it a good collection this year. Let every family send their children and youth to their own institutions. Let none be deceived by the talk of non-denominational schools. There are none such, outside of the public schools. It is not, probably, best there should be. We can never so richly honor Christ as in building up our own educational institutions. The University will open at the appointed time, October 1, and Professors DEWOLF and COIT will be there promptly at the opening. I doubt not my successor in the Presidency will also be there then, or very soon after.

Hoping soon to renew our pleasant associations with dear friends in Louisiana, I am yours in Christ,

W. D. GODMAN.

Two Days Meeting.

There will be a two days meeting at Donaldsonville, La., Sept. 29th and 30th. An excursion train will leave New Orleans at 7:30 a. m., on the 29th, and leave Donaldsonville for the city at 6:30 p. m., on the 30th. Tickets $1.25 for adults and fifty cents (red tickets) for children under twelve. The proceeds of sale go to the benefit of Donaldsonville M. E. Church. The sale of intoxicating liquors will be prohibited on the ground. The following ministers have promised to be present: Revs. H. S. Green, M. Dale, A. M. Newman, George Walker, and others. Come and worship with us.

J. HAYWARD, Pastor.

Shaw University.

In a recent number of your paper, in an article concerning Shaw University, you made me say "ladies" of our church where I intended to say leaders. However, if you regarded the ladies as leaders, and desired to be more specific, I have no objections. Our fall term of school has just opened with nearly double the usual number of students at this season of the year. I have received $12 from Brother Campbell at Jackson, Freedmen's Aid Collection, for Shaw University. Let the other brethren send on their collections, for which they will receive credit at Conference.

Respectfully,

W. H. HOOPER.

Holly Springs, Miss., Sept. 16, '77.

Central Tennessee College.

President Braden sends the following cheering note:

The Central Tennessee College opens with nearly one hundred students, a much larger number than last year.

The prospect is that we shall be full this year. The Medical School opens Oct. 1st, with fair prospects.

Dr. Hubbard, Professor of Natural Science, accompanied the Scientific Excursion to Arkansas and Texas. The Theological Department has a fair attendance. The Scientific Association which met here on the 29th ult. was very successful. The citizens were hospitable even to profuseness. The brevity of the session prevented many papers being read.

To the Members of the Tennessee Conference, M. E. Church.

Trip tickets will be sold for one and one-fifth fares to those who attend the Conference at Shelbyville, Oct. 3d, from the following stations on the N. C. and St. Louis R. R. Tickets will be sold on the 1st, 2d and 3d of October, good to return till the 9th; McMinnville, Tullahoma, Murfreesboro, Lebanon, Nashville, White Bluff, Dickson, Jonsonville, Hollow Rock, Huntingdon, Martin, Gardner, McKenzie. Tickets must be bought during business hours of the days specified. No return tickets will be given by the Secretary of the Conference.

Our Southern Methodism.

N. D. Bush, Recording Steward of Simpson Chapel of this city (Rev. W. P. Forest, pastor,) reports that the proceedings of last Quarterly Conference show that the charge is in a prosperous condition. The pastor reported to the Conference twenty-three conversions and fifty-two accessions during past quarter. Amount raised $205.20. The trustees are now engaged in making substantial repairs to the church.

Rev. H. Green reported to the third Quarterly Conference of Sixth Street Church, New Orleans, that during the past few months, that church had raised and paid out for rent $116; $110 has been raised and put in the bank toward paying for a lot, and the church expenses paid have amounted to $50; twenty-five members have been received on probation, 3 by letter, and 7 in full connection. There have been 6 conversions and 19 baptisms. The Sunday School, under the superintendency of Bro. Lewis, numbers 40.

Rev. Joseph Gould, Presiding Elder of Baton Rouge District, says: "On making my third round I find the District ablaze with revival fire. The reports from the different appointments for the quarter are as follows: State Line Circuit, Rev. Alexander Spears, sixty-seven conversions and seventy-seven accessions; Mt. Carmel, Rev. John Wesley, forty-eight conversions and one hundred and thirty-eight accessions; Clinton, Rev. Presley Yarborough, twenty-six conversions and fifty accessions; Jackson, Rev. W. Smith, fifty accessions. And the glorious work still goes forward. Bless the Lord for his goodness."

The third Quarterly Conference of First Street Church, New Orleans, was held September 14. The Presiding Elder presided at the Conference and preached the Quarterly Sermon the Sunday night following. The appeal in the case of Bro. Henderson, was taken up and the decision of the committee which expelled him was affirmed. The pastor, Rev. H. Green, reported that $36 had been raised at a Union Meeting the Sabbath before. The Secretary, Bro. Campbell, reported the following expenses paid during the past quarter: Pastor, $205 50; church expenses, $83 40; for the poor, $13 60; repairing church, $34 80.

The Cincinnati Conference met at Xenia, Ohio, Sept. 5th, Bishop Haven in the chair. One hundred and eight responded to roll call. The following are the statistics for the past year:

Probationers 2,522, decrease 36; members 34,330, increase 832; local preachers 194, decrease 6; deaths 427; baptisms—children 511, decrease 62; adults 1,680, increase 7; churches 362, decrease 1; probable value $1,817,080, increase $123,300; parsonages 77, decrease 4; probable value $194,100, increase $2,100; Sunday-Schools 340, decrease 22; officers and teachers 4,576, decrease 118; scholars 34,369, increase 650; conversions from Sunday-Schools 2,099, increase 2; for Conference claimants $5,090, increase $118; Missionary $17,132, increase $1,601; Woman's Foreign Missionary Society $1,752, decrease $907; Church Extension $1,573, decrease $30; Tracts $240; Sunday-School Union $247; Freedmen's Aid Society $2,162, increase $101; Education $1,144; increase $669; for bishops $1,608 increase $736; for church improvements $47,000.

The population of England in 1801 was 10,000,000; of the United States 4,500,000. To-day the population of England is held at 27,000,000 and that of the United States at 45,000,000. A more striking example of comparative growth it would be hard to find. Our population has increased ten-fold; that of Great Britain two-and-seven-tenths in three-fourths of a century.

The "I Wills" of Christ.

[Instead of the Sunday School lesson, it being Review day, we give this sermon of Mr. Moody.]

A man when he says "I will," may not mean much. We very often say "I will" when we don't mean to fulfill what we say, but when we come to the "I will" of Christ, He means to fulfill it. I cannot find any passage in Scripture in which He says "I will" do this or "I will" do that, but it will be done. The first "I will" I want to call your attention to, occurs in the eleventh of Matthew, and 28th verse, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Now what is it that man wants more than rest? What do business men toil for, if it isn't for rest? Why do men spend their lives hunting for wealth, if it is not for rest? But, my friends, that is not the way to get rest. Take the pleasure seekers and ask them if they have rest. They are like the waves of the sea, perpetually troubled. My friends, the man who is away from God never knows what rest is. If a man wants rest he must take it as a gift from Him who came from Heaven to give it. There is one thing I notice, that a man goes in every direction, seeks every means, tries every person for rest before he comes to the true source. He will try to get rest in the world, in business, in honor, in pleasure, in politics, but he don't get it. But Christ will give you rest without money and without price. If there is a poor mangled one here, come to Christ to-night and confess to Him. Come to Christ, and He will take your burden away and cast it behind God's back and give that weary soul rest.

The next "I will" is in the sixth chapter of John, "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." That is as broad as the world itself. He is so anxious to have sinners He will take every one who comes. Now, why not take Him at His word? I remember a few years ago a man in Farwell Hall was greatly troubled about his soul. "Now," said I, "take that verse; what does the Lord mean when He says, 'Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out?' when He says that He means it." The man replied, "I will just take Him at His word." He started home, and while going over the Clark street bridge something whispered to him, "How do you know but that is a wrong translation?" The poor fellow didn't sleep any that night. He was greatly troubled, but at last he made up his mind that he would just believe it; and when he got to the Lamb of God he would tell Him of it, and the devil left him. Some men say, "I am not worthy to come." I never knew a man yet to go to church that was worthy. The only thing a sinner has that God wants is his sin. You need not bring your tears, your prayers, your good works or deeds; you must come to Him as a sinner, and He will clothe you in a garment fit to come before Him. The principal charge the self-righteous Pharisees had against Him was that He received sinners and ate with them. Who would have such a man around him as John Bunyan in his time? He, a [illegible] tinker; why, he couldn't get inside one of the princely castles. I was very much amused when I was over on the other side. They had erected a monument to John Bunyan, and it was unveiled by lords and dukes and great men. Why, while he was on earth they would not allow him inside the walls of their castles, yet no book ever [illegible] so near the Bible as his "Pilgrim's Progress." So it is with God. He picks up some poor, [illegible] drunk, and makes him an instrument to turn hundreds and thousands to Christ. It is a question whether there is a man anywhere who is exercising such an influence [illegible] as Sawyer. Four [illegible] he was a tramp; he had [illegible] his own mother, by [illegible] wife, and he hadn't [illegible] for fifteen years. He was [illegible] by every one, but the [illegible] stooped low enough to [illegible] some poor out-[illegible] I've got a message for you. Come just as you are. I take you as you sit there, [illegible] Thank God [illegible] such a text, [illegible] I will in [illegible] The next "I will," [illegible] man who had [illegible] to thou clean?" [illegible] Christ just as he [illegible] to see if he [illegible] there would have [illegible] man if he [illegible] as well say, [illegible] I will send [illegible] would im-[illegible] come and [illegible] it is with [illegible] to-morrow [illegible] more [illegible] to him, [illegible] Thou canst [illegible] have a [illegible] make [illegible] it [illegible] of [illegible] clean, in [illegible] the lions and the bears in the mountains. Now, my friends, the devil's mountains are only smoke. When I was in London there was a leading doctor in that city, upwards of seventy years of age, wrote me to come and see him privately about his soul. He was wealthy and nearly retired. I received the note right in the midst of the London work, and told him I could not see him. I received a note two or three days after from a member of his family, urging me to come. The The letter said his wife had been praying for him for fifty years and all the children had become Christians through her prayers. We met by appointment and I asked him if he wanted to become a Christian and he seemed every way willing, but when it came to confession to his family he balked. "I tell you" he said, "I cannot do that; my life has been such that I would not like to confess before my family." We talked for some time and he finally accepted. When he started out willingly to go home and confess Christ, I opened the door of the other room, not knowing the daughter was there, and the first words she said were, "Is my father saved?" "I ran down to the front door and called him back. "Your daughter is here," I said. "This is the time to commence your confession." With tears trickling down his cheeks he embraced his child, saying: "My dear daughter I have accepted Christ," and a great flood of light broke upon him at that confession. It ought to be the hight of our ambition to have Christ confess us in the courts of Heaven. How excited we use to be during the war when some General did something extraordinary, and some one got up in Congress to confess his exploits. If we come out for Christ here He will confess us in Heaven, before the throne and the angels. May God help you to confess Him to-night. Another precious "I will" was given to those fishermen, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men." That is the "I will" of service. If a man be a true Christian he wins souls. Peter caught more men at Pentecost than he ever caught fish in his nets. I have often thought of the remark of one of the disciples as they were together one day, "Lord we have left all and followed Thee." What did they leave? A few old fishing boats and broken nets. They were looking to those they had left behind, and a great many persons here are looking to what they will leave if they serve Him. It isn't necessary to leave the things of this life when you follow Him. It isn't necessary to give up your business if it is a legitimate one, in order to accept Christ. But you must set your hearts on the old nets by a good deal. A man don't need to be a preacher or an evangelist to be useful in God's service. See what a power an employer has if he likes. If we want to spend a life of usefulness accept Him and He will make you fishers of men. The next "I will is a very precious one.

"I WILL NOT LEAVE YOU COMFORTLESS."

"Oh! this comfort and joy. "I will be with you to the end of the world." "I will never forsake you." You may take comfort to-night. He will be with you always. You may not see Him with this eye of flesh, but you will see Him with the eye of faith.

The next "I will" is found in the fourth chapter of John, "I will raise him up at the last day." These bodies of ours are going down to the grave, but they are not going to lie there long, the Son of God will wake them up. I like a religion by which we can go to the grave of our loved ones, and feel that they will rise again. I like a religion that tells us although we sow them in corruption they will rise incorruptible, that although we sow them in weakness they will rise in power and glory and ascend to the kingdom of light. "I will that they be with Me where I am," is the sweetest of all. The thought that I will see Him in his beauty, the thought that I will spend eternity with Jesus is the sweetest of them all.

A Day of Prayer for China.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church:

DEAR BRETHREN:—We have received official notice of the fact, that the "Conference of Protestant Missionaries," held in Shanghai, China, in May last, unanimously set apart the first Sunday in October, of the present year, as a day of special prayer for the revival of the work of God, throughout the Empire of China, and earnestly requested all the churches of Europe and America to join them in such observances of the day. The churches of other denominations, we learn, have also been advised of such action had by the Conference, and the hope obtains that the observance of a day of special prayer for this great Empire will be an occasion of general and wide-spread interest. We sincerely hope that our people will not be behind any, in earnest prayer for China on that day.

B. L. DASHIELL,
J. M. REID,
Cor. Sec's of the M. Society.

The Bishops of the Church, earnestly commend the above communication of the Missionary Secretaries to the attention of the Church, and sincerely desire that the day named, may be generally observed in accordance with the request that comes to us from China.

On behalf of the Board of Bishops. W. L. HARRIS, Secretary.

Rev. S. L. Baldwin. Superintendent of our East China Mission, who was one of the Secretaries of the "Conference of Missionaries at Shanghai," in communicating the request of the Conference, suggests that in all our cities three night, or Union Prayer Meetings of our own churches, and in many of them, doubtless, of the churches of all denominations. The Conference issued an appeal, inviting the most earnest attention of their brethren throughout the world to the following statements, to-wit: That China is the largest heathen country in the world; that the Chinese, though the oldest natives are full of vigor and promise; that they are also the great colonizers of the East, while large numbers are emigrating to other parts of the world. The Conference also set forth the following indications of promise. 1. "Thirty-seven years ago, there were only three native Christians in all China, in connection with Protestant Missions. Now, there are at least twelve or thirteen thousand. 2. A much larger proportion have applied for baptism during the past year than in any previous year, and the candidates have been generally of a higher type of character 3. The Empire is more open than ever for the preaching of the Word, and the Chefoo Convention of last year, together with the proclamation agreed upon, is proving a mighty instrument towards the more effectual opening up of the most interior. 4. Not only is the country open to our efforts, but the minds of many in different quarters have been more or less aroused from their lethargy. 5. Multitudes are reading our books; and not a few are eagerly investigating the nature and bearing of Western innovations."

They earnestly appeal to the whole christian world for help.—There are still eight Provinces in which there is not one resident missionary. In others there are only two or three. They appeal to young men; to fathers and mothers; to pastors and churches; heads of schools and colleges; and all in charge of the young, to come to their help. They pray that the spirit of personal consecration may be "communicated from heart to heart, from church to church, from continent to continent, until the whole christian world shall be aroused, and every Soldier of the Cross shall come to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

New Publications.

The Metropolitan Pulpit and Homiletic Monthly closes its first volume with the September No., now before us. The publishers announce many new features for the coming year. The size of the Magazine is to be doubled. The leading sermons in New York and Brooklyn, in condensed form, will be published as heretofore; but in addition, this Monthly will give us reports of sermons preached elsewhere in this and other countries; also, sermonic criticisms, homiletic suggestions, homiletic treatment of the different books in the Bible, translations of sermons from prominent German evangelical clergymen on the Pericope, etc. The publishers propose to select freely from the prominent homiletic serials of Europe, bringing the best of these expensive important foreign serials within easy reach of American readers. The present number of this monthly contains reports of a large number of sermons preached in various parts of the world, and very many important hints and suggestions on the whole subject of sermonizing. This monthly is distinctly a clergyman's Magazine. Clergymen will find it very valuable. Price $2 per year. Published by the Religious Newspaper Agency, 21 Barclay Street, New York.

Hitchcock & Walden have lately published a little volume of unusual merit, entitled Future Religious Policy of America. A discussion of current questions in which all intelligent citizens have more or less interest. The author is Rev. Wm. Riley Halstead, a member of the Indiana Conference of the M. E. Church. His professional standing does not appear on the title page, and in the discussions he occupies the standing point of a Christian layman rather than that of a minister. The volume is one that deserves the most careful reading, for the author does not pursue throughout the common beaten track.—There is certainly no aim at being original, but he impresses one as having thoroughly thought out his way. A clear flavor of honesty, the earnestness of his convictions and the quiet courage with which he advances and maintains his conclusions, are manifest throughout the entire volume. All the subjects discussed are important, but not all of them equally so. They are: Correlations of Law and Providence; Observations on the religious Conditions of the World; Protestantism—the Nature and Needs; Skeptical Thought; Romanism; The Unsolved Religious Problem; Temperance; Priesthood of the People; American Ministry: Ministerial Aids; Inner Church Life. Several important principles are emphasized throughout the discussion and give character to the work. There are passages of unusual weight, compact sentences, clear and magnetic, that fix one's attention. We do not propose to substantiate our opinion by quotations, but desire to call the attention of our readers to a thoroughly good book, hoping they may procure it and read it for themselves.

Nelson & Phillips informs us that they are about to bring out a new and revised edition of Porter's "Revivals of Religion: Their Theory, Means, Obstructions, Uses, etc." The original work was published twenty-nine years ago and many thousand copies have been sold. It would be difficult to name a book that has exerted a better influence on the Church. The new edition will treat with special attention the new aspects of revival work, "under the labors of Mr. Moody and others, and their bearing upon vital religion and Methodism." An introduction will be furnished by Rev. Dr. J. P. Newman, of Washington City. We shall look for this new edition with no ordinary interest. It will appear early in September.

The children are eagerly anticipating October's Golden Hours, and they will not be disappointed. The number is good clear through. This magazine for youth should not only be at home by every Methodist hearthstone, but its influence would be helpful to every household in the land. Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Ohio.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of this standard eclectic for the weeks ending Sept. 8th and 15th, respectively, contain The England of Elizabeth, Edinburgh Review; instalments of "Green Pastures and Piccadilly," by William Black, and of "Pauline" by L. B. Walford; Nelson in the Bay of Naples, Blackwood; Harriet Martineau, Nineteenth Century; Norway and the Maelstrom, Spectator, John and Sarah Kemble, Temple Bar; Murat as King of Naples, Blackwood; Pictures in Holland, on and off canvass, Contemporary; Electricity in War, Nature; General Impressions, Saturday Review: besides shorter articles, and choice poetry. For fifty-two such numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3000 pages a year), the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Gay, Boston, are the publishers.

The October Atlantic does not show any sign of the sere and yellow. Mark Twain resumes his drolleries in the first of a series of papers headed "Some Rambling Notes of an Idle Excursion," Mr. Aldrich carries forward his novel, "The Queen of Sheba," and Mr. Howells completes his comedy, "A Counterfeit Presentment." Other well known writers contribute to the number. H. H., for example, has a paper on "The Procession of Flowers in Colorado," and T. A. Trollope, in "A Night in St. Peter's," gives not only his own experience in the cathedral after everybody had gone to bed and locked the outside door, but a good idea of the procession of Popes. To read "Old Fashioned Ghost Stories" will do just as well for some people as to spend a night in a great cathedral. The poetry of the number is varied, the sculptor and poet, W. W. Story, writing of "John Lothrop Motley," Edgar Fawcett of "A Willow-Tree," and John Weiss of "Crickets." More solid articles are that on "Ten Years in Early English," by Arthur Gilman, and "Crude and Curious Inventions," by E. H. Knight. The Contributors in their Club have not yet exhausted the subject of "Tourgueneff," and Judge Hilton is called up before the bench. A novelty lately introduced in the Atlantic is original music, and this time there is a song by G. P. Lathrop to music by Geo. L. Osgood. H. O. Houghton & Co., Boston, Publishers, 35 cents a number; $4.00 a year.

The October number of the National Repository has two illustrated articles,—the first by Henry B. Dawson, on "The Capture of Forts Montgomery and Clinton by the Royal Troops, October 6, 1777;" and the second by an old traveler, entitled. "Southward from the Alps." Mr. Dawson writes an interesting centennial narrative, in which some new light is thrown upon the character of General Israel Putnam and the reason why he was largely kept in the background during the great Revolutionary struggle. A pleasing sketch of "Bryan Waller Procter" (Barry Cornwall), by Hope Ledyard, follows. "Our Dilemma," by Mrs. Virginia C. Phœbus. is the history of a free colored woman in a slave State. "That Boy," by Rev. W. H. Daniels, continues, through some exaggerations and improbable situations, to approach his crisis. "Phœbe Brent's Trust," by Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, presents still more interesting features and develope some new mysteries. A neat little poem, by Ella P. Knickerbocker, with one or two selections, complete the principal part or the number. The editor has a good article on "Faith and Science," and an editorial on "The July Riots." The remainer of the Editorial Miscellany is particularly rich and readable. The National Repository is published monthly at three dollars a year, postpaid. Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Chicago, or St. Louis; Nelson & Phillips, New York.

At the late session of the Southern California Conference Rev. Mr. Adams, of the M. E. Church South, was introduced, bearing a fraternal communication, which was read by the secretary. On motion, the Conference received the communication with pleasure, and Rev. Geo. S. Hickey was appointed fraternal delegate to the Conference of the M. E. Church South.

"A Great Man in a Great Book."

SYSTEMATIC THEOLOGY,

By Miner Raymond, D.D.,

Professor in Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.

TWO VOLUMES.

Royal 8vo. Cloth, Per Vol. $3.00.

20 per cent. Discount to Preachers.

A long-felt need has been supplied—a standard of Arminian theology written by an American Methodist. Watson's Institutes served the church well for a half a century; but the style was heavy, and many topics were not discussed that have grown of late to great importance. This work, when complete, will be worthy a place beside that of Edwards, Finney, or Hodge. There are a few features of Dr. Raymond's method that attracted our special attention: 1. His summary treatment of theories; 2. His submission of every view, first of all, to the Scripture text; 3. His hasty dismissal of some points long since settled beyond controversy 4. His respectful bearing toward opponents. It ought to be read by all who are in danger of falling into the looseness of New England divines. The publishers have done their work admirably.—S. S. Encampment Journal.

The Western Book Concern has published Dr. Miner Raymond's work on "Systematic Theology," in two portly volumes, with handsome type and on good paper. The work will command attention without any help from us; it will be read by our thoughtful ministers, and its place will be settled by the carefully matured opinion of the church. The subject is of such gravity that we should be ashamed to attempt rushing the Methodist public to a decision, or to pronounce ex cathedra in favor of or against the book. The author is a professor of systematic theology, of age and reputation. Let his book be carefully studied; if it renders Whatsoever's Institutes unnecessary, let us adopt the new work. So grave a matter requires time and agreeing witnesses, and editors have no function therein except to place the new book fairly before the church.—The Methodist, New York.

In this work, by one of its chief religious teachers, Methodism has a new statement of its doctrines, orthodoxy another champion, honest inquiry an honest answer, and materialistic atheism a reductio ab absurdum. To our church these volumes are an added power, to the problem of theodicy a possible solution, and to that old serpent the devil another heel helping to break his head.

Five years ago the Board of Examiners of the Garrett Biblical Institute, a large body of eminent ministers representing all the patronizing conferences, after witnessing the examinations in his department, passed a formal vote requesting Dr. Raymond to write and publish his treatise on systematic theology which was already in verbal use, which was evidently a great improvement, for actual drill in dogmatics, upon any theological books then in existence.

Still the book was not written. Other years of reading, and thinking, and teaching were added to his experience, and, after forty years of preparation, this great work of a godly life was given to us. May it find such welcome as it has earned!—Rev. W. H. Daniels, A. M., in New York Christian Advocate.

It is the fruit of a long course of studies and teachings in the subjects discussed. * * Its first aim is to set forth very clearly and with all necessary fullness, the things believed and held as vital and most important doctrines of Christianity. Beyond mere statements, which make up the body of the work, there are arguments, illustrations, and proofs from Scripture, by which the first are made more definite, and the grounds upon which they rest appropriately indicated. The design and scope of the work are such as to enable the careful and intelligent reader to apprehend the general truths of religion, and to know what are the grounds upon which believers build their faith and hopes.—From Dr. Curry's Introduction.

The entire work is a valuable contribution to Methodistic literature, and is throughout the exhibit of a mind truly loyal to the doctrinal teachings of the fathers of our church, and in an eminent degree to the teachings of the revealed mind of God, as understood and interpreted by evangelical Arminians. We commend the work not only to the careful study of all who, in our schools of the prophets or elsewhere, are acquiring a scholastic preparation for the work of the ministry, but to all among the laity who are engaged in imparting biblical instruction to others.

The work is printed from large, clear type, on paper of superior quality, with broad margins, and is neatly and substantially bound. We are confident that it will prove an attractive and popular work. While most standard treatises on theology are couched in language too elaborate and dry to be pleasing to any but the professional reader, this one was evidently prepared with a view to its becoming the text-book of immature though intelligent inquirers. The style is accordingly perspicuous and pleasing.—Dr. Hoyt, in the Western Christian Advocate. Address,

Relief Without a Doctor.

Though we would by no means be understood as deprecating, but rather as recommending, professional aid in disease, there are multitudes of instances when it is neither necessary or easy to obtain. A family provided with a comprehensive household specific like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is possessed of a medicinal resource adequate to most emergencies in which medical advice would be otherwise useless. That sterling tonic and corrective invariably remedies, and is authoritatively recommended for debility, indigestion, liver disorder, an irregular habit of body, urinary and uterine troubles, incipient rheumatism and gout, and many other ailments of frequent occurrence. It eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers, relieves mental despondency, checks premature decay, and invigorates the nervous and muscular tissues. Sleep, digestion and appetite are promoted by it, and it is extremely useful in overcoming the effects of exhaustion and exposure.

PUTTING THE DOLLIES TO BED.

Three little waxen faces,
Six little eyes shut tight,
Two, with their crimps all braided,
One with her curls so light,
Rest on the snowy pillow.
Pray hush! a silence keep,
Step lightly across the parlor,
The dollies are going to sleep.

"Hushaby, hushaby, children,"
Sang Kitty, soft and low,
"Hushaby, hushaby, babies,
There were never such children, I know.
Such quiet, sweet little darlings,
(Matilda, don't pull Gracie's hair,)
Hushaby, hushaby, babies,
Hushaby, hushaby, there.

("Amanda, don't crowd Matilda,) Hushaby, hushaby, by,
I guess you'd go to sleep quicker
If you were as tired as I.
I've been dreffully, dreffully busy,
Had to wash, and iron and bake;
And Grace tore her best apron
And I had another to make.

"So hushaby, hushaby, dollies,
That's right, shut your eyes up tight;
And I'll cuddle down beside you
For a minute, to say good night.
Only just for a minute,
For I ain't sleepy at all,
Only tired, so hushaby,
Hushaby—hush—a—by—all."

I looked around in wonder,
At the silence all did keep,
And I found the little mother,
Herself, had gone to sleep.

Eagle Cotton Gin, Cotton Press And Machinery Agency.

W. L. Cushing, 61 St. Charles St., New Orleans. W. L. Cushing & Moore, Galveston, Texas.

AMES' PORTABLE ENGINES.—2,200 IN USE. From the uniform satisfaction our Engines have given, we feel gratified that we have accomplished our aim—to give the best, strongest and most perfect Engine in the American market.

We have received and are constantly receiving the most flattering testimonials of their utility as regards their power, simplicity, and of the general good workmanship in their construction, and we here challenge other manufacturers to build an Engine superior to our own.

All Engines made on separate bed-plate, so they can be used as Stationary Engines.

Improved Eagle Cotton Gins.

PRICES REDUCED TO $4 A SAW:

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best-built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinder of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only ten-inch cylinders, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in large-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large Stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

The bale of cotton which received the grand prize at St. Louis, and has won so many thousands of dollars at numerous fairs, was ginned on the Eagle Cotton Gin.

Prices Have Been Greatly Reduced, to $4 a Saw.

All orders should be addressed to

30 CENTS A POUND FOR COTTON.—The New Orleans Cotton Exchange paid THIRTY CENTS A POUND for a bale of cotton grinned on the EAGLE COTTON GIN, and sent the cotton to the Centennial Exhibition as the best bale of cotton ever seen in New Orleans.

CENTENNIAL PREMIUM was awarded at Philadelphia to the EAGLE GINS over all others.

Victor Sugar Mills [illegible] Cook's Evaporators,

[illegible] of machinery of our manufacture we notified that WM. L. CUSHING, No. 61 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., is our only authorized agent in that city, and no other house is authorized to sell our celebrated Victor Cane Mills, Cook Evaporators, Engines and other machinery of our make.

The Victor Cane Mills are the only ones suitable for Southern sugar cane and the Cook Evaporators the only successful ones for making sugar.

Cane growers can't afford to risk crops with light, unfinished mills, liable to break in the middle of the season; they can't afford to waste crops with mills that don't press out all the juice, or evaporators that make sugar unfit for market, and too little in proportion to the labor and fuel they require.

In purchasing the Victor Cane Mill and Cook Evaporator you get perfect sugar machinery and will have no drawbacks to contend with. Mr. Cushing is authorized to make terms and liberal discount to merchants.

BLYMYER MANUFACTURING CO.

STEDMAN'S

IMPROVED SELF-SUPPORTING

NEWELL SCREW

COTTON PRESS.

Now the Most Convenient, Speedy and Reliable Screw Press in Use.

The Advantages Secured in this Press will Commend it to the favor of every one.

1. It is so very simple in its workings and construction that any one can operate it, and there is no necessity for sending a mechanic a long distance to set it up.

2. It is all complete, with all the woodwork.

3. It may be used either as a Portable or Stationary Press.

4. The horse power being directly applied to the Screw, there is no necessity for Cog Wheels or Gearing of any kind, thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and liability to get out of order.

5. The horses occupy the room under the platform, which is less available for any other purpose, leaving the space surrounding the platform entirely clear for baling Cotton, so as to be convenient to the Press, or for storing purposes. And when it is desirable to make a covering for the Press, the same roof which covers the Press will cover the horse-walk also.

6. The Cotton is put into the Press and taken out at about the same point, making a great convenience for the operators, as they have all their work on the same floor. And the bales are already at a convenient elevation for loading in a wagon or storing away.

7. These Pressess never require any repairs; after using for thirty years they are as good as when new.

8. More Cotton can be put into the Press at a time than in any other Press, making a greater saving.

9. No Press in use puts so much weight in so small a bale. The bales, as they come from these Presses, are about square at the ends; whereas from most other Presses they are from twelve to fifteen inches higher than they are wide, making them very bulky, without a corresponding weight, while their shape makes them extremely inconvenient to handle.

10. The character of this Press is such that it is alike suited to a large or small operating force. One man and a boy can operate it to good advantage, or half a dozen may be fully employed.

11. There are no patents on this Press, except those held by STEDMAN & CO.; hence those who secure the right to these Presses will not be liable to pay a second fee.

The man tramping has his head and shoulders out of the Press all the time. The top Follower, or Platten, is hinged at each end; being made in two parts, it is thrown open allowing the top of the box to be used for putting in Cotton. No time is lost with this Press, as the Cotton is tramped in while the Follower is run down. The advantage to those who operate the Press of having head and shoulders above the top of the Press, while tramping the Cotton, instead of commencing at the bottom, after the Follower is down, will commend it to all. We use the best of oak for the Straining Beams, the Box doors are made of yellow pine or ash, and are framed together entirely with bolts, avoiding mortises and tenons, iron plates are used at all joints where any strain comes.

DURABILITY.

STEDMAN & CO., the manufacturers of the Improved Self-Supporting Newell Screw Press, have been engaged in the manufacture of Presses for 89 years. The application of the Screw for Pressing Cotton was the original invention of the late Dr. Thomas Newell, of Grand Gulf, Miss., Over 30 years ago Mr. Stedman made for Dr. Newell a Cast Iron Screw; this Screw was in constant use by Dr. Newell as a Horse Power Press for 15 years, during which time he pressed over 900 Bales of Cotton. The old reliable Newell Screw, since its invention, has been in constant use by the largest Planters, and has always been the only reliable Press in use, never requiring any repairs. The improvements which STEDMAN & CO. now offer on the old and reliable Newell Screw are such as to add to its already good qualities convenience of operating and speed.

With our improvements we do away with the three great objections to the old-style Newell Screw Presses; First, we reduce the cost one half. Second, takes up less room. Third, requires no heavy frame work in building to support the Press, and the heavy corner posts of the Press are replaced by Iron Rods. This is strictly a Portable Press, and can be moved from place to place at small cost, and at the same time it answers fully the place of the old-style Stationary Press.

It takes 8 feet less Screw to work this Press, with a ten foot Cotton Box, than any Revolving Press known, thus saving 36 revolutions in making each bale, which, providing the pitch of the Screw is 2 inches, as in all Revolving Presses, means 1,8 0 feet of travel saved to the mule each bale, or some 13 miles in making 40 bales. Price, Horse Power Press, complete, with wood work....................$200

IMPROVED CABINET ORGANS.

EXCELLING WHAT HAS PREVIOUSLY BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN POWER, PURITY AND DELICACY OF TONES.

THE LIST CABINET ORGAN

(Style No. 501.—Five Octave; Seven Sets of Reeds of Two and a Half Octaves each, and One Set of One Octave; Fifteen Stops; New Scale of Reed-Board, Reeds and Actions, with Ventrillo Chest and other Improvements, patented 1876-7. Base.—Contra Basso, 16 ft.; English Horn, 8 ft.; Viola, 4 ft.; Viola Dolce, 4 ft.; Sub-Base, 16 ft. Treb'e,—Corno, 16 ft.; Melodia, 8 ft.; Piccolo, 4 ft.; Seraphone, 8 ft.; Voix Celeste, 8 ft. Through-out.—Full Organ, (knee stop,) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up,) knee Swell, I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Franz Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The origin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Franz Liszt, in which full sonorous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of the great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry out and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new instrument was seen and tested by a number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Courier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class," evincing "extra-ordinary progress." After its receipt and trial, Dr. Franz Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

THE HUSBANDMAN.

Give fools their gold, and knaves their power,
Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall;
Who sows a field or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree is more than all.

For he who blesses most is blest;
And God and man shall own his worth
Who toils to leave at his bequest
An added beauty to the earth.

And, soon or late, to all that sow,
The time of harvest shall be given;
The flower shall bloom, the fruit shall grow,
If not on earth, at least in heaven!

Trust in a prince, his word may fail;
In friends, they soon shall die;
In health and wealth, the world's regard,
[illegible] they fly!
[illegible] own heart, 'tis faithless all;
[illegible] is insecure;
[illegible] in the Lord
[illegible] shall endure!

Purpose.

A simple word, but a word of great import, when rightly considered. That there are men whose lives are devoted to definite ends, and that there are others whose years pass by as a tale that is told, and whose acts are the caprice of whim or circumstances, is as true as anything that can be known in this world. The men of power, the significant figures in the world's total sum of golden deeds are such as have had within them an unquenched purpose, an undying lamp beckoning them on to a desired haven, object or end. The men who have breasted the blows of circumstances, have grasped the skirts of happy chance, and grappled with their evil star, are the men who have gained the golden keys of state, or have moulded its decrees, or have shaped the thoughts of their fellows, or become known as public benefactors; while those who have been content to float over the sea of life with no port in view, "as idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean," have gone down into oblivion with the millions, if not unwept, at least unhonored and unknown.

Whatever is accomplished in this world is the result of purpose. The farmer sows that he may reap; the inventor spends weary days and sleepless nights in fitting wheels and cranks to accomplish some object that appears possible to his fancy; a military captain plans a campaign for the capture of a fortress or the destruction of an army, and without plan his soldiers rush to battle and perish in vain. Not a craft moves out of port, from that of the humble fisher who sails into the west as the sun goes down, to the merchantman laden with goods for the antipodes, or the war ship, charged with thunder, but has a definite end in view, and through storm or sunshine, with fair or adverse winds, the labor of officers and men is all turned towards speeding the good vessel toward its destination. Only in a dead calm is it possible to conceive that the thoughts of crew and passengers may be diverted from the port where they expect to land when the voyage is at an end.

The great mass of scientific thought of the present age is in the direction of purposelessness.—Things are as they are, not by design say they; but rather because of a chance "survival of the fittest." But men and women in whom there survives a spirit of longing for communion with a Higher Power, doubt not that "through the ages one increasing purpose runs;" doubt not that the universe, as it is, came, not by chance, but by design.

It is very true that human purposes may be overthrown. Disastrous accident and change that come to all, may interfere with our best laid plans. The ocean strand is not covered thicker with wrecks, than are the deserts of life with the ruined hopes and plans of man. But let us distinguish: There are purposes that may perish and there are those which are sure to end in fruition. In the Christian dispensation of spiritual gifts, "every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." And Paul, likening the life of a Christian to a race, says, "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain;" and after informing the Corinthian brethren how the Christian race was to be won, without any failure, he says, "I therefore so run not as uncertainly; so fight I not as one that beateth the air." Worldly purposes good or bad may fail:

"Let no one fondly dream again
That Hope and all her shadowy train
Will not decay;
Fleeting as were the dreams of old,
Remembered like a tale that's told,
They pass away."

But there is a hope which "is as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail;" a hope which is worked out through tribulation, patience and experience; a hope which maketh not ashamed, which abides like faith and charity—Christ within the believer the hope of glory.

This hope is attainable by all and not by a favored few, who like the runners in the Isthmian or Olympic games were fleetest. Happy are those whose purpose is to gain objects sure of attainment, treasures laid up in heaven, where moth and rust cannot corrupt, or thieves break in to steal.

One of the bells placed on the [illegible] church, recently completed in the city of Rome, has on [illegible]: "The Word of [illegible]." It is only since [illegible] has been taken [illegible] that this [illegible] could be [illegible] seven[illegible] is an [illegible] sig[illegible] bell [illegible] Pope's

It Maketh a Lie.

That is Alcohol. The description fits exactly. We see the terrible ravages of this poison, the devastation of all kinds which follow in its wake, and we wonder how men commenced to use it, and for what possible reason they continue its use. It is not so with most other poisons. There are many in the paint-store and dye-shop which men never think of taking; besides many more in the drug store, which, if they take once, they never wish to take again, if they can avoid it.

But with alcohol it is not so, the more men take, the more they desire. Yet, alcohol is a poison, and it will kill; nay, it does kill more than all other poisons combined. What makes the difference? Simply this: Alcohol lies about it, saying, "Thou shalt not surely die." Other poisons hurt honestly; they burn, or gripe, or strangle; but alcohol soothes and encourages and purrs, and then strikes in the dark. It does this by stupefying the feelings; it is the nerves with which we feel everything; they tell us of the burning and the griping, but alcohol tampers with the nerves so that they do not report him correctly. It abstracts some of the water which is necessary to their proper consistency, so that they can feel correctly. True, they seem to us like very fine white threads, but they are in fact made up of strings of cells filled with soft matter like that in the brain, and alcohol in the tissues absorbs some of this moisture, thus shrivelling them for the time being, so that they are not able to report what is going on. I cannot better describe the results than in the words of Dr. N. S. Davis, in his "Verdict of Science." He says: "This diminution of sensibility, or anesthesia, is developed in direct ratio to the quantity of alcohol taken, and may be seen in all stages, from simple exemption from all feeling of fatigue, pain, and idea of weight, exhibited by ease, buoyancy, hilarity, etc., to that of total unconsciousness and loss of muscular power. It is this anesthetic effect of alcohol that has led to all the popular errors and contradictory uses which have proved so destructive to human health and happiness. It has long been one of the most noted paradoxes of human action, that the same individual would resort to the same alcoholic drink to warm in winter, protect from heat in summer, to strengthen when weak or weary, and to soothe and cheer when afflicted in body or mind. With the facts now before us, the explanation of all this is apparent. The alcohol does not relieve the individual from cold by increasing his temperature; nor from heat by cooling him; nor from weakness and exhaustion by nourishing his tissues; nor yet from affliction by increasing his nerve power; but simply by diminishing the sensibility of his nerve structures, and thereby lessening his consciousness of impressions, whether from cold or heat, or weariness or pain. In other words, the presence of alcohol has not in any degree lessened the effects of the evils to which he is exposed, but it has diminished his consciousness of their existence, and thereby impaired his judgment concerning the degree of their action upon him."

By keeping these facts in mind, you will be able to meet nearly all the excuses that are made for its use, and redeem persons who are being led away by it to certain destruction. You will see the force of the Bible declaration that "Wine is a mocker." It has been called "Satan in solution," and "the photograph of the devil." Tradition points to him as its inventor—very appropriately, since he is "the father of lies."

The same principles in the main hold good of all other nerve poisons, such as hashish, opium and tobacco; they are all given to lying, and when we view the misery and sin that everywhere follow in their train, we may well rejoice that in the blessed City of the hereafter they will be shut out with their makers and vendors and users, "and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie."

The Nashville Advocate has the following on dancing: A correspondent gives us this description of a barn-dance at a picnic, and asks: "Must we submit to the dance, and allow it to monopolize our pic-nics?" Of course not. Who ever thought of such a thing? Dance at our picnics, indeed! Indeed we want no dancing anywhere. Another correspondent says he has sent us a paper containing his views on the subject, and asks for ours. Well, we have given ours a thousand times—it has always been against this questionable amusement. As to "round dances," as they are called, we suppose they are not to be named even among the Gentiles.

Bishop Harris has appointed Nov. 15 as the time of the next session of the South India Conference, and January 9 as the time for the North India Conference.

How "Aunt Martha" Prayed Him Out.

You've met her if you've lived long in Detroit. A withered up old women, bow-backed, gray-haired, having a cane in one hand and carrying a basket of notions in the other. All who know her know her as "Aunt Martha," and she's traveled up and down and been at the depot so often that her death would be the occasion of general remark.

The old woman found a new saloon on Franklin street the other day—a place just opened by wicked Bob Smith, whose red face and bloodshot eyes have more than once been set in a frame of prison bars. "Aunt Martha" went in, hoping to make a small sale. Bob was wiping his glasses, and half a dozen men sat around the stove holding glasses or smoking cigars.

"Git out!" growled Bob, as the old woman entered. She did not hear him, and, leaning over the counter, she asked:

"Would ye have a paper of pins—a cake of soap—a comb, or something?"

"Git out, you old beggar!" shouted Bob, raising his arm as if he would strike.

"I'm no begger, and don't you dare to strike me!" replied "Aunt Martha," never moving an inch.

"Why, what's to keep me from wringing your old neck, if I want to!" inquired Bob.

"The Lord, sir," she answered.

"Ho! ho! ho!" laughed Bob. "There, take that!"

And he deluged her with rinsings. The filthy liquid struck her in the face and ran down over her faded black shawl and oft-washed calico dress, but she did not move. Looking at him across the counter she whispered:

"You need praying for, and I'm going to do it now and here!"

"No you don't!" he shouted, as she moved toward a chair; "get out of here or I'll smash your head with this bottle!"

She never minded him, and he raised the bottle for a throw, when a sailor—rough, dissipated, but having some manhood left—leaped up and cried out:

"Bob Smith, if you throw that bottle at her I'll stave in your bulwarks in one precious minute!"

"You will, eh" whooped Bob, as he danced out.

"Yes, he will!" cried the rest, all rising up.

There were too many for Bob, and he had to stand there while Aunt Martha knelt at a chair and prayed for him.

She was still praying when he dashed out to kick her, but "Foxy Bill," who had come out of State prison only a month ago, grabbed him by the throat, forced him into a chair, and hissed:

"Bob Smith, if ye harm a hair of that old woman's head I'll make a funeral here!"

"Aunt Martha" knelt again, folded her hands and said:

"These young men were children not many long years ago, and some of them had praying mothers and God-fearing fathers. They are walking in wicked paths, and their hearts know no good. I pray that their eyes may be open to their wickedness, and that their feet may be turned into other and better paths!"

"She's right!" called out a steamboat man as the old woman paused.

"Shoot me if she haint!" cried another.

"Go ahead, mother!" shouted a third.

"No, she won't!" yelled the infuriated Bob, and he reached her and gave her a heavy kick before any one could interfere.

She screamed with pain as she rose up, and then there came a terrible silence. Bob stood with his arm raised to strike.

"Aunt Martha" leaned on the chair, tears rolling down her wrinkled cheeks, and the half-dozen men were spell-bound with indignation. "Foxy Bill" broke the silence by saying:

"Step out of doors, mother, and look out for splinters!"

She obeyed, and Bob Smith was choked and pounded until his senses left him, and everything that could be handled was thrown out of doors. They worked swiftly, fearing the police, and in five minutes the saloon was a wreck and its proprietor, still unconscious, was lying behind the counter. Their work finished, the men disappeared like shadows, and "Aunt Martha" hobbled away, whispering:

"I prayed too hard, but it was in me to pray."—Detroit Free Press.

Mr. Moody tells of a London preacher who would gather great crowds about him, and then preach on, and on, and on, until every one of his hearers had gone and left him alone. When asked why he insisted on tiring out and disgusting his audience, he answered that it seemed a pity to stop as long as anybody was willing to hear any more. Possibly that is why some speakers make such long speeches to Sunday-schools.

Capital from England for Alabama.

During my short stay in England I have observed that the iron and steel manufacturing interests of Great Britain have, for some time, been anxiously looking for an opportunity to change their base of operations, on account of the increased and increasing scarcity of coal and iron in this country and the greatly increased expense of mining and working these deposits. The great depths, in many cases under the sea, from which coal is excavated, involving immense expense in elevating it and keeping the mines free from water, together with the increasing scarcity and difficulty in obtaining iron ores, has turned the attention of English capitalists to the coal and iron fields of the United States, especially the Southern States. This feeling is becoming more and more intense, and seems to be concentrated on Alabama. Immense coal deposits, in immediate proximity to iron, brown hematite and limestone, are found in the vicinity of the English town of Birmingham and Oxmoor furnaces, near the junction of the North and South and Alabama and Chattanooga railroads, are being operated with great success. The coal is of excellent quality, easily mined and transported; and iron can be manufactured cheaper than at any other point in the world. I form this opinion from my own personal observation on the ground last winter. The recent action of the English committee of holders of Alabama 8 per cent. gold bonds of 1870, will result in great advantage to the bondholders, as well as prosperity to the State. In lieu of money or of any payment by the State, the bondholders get land, by selling which they are to recoup themselves, 10 per cent. of the sales going to the State, the lands being conveyed to trustees for the bondholders. Nearly the whole of the thousand bonds have been surrendered to the committee, and doubtless the remainder soon will be, as the State has taken care to liberate itself from all liability on the bonds in conveying the lands to the trustees for the bondholders. A general meeting of the bondholders is called for the 10th of September. It is now proposed to concentrate all the English interests in Alabama, including the railroads, which are immense, into one general office in London, and develop the State by further use of English capital. The success of the English capitalists with your Illinois and Michigan canal and other similar enterprises leads them to have great faith in the Alabama movement. The immense capital engaged in the production of iron and steel in this island must, at no distant day, be diverted to more favorable localities, and Alabama seems to be the chosen spot. Experiments already made have satisfied experts that pig iron can be produced there, of a quality and at a rate defying competition from any quarter, not excepting Missouri, Pennsylvania or the Lake Superior region. Arrangements are being made here for the formation of colonies and mining and emigration companies to settle the lands and work the mines. There will doubtless be a heavy emigration to the State from this country of both miners and agricultural laborers the coming season. The fine climate, rich soil and cheap lands invite, and combination of capital insure such emigration.—London Correspondence Chicago Times.

Missionary Notes.

The new church at Calcutta is a wonderful help to us. It is well attended, and no week passes without conversions. Dr. Thoburn finds the pastoral work of such a church, added to his duties as a presiding elder, to be very pressing. A boarding and day school have been added to the work in Calcutta.—"Seventy pupils, five teachers, and no debt is a good record concerning this new enterprise. Dr. Thoburn pleads for more men, "safe men" he designates them. He is "more convinced that they can build up a solid work in their conference, but need sound men at the foundation."

Protestantism is productive of commerce and industry, of science and wealth; but the Roman Catholic Bishop of Havana says: "Such is just the proof that Protestantism is fallen into heresy. Remember, my beloved children, the temptations by which the devil tried Jesus Christ. In the third he showed him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory thereof, and ventured to promise all to him if he would fall down and worship him. Frantic Lucifer, such is the reward of apostacy!" Well, well! And yet Dr. Butler, in the face of such fulminations, has the temerity to print, at the Methodist Mission Press, in Mexico, a translation of Gladstone's "Protestantism and Catholicism, in Relation to the Liberty and Prosperity of Nations!" And here it is, a good-looking pamphlet, and, we judge, in good Spanish, and not likely to please frantic Lucifer.

Frederick Douglass to the Colored People.

Mr. Douglass is acknowledged to be one of the ablest colored men in this country. The following advice to his people will be read with interest:

"Mr. Douglass told the colored people that they were in contact with the most indomitable, the most enlightened race in the world, and that he would be false to his own race if he did not tell them just where they stood—what an immense distance they were behind the white people. He did not believe the colored people were fundamentally and eternally inferior to the whites, but they are, nevertheless, practically inferior. "We must not talk about equality until we can do what white people can do," he said. "As long as they can build vessels and we cannot, we are their inferiors; as long as they can build railroads and we cannot, we are their inferiors; as long as they can found governments and we cannot, we are their inferiors." Coming down on the boat on Saturday night, he noticed that one hundred colored people aboard made as much noise as five hundred white people would have done, and as long as they do these things they are inferior to the whites. "If in twenty years from now the colored race, as a race, has not advanced beyond the point where it was when emancipated, it is a doomed race," he said. "The question now is, Will the black man do as much for his master (himself) as he used to do for his old master? Do you, my colored friends, get up as early now to work for yourselves as you used to for that stern old Roman, Samuel Hambleton?" He told the colored people that they must get money and keep it if they wished to elevate themselves. One trouble with them is that they always want to be going somewhere, and do not stay in one place, or at one thing, long enough to accumulate. A poor people is always a despised people. To be respected they must get money and property. Without money there is no leisure; without leisure, no thought; without thought, no progress. Their preachers should tell them more about what to do and less about what to feel. They should cultivate their brains more and their lungs less. They should not depend upon being helped, but should do for themselves. He was tired of Ethiopia holding out her hands. They should not depend upon the Lord for everything. The Lord is good and kind, but is of the most use to those who do for themselves. No man has a right to live unless he lives honestly, and no man lives honestly who lives on another.

A Hindoo Punishment for Lying.

If any person is proved to be a liar he receives the punishment of the law, which requires that a liar shall have his mouth sewed up. The offender has his hands tied behind him, he is led out to a post in a public place, is fastened to that, and one of the officers of the government appointed for that purpose sews up his lips with a needle and thread. Then he is allowed to go. And everyone who sees his closed lips, and the blood flowing from them, can say to himself, "There goes a liar!" What a disgrace that sewed-up mouth would be to a man!" And when people look at him, how he would turn aside his head and cover his face so they should not see the mark of shame that was upon him. Suppose all people in this city who are in the habit of lying were to be punished this way to-night, and were obliged to go out to-morrow I wonder how many sewed up mouths we should find in walking through the city. We do not always know who are liars, but God knows. And it is remarkable that there are two passages in the Bible which show us that God will deal with liars, in a way similar to this. I do not mean that it will be by actual sewing up their mouth, but really by closing them somehow or other. David tells us that "the mouths of them that speak lies shall be stopped." (Ps. lxiii: 11.) Solomon tells us that "a lying tongue is but for a moment." (Prov. xii: 19.) And in another place David says that "lying lips shall be put to silence." Ps. xxxi: 18.)

We are not told how God will do this, but we may be very sure it will be in some way that will fasten shame and disgrace on those who have prayed earnestly as David did, "Deliver my soul, O Lord from lying lips."—Sunday-school World.

A colored man named Ben Montgomery died recently in Mississippi. He was once the personal servant of Colonel J. E. Davis, the brother of the Confederate President. While a slave he had charge of the greater part of the estate of his master, and after the war he purchased the former home of President Davis.

The Four Testaments.

There are four Testaments, you know—the Oldest Testament, the Old, the New and the Newest. The Oldest Testament is the nature of things. It is not written, but it was proclaimed when the morning stars sung together for joy. Then we have the Old Testament; then the New; and the Newest is the present activity of God in human history. Your Lincoln said of our harvest, "No human hand has produced these blessings." So of the spiritual harvests in every age. We must say that they came from the Unseen Holy. Through His life of love in the history of the world is turned the autograph writings of Almighty God, and that writing when interpreted, I call the New Testament. Oldest, Old, New, and Newest, all say one thing; and when I take a text out of the Oldest, as I have done this morning, I am preaching on all the cans and the cannots of the Old and the New, and on all the flaming proclamations of God's justice in the very latest rustle of the leaves of the ages—some of them soaked through with bloody tears, as in the case of our own civil war. There are no dissonances among these books, and he who understands one will understand the other.—Joseph Cook at Lake Bluff.

Curiosities from the Gulf of Mexico.

Here on the shores of the beautiful Gulf some very peculiar shells and sea-curiosities are found. Who would not like to have at least a few of them. Our German S. S. offers you the following:

For 25 cents we will send you 3 starshells. Very beautiful.

For 50 cents we will send you 6 starshells and a variety of other small shells.

For $1 we will send you 6 starshells and a neat collection of small and medium sized shells.

For $1.50 we will send you a neat collection of starshells, seabeans, and other shells.

We know you will be well pleased with these shells.

The fund derived from this source will be used by us to pay for our new Chapel, which we are now building.

The Pearl of Great Price.

Would there were more Rowland Hills. When Lady Erskine was passing the great crowd that had gathered to hear Mr. Hill, she instructed her coachman to drive as near as possible to him, that she could hear the renowned orator. Mr. Hill soon learned who was one of his hearers, and said, "I have something to sell at auction to the highest bidder. It is worth more than the crown of Europe—it is the soul of Lady Erskine. Who will bid for her soul?" Satan bids. "What will you give for this soul?" "I will give riches, honor, pleasures, the whole world for her soul." "I think I hear another bid. Who bids?" The Lord Jesus Christ. "What will you give for this soul?" "I will give peace, joy, comfort and eternal life." Turning to Lady Erskine, Mr. Hill said, "You have heard the two bidders for your soul, which shall have it?" Pushing her footman aside, she went through the crowd weeping, and exclaimed, "The Lord Jesus Christ shall have my soul if he will accept it."

"AS."

That little word has cost me more trouble than the whole vocabulary of the English language. It often makes me tremble from head to foot; and frequently brings tears to my eyes. It is not the two letters of which it is formed, or just the word itself, but the place which it occupies in one of the petitions of that inimitable prayer which Jesus Christ taught to his disciples; "Forgive me my debts AS I forgive my debtors." There it stands as the deciding index on the beam of the balance, while in one scale is placed my prayer for forgiveness; and in the other the exact weight of my pardon. As I forgive, so, Lord, forgive me.

We repeat the Lord's Prayer from earliest infancy to our dying day; yet if we indulge in an unforgiving spirit, we unconsciously plead for punishment, instead of mercy. The question is, can I conscientiously use the argument, "for I also forgive every one?" And, if not, can I expect my sin-darkened soul to be washed and made whiter than snow.—N. Y. Observer.

God's Plans Require Time.

The leaven in the meal does not do its work at once, but requires time. It does not operate upon the mass as a whole, but it operates upon the particles comprising the mass, first upon those nearest to it, and then upon the next, and so on until it transforms the whole. This illustrates, perfectly, the manner in which God works. The development of his plans require time. He uses means to bring about ends. The church is a means, the mission of which, is the conversion of the world. To reach this end, great changes must be brought about; old nations must pass away and new ones must be built up—customs and laws as ancient as the hills must be changed; and great lessons, which require ages to learn, must be well understood. To bring about these changes, God makes use of slowly working instrumentalities. Gradual development is the law of the present system. Around this, all other laws cluster, and to this, all considerations must bend, both in history and experience.

The world learns religious truth slowly. Nations are God's pupils; time is their term of study. It required ages for the world to prepare for the advent of our Lord; and after He came, although He was the embodiment of all truth, and spake as never man spake, yet, there must be terrible conflicts; the foundations of society must be shaken to their very center; the world must be drenched in blood, many long and weary years intervene before the deeply-rooted prejudices of the human heart could be so overcome, that the first principles of Christianity could be understood and promulgated. How many centuries have been required to teach the world that it is God's will that Church and State should remain separate? And even now, after so many terrible collisions and hard fought battles between these two powers, but a single nation has rightly learned this lesson.

Notice that plainest and most self-evident of duties—religious toleration. It is based upon the most simple of facts, viz: that no two men can look through the same eyes, and yet, how slow has the world been in learning this. The old continents waded, for ages, through bloody persecutions; but not until a new continent had been discovered—exiles driven to a barren shore—Washington raised up, a revolution fought, and America born, was this duty fully learned.

Nations are schooled by slow degrees. If one opposes the progress of religion, and is to be conquered, the conquest is not the work of a day or a year. The leaven must be thrown in the midst of a conglomerate mass of fallen, and degraded, and bigoted humanity, and then its silent, gradual work begins; changing, overturning and remodeling, perhaps, for centuries, until here in a lowly cottage, there in some forsaken street, yonder in some distant rustic nook, seeds begin to spring up; these must reproduce and scatter, and so on until the briars and thistles of sin are all rooted out.

Individual piety is not the work of a moment. A man is not changed from a sinner to a saint in an instant. It is true, the operations of the Holy Spirit are instantaneous, but that work will not be done until we open our hearts to its influence. To do this, our minds must be enlightened; conviction deep and pungent, must do its work; we must see ourselves helpless, condemned and undone before God. After our hearts are cleansed, we are men in Christ, undeveloped. Just as the helpless infant—every bone, sinew, and muscle is perfect; yet perfect in weakness. There must childhood, with its joys and sorrows, its rompings, plays and wanderings to develop, and manhood with labors and sorrows, to harden every part. So with the Christian; first we are babes in Christ. Our hearts have been changed; everything is new—new thoughts, new motives, new desires and aims; we are joyous and happy, and our resolutions are strong. But these are but the bones, sinews and muscles of the spiritual man, perfect in weakness. By degrees, victory, by storm and sunshine, by [illegible] and success; by [illegible] and weary hours of [illegible] are to be developed into the full [illegible] graces, such as [illegible] and love, hu-

New Orleans Gambling Houses

In spite of prohibitory laws, gambling houses are upon all the principal streets of New Orleans. The Picayune publishes a list of them, and calls upon the city authorities to suppress them. The New Orleans Christian Advocate, of last week, has a good editorial on the subject, which we quote entire:

Owing to the political influence of these gambling institutions have the city authorities concluded that it is inexpedient to enforce the law? It is time for the people who are in favor of good morals and an honest administration of city affairs to wake up to the fact that the highest interests of the community are being neglected or betrayed by those whose business it is to protect them. After all the promises of reform, and the bright anticipations of a better era, we are still the victims of a policy that ignores the existing laws, and that winks at their habitual violation. In some way public opinion should have such expression as to make itself respected. The city administration should be in the hands of capable and honest men, of men who are not afraid to enforce the law against vice, and who are heartily in sympathy with virtue and good order.

The present state of things may be largely owing to the attitude of inaction and indifference which characterizes the better class of citizens. They are generally content to leave the nominations in the primary meetings and conventions to the ward politicians, and to those who are intent upon the spoils of office, and who care nothing for the moral welfare. If the immediate responsibility lies with the mayor and council, and an inefficient police, the ultimate blame rests with the people themselves, by whose suffrages unfaithful men are put in office. Protests against this tolerance of gambling-houses in the face of the law which prohibits them, and the pressure of public opinion against this official negligence, may have some effect. The only effectual remedy, however, is to raise and purify the morals of the people, and to elect men to office who are neither trimmers nor time-servers, and who have the courage, vigor and integrity to enforce the laws against crime of every sort.

The fact that we have a mammoth gambling organization called "The Louisiana State Lottery Company," licensed by the State, does not, of course, palliate the negligence of the authorities to suppress private gambling-houses. The effect, however, upon the public sentiment is unfavorable. Until we have a Legislature that will repeal the law that established the Lottery Company there will always be this obstacle in the way of putting down gambling. The principle is recognized and approved by a law of the State in connection with an authorized monopoly of this phase of iniquity. Gambling regulated by law may be subject to fewer abuses, and attended by fewer vicious associations, than when left to itself and divested of all restraint; but the principle is the same, and is far more mischievous and wide-spread in its influences, because sanctioned by legislation. As between the private gambling-houses and the State Lottery, bad as the former are, we do not hesitate to say that the latter is the more objectionable and pernicious. The ax will not be laid at the root of the tree until the State Lottery is overthrown, and the law which established it has been repealed.

In the meantime we trust that our people will press this matter of suppressing gambling-houses upon the attention of the city authorities. When they find that the people who represent the property, business, intelligence and moral worth of the community are in earnest about the matter they may be constrained, however reluctantly, to see that the laws are enforced.

The Jetties.

A late visit to the jetties convinced us that all doubt as to the success of this great public work may now be cast aside. Capt. Eads has triumphed in spite of every species of opposition, fair and unfair. His experience is similar to that had by the great engineer who jettied the Danube. The latter was criticised and opposed by the official engineers of Germany and Austria, and every possible obstacle thrown in his way. But he triumphed and now the Danube jetties are a fact. Capt. Eads wanted the Southwest Pass to jetty, and when the bill was about to pass Congress the enemies of the measure inserted an amendment giving him South Pass. South Pass had for years been closed to all navigation having only a few feet of water at the mouth and fewer feet at the head. This greatly increased the difficulty, but nothing daunted Capt. Eads went to work. Up to this time over two million dollars have been expended. Five miles of jetties have been build at the mouth, extending two and a half miles into the gulf. Through this a channel, broad and deep, has already been washed. Only here and there are lumps of hard bottom not yet washed out. These are all that obstruct a through channel of twenty-five feet. The Jetty Company have built a powerful dredge boat in Pittsburgh to excavate those obstructing lumps and carry the material into the Gulf. As soon as the river rises sufficiently this boat will leave Pittsburgh. It is capable of excavating 30,000 yards a day—and will be at work early in October.

The jetties to-day furnish a clear channel of 21 feet. The number of yards now necessary to be removed in order to furnish a 22, 23, 24 and a 25 foot channel 100 feet wide, are as follows. These estimates and figures being furnished to us by Mr. E. L. Corthell, resident engineer of the Jetty Company:

For a 22 foot channel through the jetties, 1000 cubic yards.

For a 23 foot channel through the jetties, 2000 cubic yards.

For a 23 foot channel through the head of passes, 200 cubic yards—total 2200 cubic yards.

For a 24 foot channel through the jetties, 3000 cubic yards.

For a 24 foot channel through the head of the passes, 2500 cubic yards—total 5500 cubic yards.

For a 25 foot channel through the jetties, 10,000 cubic yards.

For a 25 foot channel through the head of the passes, 4000 cubic yards—total 14,000 cubic yards.

The facts as stated are sufficient to demonstrate to a certainty that the largest draught vessels can now come and load at this port. A few days' work of the James Andrews will enable them to load to their deepest line.

Justification is by Faith.

Faith is the instrumental means without which no man can be justified, and saved from sin. Faith does not make a man worthy of salvation, for lack of worthiness is met by God's infinite love. But neither the death of Christ, nor God's love, of themselves can save, for "without faith it is impossible to please God." The words of Christ to Nicodemus explain this: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Paul, to the Romans, asserts, proves and illustrates the doctrine announced to Nicodemus.

Reason proclaims what Revelation asserts. Sin, its consequences and man's inability to relieve himself from its power, are tremendous facts, evident to every observer of human nature and human society. Help must come from some higher source than man. An evil beyond human help can only be remedied by some superhuman agency. That which is above human skill to plan, or human power to command, can only be accepted by faith. Experience and observation prove that salvation from sin is beyond human skill and power, so it follows that salvation can only be by faith.

The great African explorer, Henry M. Stanley, has completed his trip across the continent of Africa. He left Nyange, Zanzibar, on the eastern coast Nov. 15th, 1876, nearly a year ago, and since that time not a word has been heard from him, until a few days since letters were received from him in London, dated Aug. 10th, 1877. He wrote from the Congo river on the west coast of Africa. The story of his journey tells of almost continuous war with the natives, and of a series of hardships which would have conquered any but the most resolute and daring. His one hundred and forty native guards who started with him forsook him. Many of his men were killed with poisoned arrows from the natives, and some died of fatigue and disease. Stanly kept his diary and observations regularly, so that soon we will have another book on Africa, telling us of its geography and people.

The war in the east goes on with horrible carnage. The loss of life is very great. Several thousands have been killed and wounded the past week. Besides this dreadful loss of life on the field, the two nations, Russia and Turkey, are feeling the effects of the war at home. The enormous debts are being increased. Turkey has made a forced loan, making no exceptions, save the officers and soldiers in the field. The religious and charitable societies are called upon to give their valuables from their mosques and private vaults, so they can be pledged to secure loans from foreign governments. On the field, the center of interest has been Plevna. It was at this point where, a short time since, the Russians suffered a great defeat. Since then the Turks have held Plevna against several terrific assaults from the Russians, in which the loss has been fearful. It is now reported that the attack on Plevna has been temporarily abandoned, which means, if true, that the Russians are unable to take it. The Russians still hold Schipka Pass in the Balkan mountains, but their position is reported critical as there is danger that the Turks will cut their communications with the main army. The Turks are thus far victorious, and their continued successes, first in Asia and now in Europe, have had a profound effect on public sentiment. The "sick man" is found to be a wonderfully well man when put on the defensive.

Affairs in France are becoming more and more serious as the time of election—October 14—approaches. The death of Thiers removed the ablest Republican leader in the nation. Gambetta, the next ablest leader, has been arrested, charged with speaking against President MacMahon, and sentenced to pay a heavy fine, and to imprisonment, which, as we understand the matter, disfranchises him for five years, so that he can have no voice in politics. Nearly every day some Republican newspaper or some Republican leader in some part of the nation is being threatened or silenced. On the 19th President MacMahon published his manifesto, in which he sets forth his views. While professing to be true to the Republic, he says that elections favorable to his policy will facilitate the regular conduct of the existing Government. Hostile elections would aggravate a conflict between the powers, as well as impede the course of business; and he maintains that France, in the midst of these complications, would become for Europe an object of distrust. This is simply a threat to overawe the weak, and to prepare the way for greater assumptions of power, if the election does not go to suit him.

President MacMahon is paving the way we fear for the destruction of the French Republic.

The storm which swept over the Gulf States last week was one of great force and did much damage. The water protection at the old lake end, built by this city at an expense of $200,000 a short time since, was washed away. Great damage is reported to the crops. The wind blew a continued gale for two days, and rain fell in torrents at short intervals. In Alabama the Warrior river suddenly rose sixty-three feet, and destroyed everything, (cotton, corn, &c.) It is doubtful whether the necessaries of life can be secured by the farmers in the valley. The steamer Gussie, of Morgan's line, from Indianola to Havana, arrived at Port Eads, disabled, last Tuesday, having broken one of her shafts. On the 19th the Captain sent out a boat with the mate and five men, to go to Port Eads for assistance, supposed to be about thirty-eight miles distance. The men have not been seen or heard of since. Reports from several of the parishes in this State speak of great damage to crops. Cotton and cane were blown down and covered with water.

The Rev. Wm. Moores, Downey City, Cal., sends the editor of the Nashville Advocate for the Vanderbilt Museum a ball of hair which came from the stomach of a cow. It is about the ordinary size of an orange. He says he has had it about twenty-five years. It used to be hard, and looked as if it had been glazed, without a crack. In licking herself a cow swallows her hair, which, revolving in her stomach, becomes compacted in a round mass.

The Roman Catholics are making special efforts just now for the conversion of the Indians. They organized two years ago the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions, which appeals to the faithful for funds and publishes, annually, accounts of the missions. The Catholic Review, in an editorial on the second annual report, says: "The report also chronicles the increase which has been made in the number of churches and schools among the Indians during the four years since the Catholic Indian Bureau has been in existence. In 1873 the church had only two boarding and five day schools among them. At present there are eleven boarding schools, kept by Sisters of Charity, brothers, or by priests, and seventeen day schools. There are also fifty-three churches under successful administration, and the total number of missionaries and teachers has increased within two years from 117 to 137."

The Detroit Conference has established a most important precedent. It placed a brother on the superannuated list in spite of his earnest protest. There was nothing against his moral character, and the brother thought he was still an efficient preacher. The Conference however thought otherwise, and superannuated him. The action in this particular case may or may not have been just, but the precedent is a very important one. The Michigan Christian Advocate expresses our sentiments exactly when it remarks concerning this case:

We are gratified to know that there exists in the conference, not only the abstract power which was always understood, but the loyalty to God and the Church to put a man out of the ministry when satisfied of his inefficiency. It will be of immense moral force in clearing the decks of stragglers, that it be distinctly understood that a man must earn and deserve his place, year by year, or lose it. We shall be sorry if it transpires that there is no door out, but that which opens into a superannuated relation.

For once we can heartily shake hands with the New Orleans Christian Advocate over its position on fraternity between the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church South. That paper says:

"About the conditions of fraternity, it is enough to say that formal fraternity has been established without mention of any. No apologies for the past are expected of us, none are expected of them. Such treatment as good breeding and Christian charity demand is all that Southern Methodists require, in order that the feeling as well as the form of fraternity may be cherished by them."

So say we. Such treatment as good breeding and Christian charity demand is all that the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South require, in order that the feeling as well as the form of fraternity may be cherished by them.

There are some statements in the editorial from which the above is quoted from which we wholly dissent, but they are of minor importance.

Bishop Haven, in the Independent, has a word on the reported failure of Methodism in large cities, and shows that Methodism has been only nine per cent. less successful in old established cities than in the country. He adds:

"Its Congregational brother has no such deficit. That has had no falling off in New York City. It had two churches in 1844. It has two to-day. Although one of the original twain has long since died, another has been born to its place. Mr. Hepworth kindly consented to join their Association, in order that Dr. Cheever's demise, deplored for so many years, might be made good. It is asserted, however, that Mr. Hepworth is still an independent. If so, New York Congregationalism has suffered a loss of fifty per cent. in this thirty years. We sincerely hope that he has joined the Association."

Tweed has made a complete exposé of his bribery transactions in getting the charter of New York City, through the New York Legislature. He bought up Republicans and Democrats, spending in all $600,000. The charter passed, and the city was robbed by Tweed and his partners of millions of dollars. The whole revelation is deeply humiliating to the American nation. Tweed says he has the documents to prove all he says. If so, let them be produced, and let every offender have his just deserts.

Bishop Harris presides at the following-named conferences: Holston, at Knoxville, September 27; Tennessee, at Shelbyville, October 3; Georgia, at Dalton, October 11; Alabama, at Andrews Institute, October 18; Central Alabama, at Dadeville, October 25; and Savannah, at Savannah, November 1.

The Memphis Advocate says it is reported that Edwin Booth realized $52,000 from his Southern trip, while the Southern Methodists of the Memphis Conference only paid their eighty pastors $45,823 53. One man's playing fifty nights cost more than eighty men's preaching one year.

The Flat River Baptist Association of North Carolina has adopted a resolution requiring the churches to report the number of moderate drinkers and the amount of liquor distilled by churchmembers. One of the speakers thought the churches ought not to be afraid to dismiss distillers and drinkers. Another thought the churches should be patient and forbearing with those who had contracted the habit of drinking.

The trouble in the English Established Church is increasing. It is said that 100 peers of the realm have signed a memorial to the Bishops expressing "alarm and indignation" at the introduction of Auricular Confession, and urging the Bishops "publicly to express their condemnation of the system, and withdraw all countenance from those who favor it."

Cardinal Manning has issued a mandate compelling parties to mixed marriages in England to content themselves with the Catholic service and to omit the Protestant. He also gives the church absolute control over the education of children.

Some of the women in certain villages of China having suffered so much from opium, appeal to the government for "prohibition," and touchingly say in their appeal, "Our beds have no coverlets, our cooking utensils no food, and our tears are red with blood" because of opium.

The Bible is being printed at the rate of more than a million copies every year, or five copies for every minute of working time.

Mr. Moody is going to work in the smaller cities of New England during the winter.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. L. L. Shumpert, Vaiden, Miss., says: "At a meeting now in progress there have been twenty-four conversions and twenty-two accessions to the church. Presiding Elder Johnson has just arrived to spend a week with us."

Rev. B. L. Crump, Hernando, Miss., says: "We have just closed a two weeks meeting. There were ten conversions and nineteen accessions to the church. Our Sunday School is constantly increasing in numbers."

Rev. Wesley Childs, Brewer's Hill, Texas, says: "Our new church has been completed. It is 25x40 feet in size. We at once commenced a protracted meeting, which resulted in fifteen conversions and ten accessions to the Church."

Rev. W. D. Sims, Meridian Circuit, Mississippi, writes: "At our recent protracted meeting we had thirty-seven accessions to the church. We have just completed a new house of worship. Our Sunday School scholars now number three hundred and thirteen."

Rev. A. M. Gregory, Waco, Texas, writes: "We have just closed a meeting in which forty-five persons united with the Church. The Lord has greatly blessed us during this year. Our people are now making preparations to receive and entertain the Annual Conference."

Rev. Wm. Leewood, Alexandria Circuit, Tenn., writes: "We have just closed a second protracted meeting on this work. Forty-four persons were happily converted and thirty-seven have united with the Church. Never before have our membership on this circuit been so revived as now."

Rev. Frank Walker, Campti, La., says: "Reports made to our last quarterly conference show that during the quarter forty-five persons were received in full connection and forty-six on probation. One hundred and thirty scholars are enrolled in the Sunday Schools. The church is in good condition."

Rev. H. L. Kennedy, Paulding, Miss., writes: "Our camp meeting was continued for nine days. There were thirty conversions and forty-six accessions to the church, and twenty-seven persons were baptized. Our accessions to the church during the year numbering seventy-eight. Presiding Elder Adams was with us during the camp meeting."

Rev. George Washington, Coushatta, La., writes: "The Lord is blessing us in Red River parish. We have just closed a meeting at this place, in which there were thirty conversions and sixty-five accessions to the church. The revival influence is spreading. May we see such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit as this community has never known before."

Rev. Edward Lee, Bryan, Texas, says: "Our camp meeting was continued for eighteen days. Forty persons were converted and fifty added to the Church. The power of the Spirit in moving upon the hearts of the people was very strikingly manifested. Some of the persons under conviction fasted for two and three days, abstaining from eating or drinking. And the evidence given by those whose faith laid hold of the promises given us in the atoning blood of the Lamb was generally of the clearest and most satisfactory character."

Rev. L. R. Brown, Koscinsko, Miss., says: "We have just closed a protracted meeting in which there were twety-five conversions and thirty accessions to the church.—We begin a meeting at once at another appointment. Our churches are doing well. We hope that the sale of cotton will soon bring relief from the hard times the people have so long suffered."

Rev. Mack Henson, Victoria, Texas, says: "We had no campmeeting this year, but we have had a very gracious protracted meeting. There were nine conversions and four accessions to the church. At the close there were thirty-two persons who seemed deeply concerned about the salvation of their souls; may they speedily find that peace that comes through faith in Christ."

Rev. F. Landor, of Algiers, held the third Quarterly Conference at St. James Church, Louisiana Conference, on the 15th and 16th of September. In spite of the rain a good congregation was in attendance. The pastor reported three Sunday Schools in the circuit. Fifteen have been received into full membership. Brother Landor received a cordial greeting from his old parishioners at St. James, where he had been pastor for three years.

Power of Faith.

The New York Tribune of September 11, says:

The story of a successful trust upon [illegible] to procure the money needed to live and carry on a [illegible] object, was told last evening by the Rev. George Muller, at Dr. Baddington's Church, in Brooklyn. Every pew was filled. The greatest interest was manifested [illegible] English philanthropist [illegible] spoke with an energy [illegible] not often accompany seventy years, although he does [illegible] to ranting. He is tall, [illegible] bearing, and his gray [illegible] brushed back from a [illegible]. His elocution is [illegible] with a German [illegible], but he speaks with the earnestness of thorough conviction. [illegible] a native of Kroppenstadt, was graduated at Halle, [illegible] to England in 1829. In [illegible] a pastor of a small [illegible] chapel at Teignmouth. [illegible] refused to receive any [illegible] believing that God would [illegible] financial necessities [illegible]

there for two years and a half, and accepted a call from Bristol. After a time it seemed best for various reasons, that I should have no salary, but should leave the matter entirely in the hands of the Lord. So I said to the Church in 1829, that I no longer expected a stated salary, but would leave it to their love to supply me voluntary, just as they pleased to do. I have been going on now forty-seven years, simply dependent on the Lord for my necessities, both as pastor to the church and director of the institution, to which I have given the greater part of my time. But while I say this, it might be supposed that I had not the least income whatever. If anyone supposes I have been a loser and a sufferer he will be entirely mistaken, for the Lord graciously supplied me with all I have needed, and generally speaking, I had abundance; and assistance came, not only from England, but even from Scotland, Ireland, Canada, and the United States itself, and from New York, so that in all part of the world the Lord has touched the hearts of His people to supply any temporal necessities. So, sometimes I have been without any money whatever; generally I have had abundance, but sometimes nothing—not only all money gone, but a few times even all provisions gone, and then, in childlike simplicity, I fell on my knees and asked the Lord to supply me, and often, in the very moment of prayer, there was a knock at the door, and there was some one with relief. This was not once or twice, but many, many times that the Lord proved that though Elijah is dead, the God of Elijah is still living, and that in the nineteenth century He is as ready to answer the prayer of his children as 4000 years ago.

It came to my mind, when God answered my prayer in this way, that I might provide for the many neglected orphan children by trusting in God for the needed money. In 1834 I founded the orphan asylum. Its beginning was almost insignificant, but good. The principles on which it was founded were: That the living God should alone be its patron; and that we would never go into debt, but patiently wait on God to supply the means for caring for the children. So I prayed for help. The expense now for one day is as great as the expense of the whole first year of the institution. We require now on an average about $620 a day, or $225,000 a year. At the beginning I established only one school for poor children, relying on God for money. It was sustained. A few weeks later two more schools, and at the end of the first year six weekly schools were in existence, supported by faith in the living God. The first year we started our orphan home, we had ninety six orphans and ten helpers, and then I was taken ill. I had to leave the institution in the hands of God. Although the funds ran low, after a while large sums were given.

We had also a large Sunday School and an adult school, and circulated many books and tracts. The Orphan Home was added eighteen months later. I prayed one day for means, and before half an hour had passed, a letter arrived containing $300. I prayed for a house for the orphan institution, and $500, and I soon received $500, and other gifts in larger and smaller amounts for three months. I was enabled to rent and furnish a house, and was ready to open it for the reception of thirty orphans. I waited two hours, but they did not come. At last I remembered I had not prayed for them. I did so, and they soon arrived. Once again I lay on the floor in prayer for orphans for three hours. Since then about 16,000 orphans have applied. I had two buildings for boys and girls, and I prayed for ability to build a third. But I was taken ill, and the gifts were consumed by expenses. Only $100 remained. I gave myself to prayer, and soon large amounts came in, and we had more than abundance."

OCT. 7, 1877.—PAUL AT CÆSAREA.

SCRIPTURE.—ACTS 21: 8-15.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"But none of these things move me; neither count I my life dear unto myself."—Acts 20: 24.

TOPIC.—"The will of the Lord be done."

(Condensed from the Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

GOOD SOCIETY (8-9.)—The disposition of every Christian man to associate with other Christian men is well illustrated by his "finding" the disciples at Tyre and those at [illegible], and by his sojourning at the house of Philip at Cæsarea. [illegible]," and especially brethren [illegible] faith, like to associate with [illegible]. The visit at Tyre had [illegible] and effecting close. The [illegible] with their wives [illegible] accompanied him out [illegible] and, kneeling down [illegible] the [illegible] his own [illegible] Paul [illegible] for it argues that Paul was beloved by them as well as by their parents, and that they as well as their elders, were included in his ministrations.

At Cæsarea he had company after his own heart. After his toilsome journeys, his conflicts and his persecutions, his stripes and his imprisonments, and his long wearying voyage, it is delightful to think of his entering into such a haven of rest, before the turmoil upon which he soon was launched. It was a place where, unconsciously, he was laying in strength for his coming trials.

A WARNING SIGN (10-11).—Hitherto the thickening warnings have been vague and indefinite; now comes Agabus, with a clearer revelation than had been granted to others, and exactly indicates what his trial is to be. His plain prediction of what was to occur was made more impressive by the symbolic act that accompanied it.

FAITHFULLY STEADFAST (12-16).—This acted prophecy brought upon Paul the great trial of his life. In order properly to appreciate the heroism that rose above this severe temptation, let us note the elements that make it almost irresistable. First, there were the forebodings that had caused him such despondency, and which had found expression in his letter to the Romans, and in his farewell at Miletus, to the elders of the church at Ephesus. Second, there was the protestation of the disciples, at Tyre, against his going—a protestation that must strongly have reinforced his own melancholy presentments of evil. Third, came the prophesying of the daughters of Philip, if we take the view that they predicted his captiviry. Fourth, was the prophecy of Agabus, set forth in such a way as to shake him from his purpose if anything would, for Paul was eminently a man of activity, strongly disliking quietude of any sort. And yet the vision that Agabus brings up before him is of himself, bound, lying for many mouths, and perhaps years, in prison. It takes more courage patiently to endure, than bravely to act. He reached the very climax of heroism in his life, when he silenced his friends with the solemn, yet joyful, declaration: "I am ready, not to be bound only, but also to die, at Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus." Fith, was the weeping entreaty of his dearest friends. Luke was one of the companions who joined in imploring him to turn aside from his intention. Philip, the evangelist, by implication, was among those of Cæsarea who brought him to recall his resolve. These men were men whose lightest word would be valued by Paul, and whose weeping solicitations could not but stir his very inmost nature. It was exceedingly hard to be firm as against such an assault through his affections.

What made him so tenacious of his purpose? Nothing but his own knowledge of his duty. He met their revelations as to what he should suffer with an inward consciousness, which was, also, a revelation, that the Holy Spirit intended him to suffer for the name of Christ. In the case of Stephen, he had seen how that the cause might receive more impetus from the death of a good man than from his life. Paul in prison, by the will of God, could accomplish more than Paul out of prison, contrary to his will.

The hard fought battle was over. The submission of the disciples to what, now, very apparently was the will of the Lord, is almost as remarkable as the apostle's unyielding persistence in obedience to the inner mandate of the Spirit. It is not always the one who goes to battle who suffers the most in parting. One can easily see that it may have been harder for these affectionate and to a certain extent, dependent friends, to say, "the will of the Lord be done," than for Paul himself to do so. For him to die was gain—but to them his loss was irreparable. Their acquiescence in the divine will, therefore, is to be commended along with his striking devotion to it. It may be well to notice, right here, that the very thing which the Christians at Cæsarea thought would take Paul away from them forever, and from which they were, therefore, specially anxious to deter him, was, actually, soon the means of again bringing him back in their midst, and giving them two years of uninterrupted intercourse with him. 24: 23.

Having submitted to the will of the Lord, they did not sit down in idle resignation, but were helpful in those little attentions that so well show thoughtful sympathy and affection. The Cæsarean brethren, by thus accompanying him, and securing for him a place to lodge, showed how deep and sincere was their interest in the apostle. Paul wonderfully succeeded in making devoted friends.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR OCTOBER, 1877.

Harper's Magazine for October contains one hundred and five beautiful illustrations, and is a very attractive number.

The most important paper in the number is General M'Clellan's article on the Regular Army of the United States, advocating its increase, and making suggestions for its more efficient organization.

The very able and richly illustrated paper on the "Campaign of Burgoyne," by W. L. Stone, is timely in connection with the approaching celebration at Saratoga.

Mr. Benjamin's article, "From Brusa to Constantinople," with twenty-one engravings, gives considerable information of an historical character, but is in the main a lively description of scenes connected with the Eastern war.

William H. Rideing contributes a very entertaining paper, profusely illustrated, entitled "The Life of a New York Fireman."

Horace E. Scudder concludes his admirable and suggestive review of New England classical schools.

There are two beautiful illustrated poems: "An Old Umbrella," by C. P. Cranch, and "The Home Concert," by Mary D. Brine.

In his vivacious description of Walrus Hunting (illustrated), Mr. W. L. Alden writes in his most humorous vein.

But the most charming of the illustrated papers is that which opens the number—"Mytown" under which title Rose Terry Cooke describes a characteristic New England town. All but the title is real, and the illustrations, beautiful as they are, are from bona-fide sketches; if we except Mr. Albey's pictures of Ethan Allen and the "Disgusted Deacon."

Dr. J. W. Draper, in his seventh paper on the "Popular Exposition of some Scientific Experiments," treats of Burning-Glasses and Mirrors.

Blackmore's "Erema" approaches its conclusion. Constance F. Woolson contributes one of her best stories, "Raspberry Island." Mr. Philips's short story, "On a Melon Schooner," is novel and entertaining.

The Editorial Departments cover their respective fields as comprehensively and satisfactorily as usual, the Drawer for this month being especially good.

SCRIBNER FOR OCTOBER.

A paper of unusual interest in Scribner for October, is entitled "A Yankee Tar and his Friends," and is written by Mrs. M. F. Armstrong. It consists of a sketch of the friendship of Capt. E. E. Morgan, of a New York packet, with many of the English artists and litterateurs of the last generation, including Dickens, Thackeray, Turner, Sydney Smith, Doyle, Rogers, Landseer and many others. There are also reprints of two caricatures by Doyle. Another illustrated paper is a discussion of dress, from an artistic stand-point, and under the title of "Togas and Toggery," by Clarence Cook, author of recent papers on house-furnishing in the same magazine. Nearly 40 illustrations are given with this paper, and a dozen more are devoted to Wm. H. Rideing's description of "How New York is Fed," the meat, fruit, fish, and oyster markets receiving the chief attention. A biographical sketch of Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen, by F. E. Heath, is accompanied by a faithful portrait, from a crayon sketch by Wyatt Eaton, and Woolf, the caricaturist, has a little poem with a drawing of his own. An illustration is given with each of the serials, Miss Trafton's "His Inheritance" and Dr. Holland's "Nicholas Minturn," the latter giving way to Eggleston's new story, "Roxy," which begins in the November number. Two special papers are George S. Merriam's hetero-orthodox essay on "Christianity and Free Thought," and an ex-Congressman's "Experiences in Post-Office Appointments," from which he deduces a strong argument for the reform of the civil service.

The poetry deals chiefly with autumn subjects, and is contributed by writers new to Scribner.

ST. NICHOLAS FOR OCTOBER

fitly closes up the fourth volume of the magazine, and ushers in the Autumn with brisk stories, lively pictures, and such gentle thoughts as suit the time of year.

Henry W. Longfellow supplies some strong and beautiful lines under the title "Haroun Al Raschid;" and Donald G. Mitchell ("Ik Marvel") contributes the biographies of "Two French Story-Tellers"—Bernardin de St. Pierre and Madame Cottin, whose portraits accompany the article—with able illustrated epitomes of their chief works, "Paul and Virginia" and "Elizabeth; or the Exiles of Siberia."

The poem, "Mother," by Mary Mapes Dodge, blends a rare hopefulness with the tender sadness of its theme; and together with the admirable frontispiece, forms a striking whole. George MacDonald brings to a close his simple narrative of Scottish life, entitled "Gone Astray," the lovely affection it depicts receiving a second charming illustration in the verse immediately following it, and beginning "There's a ship on the sea!" Thomas Moran has capped the stanza with an appropriate drawing. "The Little Girl who Grew Smaller," by Emily H. LeLand, is a story that will captivate the young folks; and "Which Had It?" by Sarah Winter Kellogg, with a capital illustration by J. W. Champney, is a tale that has no end of fun and puzzling uncertainty about it.

The boys will find Mrs. Kate Brownlee Horton's article on the game of "Hare and Hounds" a very attractive one; and the interest of the girls is likely to center upon a paper on "Moss-Pictures" which details a new kind of fancy work.

A competitive examination of applicants for positions in the city schools will commence on MONDAY, 24th inst., at 9 A. M.

The attention of all parties interested is drawn to the following programme of this examination:

On MONDAY, September 24, applicants for position in the Academic Departments, or City High Schools, will be examined at the Franklin School-house, St. Charle street. Applications for these departments must have reference to one of the four cources of study embraced in the curriculum of the High School namely: 1. English Language and Literature. 2. Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. 3. Algebra and Geomtery. 4. Latin and French Langunges.

On TUESDAY, 25th, and THURSDAY, 27th inst., the examination will be for Grammar Grades. Positions filled by Principals and First Assistants.

On WEDNSDAY, 26th, and FRIDAY, 27th, the examination will be confined to Primary Grades. Position known as Second and Third Assistants.

Applicants for either Grammar or Primary Grades who have registered their names, from A to L inclusive, will be examined in the Franklin School-House. The other applicants, whose names are registered, from M to Z inclusive, will be examined at the same time, in the Marshall School House.

WM. O. ROGERS,
Superintendent of the Public Schools.

PROPOSALS FOR CUSTOMHOUSE CARTAGE.

CUSTOMHOUSE, NEW ORLEANS, LA., Collector's Office, September 19, 1877.

In accordance with the provisions of section 25 of the act of Congress, approved June 22, 1874, which reads as follows: "That public cartage of merchandise in "the custody of the Government shall be "let after not less than thirty days' notice "of such letting to the lowest responsible "bidder giving sufficient security, and "shall be subject to regulations approved "by the Secretary of the Treasury"; and the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned will receive sealed written proposals, addressed to him at this office, until 12 o'clock m. of SATURDAY, October 20, 1847, for doing the public cartage of dutiable merchandise at this port for a period of one year from date of contract.

Public cartage should be understood to include all goods in bond, whether passing from the vessel or other conveyance in which imported to the warehouse, or from one vessel or conveyance to another, or from the warehouse on permits for exportation, all unclaimed goods, and all goods ordered to the Appraiser's store for examination. Merchants, however, will be allowed to cart their own merchandise to bonded warehouses in their own bonded drays, should they desire to do so.

No proposal to charge more than twelve cents per package, large and small as they run, will be entertained.

The bidders, in making proposals, must accompany the same by evidence in writing of their responsibility and that they can give undoubted security in the sum of fifteen (15) thousand dollars for the faithful performance of the work and to indemnify the Government against any loss.

JOHN E. KING,
Sept. 27-4t. Collector of Customs.

Relief Without a Doctor.

Though we would by no means be understood as deprecating, but rather as recommending, professional aid in disease, there are multitudes of instances when it is neither necessary or easy to obtain. A family provided with a comprehensive household specific like Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, is possessed of a medicinal resource adequate to most emergencies in which medical advice would be otherwise needful. That sterling tonic and corrective invariably remedies, and is authoritatively recommended for debility, indigestion, liver disorder, an irregular habit of body, urinary and uterine troubles, incipient rheumatism and gout, and many other ailments of frequent occurrence. It eradicates and prevents intermittent and remittent fevers, relieves mental despondency, checks premature decay, and invigorates the nervous and muscular tissues. Sleep, digestion and appetite are promoted by it, and it is extremely useful in overcoming the effects of exhaustion and exposure.

AFTER.

After the showers the tranquil sun;
Silver stars when the day is done.
After the snow, emerald leaves;
After the harvest, golden sheaves;

After the clouds, the violet sky;
Quiet woods when the winds go by.
After the tempest, the lull of waves;
After the battle, peaceful graves.

After the knell, the wedding bells;
Joyful greetings, from sad farewells.
After the bud the radiant rose;
After our weeping, sweet repose.

After the burden, the blissful meed,
After the furrow, the waking seed.
After the flight, the downy nest
Over the shadowy river—rest.

Praise Your Wife.

Praise your wife, man; for pity's sake, give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her. She made your home comfortable, your heart bright and shining; food agreeable—for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She don't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have these ten years, but it will do her good, and you, too.

There are many women to-day thirsting for words of praise, the language of encouragement. Through summer's heat, through winter's toil, they have drudged uncomplainingly, and so accustomed have their fathers, brothers and husbands become to their monotonous labors that they look for and upon them as they do the daily rising of the sun, and its daily going down. Home every day may be made beautiful by an appreciation of its holiness. You know if the floor is clean, manual labor has been performed to make it so. You know if you can take from your drawer a clean shirt whenever you want it, that somebody's fingers have ached in the toil of making it fresh and agreeable, so smooth and lustrous.

Everything that pleases the eye and the sense has been produced by constant work, much thought, great care, and untiring efforts, bodily and mentally.

It is not that many men do not appreciate these things, and feel a glow of gratitude for numberless attentions bestowed upon them in sickness and in health, but they do not come with a hearty—"Why, how pleasant you make things look, wife!" or, "I am obliged to you for taking so much pains." They thank the tailor for their "fits;" they thank a [illegible] in a full omnibus who gives them a seat; they thank a young lady who [illegible] in a concert room—in short, [illegible] everybody out of doors, because [illegible] the custom; and come home, tip their chairs back and their heels up, and pull out [illegible] if their wife asks [illegible] to take [illegible] ld if the fire has [illegible] g is just right, [illegible] snap of satisfaction, but [illegible] say, "I thank you."

Improved Eagle Cotton Gins.

PRICES REDUCED TO $4 A SAW.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best-built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinder of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only ten-inch cylinders, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in large-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large Stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

The bale of cotton which received the grand prize at St. Louis, and has won so many thousands of dollars at numerous fairs, was ginned on the Eagle Cotton Gin.

Prices Have Been Greatly Reduced, to $4 a Saw.

30 CENTS A POUND FOR COTTON.—The New Orleans Cotton Exchange paid THIRTY CENTS A POUND for a bale of cotton ginned on the EAGLE COTTON GIN, and sent the cotton to the Centennial Exhibition as the best bale of cotton ever seen in New Orleans.

CENTENNIAL PREMIUM was awarded at Philadelphia to the EAGLE GINS over all others.

ING, No. 61 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., is our only authorized agent in that city, and no other house is authorized to sell our celebrated Victor Cane Mills, Cook Evaporators, Engines and other machinery of our make.

The Victor Cane Mills are the only ones suitable for Southern sugar cane and the Cook Evaporators the only successful ones for making sugar.

Cane growers can't afford to risk crops with light, unfinished mills, liable to break in the middle of the season; they can't afford to waste crops with mills that don't press out all the juice, or evaporators that make sugar unfit for market, and too little in proportion to the labor and fuel they require.

In purchasing the Victor Cane Mill and Cook Evaporator you get perfect sugar machinery and will have no drawbacks to contend with. Mr. Cushing is authorized to make terms and liberal discount to merchants.

STEDMAN'S

IMPROVED SELF-SUPPORTING

NEWELL SCREW

COTTON PRESS.

Now the Most Convenient, Speedy and Reliable Screw Press in Use.

The Advantages Secured in this Press will Commend it to the favor of every one.

1. It is so very simple in its workings and construction that any one can operate it, and there is no necessity for sending a mechanic a long distance to set it up.

2. It is all complete, with all the wood-work.

3. It may be used either as a Portable or Stationary Press.

4. The horse power being directly applied to the Screw, there is no necessity for Cog Wheels or Gearing of any kind, thereby avoiding a great amount of friction and liability to get out of order.

5. The horses occupy the room under the platform, which is less available for any other purpose, leaving the space surrounding the platform entirely clear for baling Cotton, so as to be convenient to the Press, or for storing purposes. And when it is desirable to make a covering for the Press, the same roof which covers the Press will cover the horse-walk also.

6. The Cotton is put into the Press and taken out at about the same point, making a great convenience for the operators, as they have all their work on the same floor. And the bales are already at a convenient elevation for loading in a wagon or storing away.

7. These Presses never require any repairs; after using for thirty years they are as good as when new.

8. More Cotton can be put into the Press at a time than in any other Press, making a greater saving.

9. No Press in use puts so much weight in so small a bale. The bales, as they come from these Presses, are about square at the ends; whereas from most other Presses they are from twelve to fifteen inches higher than they are wide, making them very bulky, without a corresponding weight, while their shape makes them extremely inconvenient to handle.

10. The character of this Press is such that it is alike suited to a large or small operating force. One man and a boy can operate it to good advantage, or half a dozen may be fully employed.

11. There are no patents on this Press, except those held by STEDMAN & CO.; hence those who secure the right to these Presses will not be liable to pay a second fee.

The man tramping has his head and shoulders out of the Press all the time. The top Follower, or Platten, is hinged at each end; being made in two parts, it is thrown open allowing the top of the box to be used for putting in Cotton. No time is lost with this Press, as the Cotton is tramped in while the Follower is run down. The advantage to those who operate the Press of having head and shoulders above the top of the Press, while tramping the Cotton, instead of commencing at the bottom, after the Follower is down, will commend it to all. We use the best of oak for the Straining Beams, the Box doors are made of yellow pine or ash, and are framed together entirely with bolts, avoiding mortises and tenons, iron plates are used at all joints where any strain comes.

DURABILITY.

STEDMAN & CO., the manufacturers of the Improved Self-Supporting Newell Screw Press, have been engaged in the manufacture of Presses for 39 years. The application of the Screw for Pressing Cotton was the original invention of the late Dr. Thomas Newell, of Grand Gulf, Miss., Over 30 years ago Mr. Stedman made for Dr. Newell a Cast Iron Screw; this Screw was in constant use by Dr. Newell as a Horse Power Press for 15 years, during which time he pressed over 900 Bales of Cotton. The old reliable Newell Screw, since its invention, has been in constant use by the largest Planters, and has always been the only reliable Press in use, never requiring any repairs. The improvements which STEDMAN & CO. now offer on the old and reliable Newell Screw are such as to add to its already good qualities convenience of operating and speed.

With our improvements we do away with the three great objections to the old-style Newell Screw Presses; First, we reduce the cost one half. Second, takes up less room. Third, requires no heavy frame work in building to support the Press, and the heavy corner posts of the Press are replaced by Iron Rods. This is strictly a Portable Press, and can be moved from place to place at small cost, and at the same time it answers fully the place of the old-style Stationary Press.

It takes 3 feet less Screw to work this Press, with a ten foot Cotton Box, than any Revolving Press known, thus saving 36 revolutions in making each bale, which, providing the pitch of the Screw is 2 inches, as in all Revolving Presses, means 1,80 feet of travel saved to the mule each bale, or some 18 miles in making 40 bales. Price, Horse Power Press, complete, with wood work.....$200

IMPROVED CABINET ORGANS.

EXCELLING WHAT HAS PREVIOUSLY BEEN ACCOMPLISHED IN POWER, PURITY AND DELICACY OF TONES.

THE LIST CABINET ORGAN

(Style No. 501.—Five Octave; Seven Sets of Reeds of Two and a Half Octaves each, and One Set of One Octave; Fifteen Stops; New Scale of Reed-Board, Reeds and Actions, with Ventrillo Chest and other Improvements, patented 1876–7.

Base.—Contra Basso, 16 ft.; English Horn, 8 ft.; Viola, 4 ft.; Viola Dolce, 4 ft.; Sub-Base, 16 ft. Treble.—Corno, 16 ft.; Melodia, 8 ft.; Piccolo, 4 ft.; Seraphone, 8 ft.; Voix Celeste, 8 ft. Throughout.—Full Organ, (knee stop,) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up,) knee Swell, I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Franz Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The origin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Franz Liszt, in which full sonorous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of the great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry out and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new Instrument was seen and tested by a number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Courier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class," evincing "extraordinary progress." After its receipt and trial, Dr. Franz Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

THE ORIGINAL
KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,
Sure Cure for
CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA. SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART. NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

leaf, and sound rushed in. He touched the tongue of the dumb, and sound rushed out. Oh, may those Divine hands touch us this morning! We do not think enough of the importance of spiritual healing. We value physical healing. The touch of Christ is performing more marvelous cures to-day than opening the eyes of blind people, and curing the deaf and dumb, and raising the dead. He is quickening the world into spiritual health.

3. That is a beautiful picture where they brought little children to Christ and He put His hands on them and blessed them. Those little ones were not afraid of Christ. It would be interesting to know their after history. Tradition says that one of the great martyrs of the early church was one of those children so blessed by the Savior. He gathered the little lambs in his arms.

None are to old to need the Shepherd's care. Don't let go the hand of Christ for a moment. Look back, brother. In the dark days of your life, when you stumbled, fell, your hand was out of Christ's. You had let go that hand.

4. Those hands grasped the hands of the sinking Peter. Peter made an experiment which redounds to the good of the saints in all ages. I sometimes think Peter is the most instructive character in the New Testament. So impulsive, so generous, so quick to repent. Poor Peter sinking in the waves is a pitiable object. But he cries to Jesus for help, and grasps the outstretched hand. How many millions sinking have been encouraged to grasp the ever outstretched hand of Jesus! So powerful is that hand that none are able to pluck out of its grasp those it lays hold of to save. On this rests the final perseverance of the saints. The assurance is, God will hold on unto the end. Here is a precious thought for us as we come to the table of the Lord to-day. The merit of Christ's sacrifice is sufficient. No one who comes to Him will be cast out, and Christ assures that all whom the Father hath given unto Him will come to Him. With one of the greatest of Christians of all ages we can exclaim, I have no fear, Christ died for me.

5. The hands of the Savior are evidence of His having suffered for us. You remember, in that room with the closed doors, how He convinced by His pierced hands and wounded side the doubting disciple. Those pierced hands have lifted a world of sinners! What wonderful triumph! Those hands in six days created the world, and now are they saving the world.

6. Those hands are evidence of the resurrection.

7. They are used by Jesus in intercessory prayer for us. You remember the story of the Roman soldier who, wounded, returned from the wars and found his brother on trial for his life. The soldier held up the stumps of his arms, and turned the tide in the court-room and saved his brother's life. Here was a sacrifice turned into an intercessory prayer. Jesus, with His pierced hands, is ever making intercession at the right hand of the Father. Oh, what a delightful thought that the Father hears him always! I know a father in New York who never denies a request of his son, no matter what that request may be, all because of some noble act that son performed. A saint always ended his prayer, "I ask for Christ's sake, whom thou hearest always." No one led by those hands to the Father will be rejected. There is no danger of our being forgotten, for our names are written on the hands of Christ. Not the name of Nathaniel nor Peter only, but our names, yours, mine.

8. Then remember that on the day of judgment we will all stand on one hand or the other of Christ. On which hand wilt thou stand? We may never meet again until that day.

Now, in conclusion, I would press upon you one practical thought. Let the hand of Jesus hold you. You will be tempted much and often during this summer. Be sure that you go not where you cannot take hold with firm grasp the hand of Christ. I know no better motto to give you than this one: Cling, CLING to Christ's hand. It is all-powerful to save.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

President Hayes at Louisville.

President Hayes and Mrs. Hayes, together with several members of the Cabinet, in their recent tour South everywhere met with most enthusiastic receptions. The people turned out in great numbers, and a perfect ovation awaited the Presidential party at every stopping place. At Louisville Rev. Stuart Robinson made the address of welcome. We give the following extract of the reply of President Hayes:

After alluding to the early history of the States of Ohio and Kentucky, being so blended that the history of one could not be written without at the same time filling half the pages with the history of the other, and how they stood side by side in their conflicts with the savages, and in the days of the Revolution, he said:

This was the course of events in early times, but afterward there came an estrangement and then came division and discord, and the old friendships seemed to be gradually disappearing, and afterward there came war, but for the cause of that estrangement and hostility Kentucky was not responsible. Kentucky alone could not remove it, neither could Ohio alone remove, nor both together could not remove it, and every man who sees in the affairs of men on any occasion the finger of Almighty God, sees in that great struggle the ends of providence, and the difficulties perfectly removed, the only causes that could separate Kentucky from Ohio or Ohio from Kentucky. To-day the true history of Ohio and Kentucky is the epitome of the rest of the country, and now, when the cause is removed, whatever the hostility, whatever the prejudice, whatever the estrangement, let them also be removed. [Applause.]

I have been, fellow citizens, for the last few days among the soldiers of the Union, and the men most early to come together after this great division are those who made the acquaintance of one another on the fields of carnage. I have found it true on the other side of the river, and I have found it true here in Kentucky. A distinguished statesman said to General Scott during the war: "When the armies of the Union are successful there will be peace and content everywhere." General Scott remarked: "No, sir; not for some time after the war; for, after the successful close of the war, you will find that the whole power of the General Government will be necessary to keep the down the belligerent non-combatants of the country." [Applause.]

Perhaps the old man had the spirit of prophecy in him, said my friend. Those who fight upon the field learn to respect each other. The soldiers of both armies imperiled their lives for the cause, and such men always respect each other. [Applause.] It is for them to come together. In the beginning, I was under the impression that our Southern friends had the advantage of us; that you had better marksmen and better horsemen in proportion to us. We had to learn to shoot and ride, but after we had learned it then became a fight between Greek and Greek, and we all know that when the issue comes to that, that army will conquer that has the most Greeks. [Cheers.]

And now, my friends, that being over, why shall not we come together? Oh, we have come together. [Applause.] The demonstration in Louisville tells the whole story. I need not shout myself hoarse before this great audience in making a speech about the happiness and peace we are now enjoying in all sections of the Union. The demonstration has made the speech of the occasion. Nothing can be added to it. I think we can confidently look forward to the fraternal union on the basis of the Constitution as it now is with all the amendments. My friends, my Confederate friends, do you intend to obey the whole Constitution and the amendments? [Applause.]

I thought you would. I believe you will, and that removes the last cause of dissension between us. I look forward happily to the realization of the bright vision of a popular English author, when he said: "I see a vast confederacy stretching from the frozen North to the glowing South; from the white billows of the Atlantic to the calmer waters of the Pacific, that would contain one people, one language, and one faith, and everywhere a home for freemen and a refuge of every race and of every clime to come together." [Great applause.]

Faith is the condition of salvation; yet repentance is inseparable from saving faith. How much repentance is requisite? Enough to cause us to loathe sin and renounce it. "Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts." And how much faith is necessary? Enough to lead us to Christ, who alone can save the soul. When we renounce self and works of righteousness, and accept Christ as our salvation, our faith becomes saving.—California Advocate.

The Edge of the Wedge.

A few years ago, before the death of the late Mr. Mark Lemon, the well-known editor of Punch, the writer had the pleasure of traveling with him on the railway from London Bridge to the Three Bridges Station on the Brighton line. Mr. Lemon's request to the inspector, "Let us be alone," secured the compartment to ourselves. This led to much frank and interesting conversation between us. After various topics had been discussed, such as improved dwellings for workingmen, the better education of the poor, etc., etc., the writer remarked: "There are many good things you have furthered, Mr. Lemon, by means of your pen, and the shaft of ridicule; but there is one thing in which you have always been on the wrong side."

"What is that?" he eagerly asked.

"You seem never to have lost an opportunity of throwing ridicule on those who uphold the sanctity of the Lord's Day, and who earnestly labor to prevent what you and others wish to see in this country, viz.: a Continental Sunday."

Feeling deeply in this matter, I spoke warmly, and expressed my belief that he, and others who sympathise with him on this subject, were seeking to bring about a state of things in our country that would in the end be most disastrous to our national welfare, and especially prove one of the greatest wrongs ever inflicted on the working classes. Mr. Lemon replied, with great frankness:

"Well, now, you speak very plainly; but I like to hear a fellow do so, when I feel sure he is honest and believes what he says, although I differ from him. Go on—I am listening."

The writer continued: "On this occasion I believe the working-men of this country are sounder than most Christians; and they are wide awake to the fact, that if the barriers which surround the Lord's day in this country are broken down, ultimately they will have to do seven days' work for six days' pay."

With a smiling face Mr. Lemon said: "Now I will make a confession to you which I have not made to others. Some [illegible] ago I got up a petition [illegible] of the British [illegible], and sent it into our printing office for the men to sign, when, judge of my astonishment, the foreman came to my room and said, 'If you please, sir, do you press for the signing of this petition? for unless you do, the men had rather not sign it. 'What in the world do they mean by that? Why it's for their benefit that we want museums opened on Sundays?' 'Well, sir,' replied the foreman, 'the men think that would not be the end of it—it would be only the thin edge of the wedge, and that before long work-shops and offices and all kinds of places, as well as museums, would be open on the Sunday, too.' Now," added Mr. Lemon, "the petition was never signed. The conduct of the men made a strange impression on my mind, and I honestly acknowledge it furnishes a strong fact for your side of the question."

From the day of our interview until his death I never heard of Mr. Lemon's having penned an unkind line against the promoters of the better observance of the Lord's Day. —Parish Visitor.

The Name of Texas.

There have been any number of conjectures as to the origin of the word Texas. 1. That Texas in the language of the aborigines means friends; it is also said that Texas has the same meaning. 2. That Tejas or Texas means tile-roofs, and that country received that name because the Indians lived in houses with roofs. 3. That Tecas means people, and it received that name because inhabited. 4. In an article on tribal names in America, in the National Magazine for August, it is said: "The Tachis, from whom the word Texas was derived, is a word from the Caddo dialect, and gives title to a population which calls itself Kiwomi; that is, two. The name Tachis or Tecuas was applied to a native confederacy, and an ancient province, Ticues, and is said to mean friends; just as Dakotas meant the allied or leagued." In this last statement there are two facts: 1st, That the name of Texas was that of an Indian tribe; 2d, That that tribe belonged to the Caddo family. Coronado, in 1540, found the tribe on Red river; he spelled the name Tayos. Joutel, in 1867, found the Tehas or Taos Indians on the Sabine river. The map of Bellin, published in Paris in 1744, locates the Tehas Teijas village on the Trinity. The old maps of Texas of the present century locate the Tehas or Teijas village on the East side of Neches River, at the crossing of the old San Antonio road. It was from that tribe that the name of our State was derived.—Galveston Advocate.

Americanizing One Hundred and Fifteen Chinese Boys.

HARTFORD, CONN.—A thickset, short man, broad featured, and of a bilious complexion, attired in the latest style, is a daily passenger on the morning and evening trains between Hartford and Avon. He might be taken for a Spaniard, but, except for the broad nostrils, would never pass for a native of China. Such, however, he is, and the head of the Chinese Educational Commission, whose headquarters are in Hartford, and who have in their charge one hundred and fifteen of the brightest lads in all the Chinese Empire.

Thirty years ago this man, then a lad, in an interior Chinese village, was picked up by an American Missionary, and the stories he heard of the wonderful land across the Pacific induced him to run the risk that a native of China then incurred who left his country and came to America. After his arrival several gentlemen interested themselves in him. He was put to school, and at length he was graduated at Yale College. He was the first native of China to take a collegiate degree.

Young Wing's ten years in this country thoroughly Americanized him, and he decided to make it a life work to pry open the eyes of his sleeping fellow countrymen, and show them what their real condition is, and what they most do to put themselves on an equality with other nations.

He went back to China and began the work. He was too shrewd to tell the mandarins at first that China is far behind the rest of the world. He said nothing for some years, but made himself so valuable by the use of certain knowledge and suggestions that he soon became a person of some influence. Then he began slyly to drop hints as to the way in which things were done in America. So he went on cautiously—for the mandarins are very bigoted—until at last he suggested, and, as his influence grew more powerful, urged his plan, and in 1869, nearly twenty years after his return to China, the Emperor consented. He was allowed to choose one hundred and fifteen boys, from seven to fourteen years of age, and to bring them to this country and give them such an education as he saw fit. For this purpose the Chinese government appropriated $1,500,000, and in 1872 the first party of the boys arrived in Hartford, followed in 1873 and 1874 by others.

With them came Young Wing and four assistants and their servants, and these at their home in this city make a Chinese colony not only as peculiar as the Chinese, but unlike any other Chinese people in the United States. These represent the wealthy aristocratic Chinese. They are no more like the laundry Johns than the directors are like the laborers on a railroad.

As soon as the boys reached Hartford they were put by twos with American farmers' families in Connecticut and Massachusetts towns, so that they might learn the language as quickly as possible. But so that their Chinese schooling might not be lost, they came alternately to the headquarters in Hartford and spent three weeks in exclusively Chinese studies. A fine edifice has been erected in Hartford by Young Wing, near the residences of Marshall Jewell, Gen. Hawley, Mark Twain and Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Some of the boys have got far enough along to enter Yale College, and in the school contests they have invariably beaten their American schoolmates. From college they will go to the professional schools, particularly the scientific studies, and then will be ready to return to China, where they will spend their lives as teachers.

It is Young Wing's opinion that the influence of one hundred and fifteen able men, thoroughly educated, and more than all, thoroughly Americanized by the fifteen years spent here in their boyhood, cannot fail of ultimately removing all obstacles that Chinese bigotry has thus far put up to progress.

Gospel Leaven in Politics.

The more of gospel truth and gospel life that are cast into the stream of political action, the purer and sweeter its flow will be, the more securely it will bear the people along the highway of national safety. The effort of good men should be to make dominant in the State those principles of love and purity which are the essence of the Gospel, and which men confess ought to reign everywhere. Political duties should be held as sacred as church duties, and entered upon in the spirit of "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," as well as those that are more specifically called religions. A people shall be reckoned godless, or otherwise, not as the name of God shall enter their organic law or be left out, not as formal acknowledgements shall be made of Him, as upon fast days, but as their actions shall agree with God's law or contradict it.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

Ideas Irresistible.

All our political disasters grow as logically out of our attempts in the past to do without justice, as the sinking of some part of your house comes of defect in the foundation. One thing is plain; a certain personal virtue is essential to freedom, and it begins to be doubtful whether our corruption in this country has not gone a little over the mark of safety, so that when canvassed we shall be found to be made up of a majority of reckless self-seekers. The divine knowledge has ebbed out of us, and we do not know enough to be free. I hope better of the State. Half a man's wisdom goes with his courage. A boy who knows that a bully lives round the corner which he must pass on his daily way to school is apt to take sinister views of streets and of school education. And a sensitive politician suffers his ideas of the part New York or Pennsylvania or Ohio is to play in the future of the Union to be fashioned by the election of rogues in some counties. But we must not gratify the rogues so deeply. There is a speedy limit to profligate politics. Fear disenchants life and the world. If I have not my own respect I am an imposter, not entitled to other men's, and had better creep into my grave. I admire the sentiment of Thoreau, who said: "Nothing is so much to be feared as fear; God Himself likes atheism better." For the world is a battle-ground; every principle is a war-note; and the most quiet and protected life is at any moment exposed to incidents which test your firmness. The illusion that strikes me as the masterpiece in that ring of illusions which our life is, is the timidity with which we assert our moral sentiment. We are made of it, the world is built by it, things endure as they share it; all beauty, all health, all intelligence, exist by it; yet we shrink to speak it or to range ourselves by its side. Nay, we presume strength of him or them who deny it. Cities go against it; the college goes against it; the courts snatch at any precedent, at any vicious form of law to rule it out; Legislatures listen with appetite to declamations against it, and vote it down. Every new asserter of the right surprises us, like a man joining the Church, and we hardly dare believe he is in earnest. But what we do and suffer is in moments; the cause of right for which we labor never dies, works in long periods, can afford many checks, gains by our defects, and will know how to compensate our extremest sacrifice. Wrath and petulence may have their short success, but they quickly reach their brief date and decompose, while the massive might of ideas is irresistible at last. Whence does this knowledge come? Where is the source of power? The soul of God is poured into the world through the thoughts of men. The world stands on ideas and not on iron or cotton, and the iron of iron, the fire of fire, the ether and source of all the elements is moral force. As cloud on cloud, as snow on snow, as the bird on the air, and the planet rests on space in its flight, so do nations of men and their institutions rest on thoughts.—Ralph Waldo Emerson in North American Review.

Women and Home.

There is a bundle of delight bound up in the sweet word home. The word is typical of comfort, love, sympathy, and all other qualities that constitute the delights of social life. Were the everyday enjoyments of many of our pious, intelligent and affectionate families faithfully portrayed they would exceed, in moral heroism, interest and romance, most of the productions of the pen of fiction. The social well-being of society rests on our homes, and what are the foundation of our homes but women's care and devotion?

A good mother is worth an army of acquaintances, and a true-hearted, noble-minded sister is more precious than the "dear five hundred friends."

Those who have played around the same door-step, basked in the same mother's smile, in whose veins the same blood flows, are bound by a sacred tie that can never be broken. Distances may separate, quarrels may occur, but those who have a capacity to love anything, must have at times a bubbling up of fond recollections, and a yearning after the joys of by-gone days. Every woman has a mission on earth. There is "something to do" for every one—a household to put in order, a child to attend to, some class of unfortunate, degraded or homeless humanity to befriend. That soul is poor, indeed that leaves the world without having exerted an influence that will be felt for good after she has passed away.

There is little beauty in the lives of those women who are drawn into the gay circles of fashionable life, whose arena is public display, whose nursery is their prison. At home, in the inner sanctuary of home life, woman appears in her true glory.

Church Extension.

A gentleman living in a prosperous town of New York State has recently deeded $20,000 worth of real estate to the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, remarking as he did it, "A deed is better than a will." The property consists of two store buildings, with the lots on which they stand. The gentleman and his wife are to have a life-interest in this property. After their departure the property will be sold and the money go to the loan fund, to be used perpetually in aiding Churches upon the frontier.

His journey through Africa was one of the most perilous and heroic on record. The last of his white assistants, Francis Pocock, an Englishman, was swept over the falls of the Massassa on the 3rd of June last. His faithful companion, Kalulu, was also lost.

Massachusetts has detective officers traveling with the tramps. The men dress and live like the rest of the fraternity, make no attempt to arrest or obstruct them in crime, and even join them in their petty thefts, which latter proceeding some people might think was going it pretty strong. Their observations thus far convince them that the great body of tramps are professional thieves. Occasionally one travels by himself, but they generally form into gangs for a few days or longer, under the direction of a chief, who assigns them to duty. It is suspected the tramps have a general headquarters for stolen property among the hills in the western part of the State.

How to Maintain Republican Principles.

The following article is from the pen of a gentleman of Southern birth and culture. We publish it with pleasure, not only because of its origin, but because of its wise counsels to all who believe that the political, commercial, social and religious interests of Louisiana and the South, demand the maintainance of Republican principles:

The resolutions adopted by the Conservative Legislature of Louisiana at its last session, and endorsed by the Governor, correspond exactly with the basis of action laid down by the Republican party. The object, then, of every Republican must be to reinforce and maintain this position. How may this be best done? Some may may say that there must inevitably come a division between the Democrats and the Conservatives, and that the reorganization of the Republican party will triumph over these embattled and conflicting sections of their opponents. Such is not our opinion. The reorganization of the Republican party would compel an adjournment of the differences among their opponents, and a perfect reunion as against the restoration of what they would persist in calling "carpet bag rule." The difficulties of a reorganization among the Republicans would be very great. Would they call the same leaders to head the movement? Those leaders could not sustain themselves with the aid of the Federal Government. The masses of the Republicans, scattered through the distant parishes, without military or moral protection, would be compelled to seek safety in staying away from the polls or supporting their employers. The Republican party would, in such case, consist of a headquarters and staff without soldiers. In adopting other leaders the Republicans would be divided somewhat like their opponents. It is well known there are many men aspiring to lead the party, who abandoned the State administration and in effect went over to the Democracy. Some of them accepted office and others stand charged with having received patronage and even money as the consideration of their treachery. The Republicans could neither go to battle under the officers who have lost their eagles in the combat, nor under those who stood suspected of having betrayed their friends.

It is as well, therefore, for the Republicans to look the situation in the face. The United States, in giving freedom and equality to the colored race, has placed it upon the same level of equality with others. The Government is under the same obligations to maintain the rights of one citizen as of another. It does not seem disposed to do anything more for the negro race than for the Jewish or any other nationality represented among us. The child is protected and provided for until he has reached the age of maturity. He must then fare as others.

What, then, is the future duty of the Republicans of Louisiana? It is to discard from its councils all men suspected of personal or political dishonesty. To repose confidence in none, except then allied in interest and connected by ties of family or investment to the destinies of Louisiana. It is to give their support to the most conservative men, who will maintain the pledges of the Legislature and Governor made to the President of the United States. Republicans should ask nothing for themselves save the recognition and establishment of their principles.

The people of the South have put away those party leaders who have come from abroad to conduct the affairs of the South.

The people of the South have no more love for the ultra and intolerant fire eater than for the unprincipled carpet bagger. The country having been cleared of the one, the other must follow. The Republicans can promote the latter object by giving their support to the Conservatives who will protect them. Should such a division take place between the ultra and conservative [illegible] of the State, let not the [illegible] jeopardise their rights, [illegible] their political [illegible] by reorganizing. Death of Dr. Duncan.

The death of Rev. Dr. James A. Duncan of the Methodist Church, South, removes one of the most loved and brilliant men of that denomination. He was born in Norfolk, Va., in 1830 and was therefore but 40 years old. He was president of Randolph Macon College. The New Orleans Christian Advocate says:

For several years he was editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, and we believe for the last nine years he has been president of Randolph-Macon College. At the General Conference in Memphis, in 1870, he lacked but a few votes of being elected Bishop. Dr. Duncan was genial and cheerful, a conversationalist of rare attractions, and a born orator, equally at home on the platform, in the city pulpit, or in the camp meeting stand. As an educator and head of one of our most important literary institutions, his death will prove a most serious calamity. He was one of our fraternal messengers to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1876, and the admirable address which he delivered on that occasion was a model of manly eloquence. Truly—and sadly we say it—a great man and a prince in Israel has fallen.

Another New Paper.

The Weekly Critic is a neatly printed, four-paged sheet published in this city by several enterprising colored young men. J. Madison Vance Jr., is proprietor; James D. Kennedy, editor, and Chas. Roxborough, business manager. The sixth number is before us, and we are pleased with its tone, and trust that these young gentlemen may succeed in their laudable efforts. The following has the right ring in one of the editorials. Such sentiments should be everywhere spoken and acted upon. Speaking of the colored people the Critic says:

Having attained by legislation all that can be, or could possibly be expected, it is the duty of colored men now to understand, that to assist in building up the South, commercially, financially and other material ways, will reflect not only credit on us as a people, but will bring us in closer communion with our white friends, who control and direct almost exclusively, the commercial and planting interests of our section.

Heretofore we have been drawn into the devious ways of politics, under the impression that by and through them our happiness and ease should be assured. But no greater mistake could have been made, and no greater injury self-inflicted. We are now absolutely dependent on ourselves. Our resources cannot be augmented by politics, but they must come through thrift, education and a careful husbanding of our means. We do not say that politics must be abandoned; but we do say that we must stop looking at it, as a means of suddenly rising from poverty, to affluence and wealth.

How his Wages Went.

The Irish World gives the following excellent item. We only wish that our working men, who think they must spend a few cents each day at the saloon for beer or whisky, could all read it:

In a large city a laboring man leaving a large saloon saw a costly carriage and pair standing in front occupied by two ladies elegantly attired, conversing with the proprietor. As it rolled away, he said to the dealer: "Whose establishment is that?" "It is mine," replied the dealer complacently. "It cost $3,500; my wife and daughter cannot do without it." The mechanic bowed his head a moment in deep thought, and looking up, said with the energy of a man suddenly aroused by some startling dash: "I see it! I see it!" "See what?" queried the dealer. "See where for years my wages have gone. I helped pay for that carriage, for those horses and gold mounted harness, for the silks and laces and jewelry for your family. The money I earned that should have given my wife and children a home of our own and good clothing I have spent at your bar. My wages and others like me have supported you and your wife in luxury. Hereafter my wife and children shall have the benefit of my wages, and by the help of God, I will never spend another cent for drink. I see the mistake and a cure for it."

The New Orleans University opened October 1st, as announced, with a good attendance.

Those of our friends who intend to patronize the institution this year had better send in promptly, for the prospect is that every room will be full early.

No institution in the South offers better advantages for thorough culture than this. Address Prof. J. S. [illegible], Acting President, for a circular and all desired information.

The Democrats of New Jersey have nominated Gen. George B. McClellan as a candidate for Governor.

The death of Leverrier removes from the world the greatest astronomer of the nineteenth century. He died in Paris, a few days since. He discovered the planet Neptune. He noticed that the planet Uranus made certain variations in its orbit, and following Newton's theory that the orbits of all the planets are effected by each other's gravitation, he supposed that there must be another planet outside of Uranus which caused the variation of its orbit. He made a series of most elaborate calculations, and determined what must be the size, weight and distance of that unknown planet, and he predicted the time and place where it could be seen. No single fact in nature more fully demonstrated that the whole universe has been created and governed by the most exact and perfect laws, proving that over and above all there must preside an infinitely intelligent creator. Neptune was discovered in the year 1846.

The Louisiana sugar crop of the present season is confidentially estimated at 200,000 hogsheads. From 1850 to 1862 the product had grown from 108,000 tons to 190,000. In 1863 it sunk to 30,000; in 1865 to 5,000 tons. Since the war the revival has been very slow. For the last three or four years it has been gaining at the rate of 25,000 hogsheads a year. The average of the hogsheads is somethig over 1,100 pounds. The crop of last season amounted to 190,672,570 pounds. The estimate of 200,000 hogsheads for the present crop shows that this industry is now increasing at a handsome rate. There is plenty of room for this. The duty on foreign sugar, although adjusted to favor the refiners, is a large protection. The consumption of sugar is continually increasing.—Ex.

San Marco's River, Texas.

Bishop Doggett, of the M. E. Church, South, in a letter to the Richmond Advocate, gives the following description of San Marcos River, Texas:

The marvel of this wonderful river, however, is not its abrupt origin, or its crystal clearness, but the wealth of its sub-aquatic vegetation. Its margin is not only lined with overhanging shrubs and clustering heaps of wild cresses; and its surface, in many places, floating with waving tresses of long and silken grass, springing from its depths and floating in the current off for twenty or thirty feet; but its entire bottom is covered with an almost unbroken tissue of delicately tinted and beautifully variegated vegetation blooming beneath the surface, under whose picturesque foliage the lithe and agile fishes perform their graceful motions; and whose crystal caves the imaginative Greek would have peopled with laughing water-nymphs. I doubt if any water-scene, of the same extent, abounds with more transcendent beauty. It is a genuine, original green-house. It is nature's own conservatory, where her rarest productions are preserved in amaranthine freshness, encased in a frame-work of rustic grandeur, and seen through surfaces of perpetual purity. Could the San Marcos' natural museum be reproduced in the Eastern States and in higher latitudes, it would attract the attention of the fashionable world and arouse the enthusiasm of rival artists. One must be incurably obtuse to look into this mirror of nature, and not be transported with its exquisite imagery.

In Tennessee the President during his late tour was waited on by a delegation of colored people. Their representative, a colored minister, Rev. Mr. Milton, made an address of welcome. The President replied:

MR. MILTON AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:—It is very gratifying indeed to be so welcomed by the colored people of this section of the country. The testimony which this address bears to me of the condition of the colored men in this part of the United States since the policy of peace and harmony has been adopted is indeed very satisfactory. I rejoice to hear such testimony from the colored people. It is precisely in accord with what I believed would occur when the effort to give to the country complete and permanent pacification was made. Among the most anxious inquiries and investigations that I made were those in regard to the probable condition the colored people would be in after the policy was adopted. My desire was, as was that of all associated with me in the Government, as it is the desire I am sure of all good citizens, that the colored people should be safe and secure in all their rights under the Constitution as it is, and under the laws of the land. (Applause.) We were solicitous that their rights and interests should be regarded, and our belief, our confidence we may say, was perfect, that with the bayonets removed from the South the people of color would be safer in every right, in every interest, than they ever were when protected merely by the bayonet. (Applause.) I rejoice that your address assures me that so far as you are concerned here the result is according to our anticipations. I thank you for coming here to bear this testimony before the country. I trust, my colored friends, that your future will be brighter and brighter, your condition better and better, and that you will always remember that to command respect men must have the virtues to deserve respect. Industry, good conduct and intelligence are good alike for white men and for colored men. (Applause.)

The members of the syndicate were in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and other officers of the Department. The accounts of the 4½ per cent. loan were closed. The whole amount is $200,000,000, of which $185,000,000 is for refunding purposes and $15,000,000 for resumption purposes, and will appear in the next debt statement. The 4 per cent. loan is being rapidly paid for and adjusted, and will be settled during next month as the calls mature, the first call maturing October 5 and the last November 3. Five millions each for the months of August, September and October will be applied for redemption purposes.

The Charleston News of the 19th inst. says: "Those having charge of the Liberian exodus report that the scheme is progressing quietly but satisfactorily. Eight hundred and seventy shares amounting to $87,000 of stock in the Liberian steamship have been subscribed, and a good portion paid for. Arrangements have been made for the reception of the first cargo of emigrants, which they expect to send over at a comparatively early date. The recently chosen Commissioners will accompany the first ship-load.

The Directors of the New York Elevated Railroad, of which Cyrus W. Field is President, have resolved to commence the work of construction of the east side, to all ferries, the Grand Central station and Harlem River, and lay double tracks also on the west side. The recent decision of the Court of Appeals, removed all obstacles to the foregoing rapid transit enterprise. It is stated that over 3,000 men will be set to work soon.

Mr. Elihu B. Washburne, ex-Minister to France from the United States, in the course of a conversation, said that both Gambetta and ex-President Thiers told him a few days before he left his post that they were confident that at the approaching elections the Republicans would triumph and elect a majority of the Deputies to the French National Assembly, even larger than is expected on this side of the Atlantic.

James Newby, a negro newsboy, who went from New London, Conn., to the West ten years ago, accompanied Moody and Sankey to Scotland. Since then he has studied for the Church of England ministry at London, and passed an examination before the bishops, which prompted the Bishop of London to say, "I would to God all our clergymen were like this young man." He has sailed for Africa to be Bishop Crowther's assistant.

The Washington People have found the soup-house a failure, and discovered that charity unpaid for encourages idleness, and brings to the city hundreds of lazy persons from the country and adjoining towns. They are going to build on the Bible—"The workman is worthy of his hire"—and help those who are willing to help themselves.

It has been discovered that the wires of an electric apparatus used in Providence for lighting street lamps, can be utilized so that any policeman, wherever in the city he may be, can talk with an officer at headquarters by simply stepping to a lamp-post and attaching to the wire a small telephone which is carried in his pocket.

The Treasury had upon the Union Pacific train recently attacked by robbers, in Wyoming, 30,000 ounces of silver bullion in large bars, so heavy that the robbers were unable to carry it with them. Not an ounce was lost. The bullion was purchased in Nevada, and was destined for Philadelphia.

Levi Coffin, well-known before the abolition of slavery as President of the "Underground Railroad," always a prominent anti-slavery man, died at his residence in Avondale, near Cincinnati, Sept. 16th. His age was about seventy-five years.

Those who would like to read the verbatim reports of Joseph Cook's six great lectures, and Dr. Doremus's scientific lectures, as well as the addresses of Dr. Newman, Francis Murphy, John B. Gough, Dr. Warren, Dr. Hays, Prof. Lattimore, Prof. Bowne, and the Home Papers of Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, besides many more valuable articles, reports of conversazioni, etc., would do well to send one dollar (with their address) to Mr. M. Baily, Jamestown, N. Y., and receive a file of the Assembly Daily Herald, which will enable them to enjoy a "Chautauque at Home." We are promised for the coming season the Herald in a new and improved form, with a monthly issue throughout the year.

Horace Greeley died broken hearted. After his defeat for the Presidency he wrote a letter to his friend, Col. M. W. Tappan, of Bradford, N. H., which is supposed to be the last confidential letter he wrote. It is dated New York, Nov. 8, 1872. Here is a paragraph:

"We have been terribly beaten. I was the worst beaten man that ever ran for the office. And I have been assailed so bitterly that I hardly knew whether I was running for President or for the Penitentiary. In the darkest hour my long suffering wife left me, none too soon, for she suffered too deeply and too long. I laid her in the ground with hard, dry eyes. Well, I am used up. I cannot see before me. I have slept little for weeks, and my eyes are still hard to close, while they soon open again.

The chief political event of late was the meeting of the New York Republican Convention, at Rochester. U. S. Senator Conkling, an opponent of the present Administration, had the support of three-fourths of the Convention for permanent chairman and in support of resolutions condemning President Hayes' plan of civil service. On the Southern policy the Convention was neutral. George William Curtis made a powerful speech in favor of the Administration and offered amendments endorsing it, but was voted down three to one. This is the first real outburst among Republicans against Mr. Hayes.

A large portion of the United States Patent office at Washington was destroyed by fire Sept. 24. The fire broke out 11.30, and at 2 p. m. it was stayed with the loss of the West and North wings. A large number of models and relics, and the original draft of the Declaration of Independence were destroyed.

Theodore Adams, leader of the Central road strikers, at East Syracuse, in July, has been indicted by the grand jury, for obstructing trains, interfering with the property of the Railroad company. He is in the penitentiary.

It is reported that a systematic plan involving the election of a Speaker of the House favoring the project to consolidate the friends of the Texas Pacific Railroad is matured.

Our Southern Methodism.

Our Church at La Teche, La., was blown down during the late storm. But under the lead of Rev. Mr. Matlock, the pastor, and Madam J. S. Roberts, the money is being raised to rebuild.

Rev. Samuel Allen, San Felipe, Texas, says: "At our Campmeeting, which lasted ten days, nineteen persons were brought into the church. We are since protracting a meeting in which there is great interest, with many seekers for salvaion."

Rev. J. M. Shumpert, Holly Springs, Miss., says: "Our Church is in good spiritual condition. During the year there have been twenty conversions and fifty accessions. Now that the students of Shaw University and the Normal School have returned, our Sunday School is filled to overflowing."

Rev. J. H. Cook, Quincy, Miss., writes: "At recent meetings held by us at the five appointments on this work there have been fifteen conversions and thirty accessions to the church. The Holy Spirit is abroad among the people in convicting power, and our prayer is that many more may be brought into the ark of safety."

Rev. T. O. Abbott, Shreveport, La., says: "At a meeting just closed there were thirteen accessions to the Church. A deep spiritual feeling is aroused among our membership. Our church is being put in thorough repair, so as to be comfortable in winter."

THE CITY.

There is no yellow fever in the city.

Soule's College opens. See Advertisement.

Bishop Ward, of the African M. E. Church, is in the city.

Harrington removes to 149 Canal street on the 15th inst.

Cartmen should read the advertisement of Collector King.

Absentees on business and pleasure are returning home in large numbers.

The arrival of cotton is two weeks later than last year, which retards the fall trade.

A. H. Nelson, 57 Camp street, keeps a first class lot of stationery, and does Job Work promptly and well.

Heath, Peppey & Lara, 97 and 99 Camp street, have just received a new and splendid lot of carpets, and will sell them at very low prices.

The old and reliable dry goods house of B. & W. Croner has changed its location from 147 to 141 Canal street. The new buildings have been fitted up in fine style, and a very large and splendid stock of new goods have been received. The stock includes a magnificent lot of foreign and domestic fabrics, such as hosiery, notions, corsets, carpets, matting, window shades, curtains cornices, rugs, etc. Call and examine for yourself.

The bond of Pension Agent, Isabelle, in this city has been discovered to be a fraud. There are several bondsmen for smaller amounts who are known and reliable, but two for a hundred thousand each are straw men and cannot be found. Mr. Isabelle says he placed the matter of his bond in the hands of Attorney General Lacy and knew little or nothing about it. To us this is a very strange proceeding on his part. The office has been taken charge of by a special agent from Washington.

The city School Board passed, last July, a resolution that the schools should be separate, white and black. This is in direct violation of the Constitution of the State which forbids that any child should be refused admittance in any public school of the State on account of color. Mr. Paul Trevigne, a leading colored man of the city, has taken out an injunction, before the Sixth District Court, against the School Board restraining them from carrying their resolution into effect. A public meeting was held last week, in the Common street Baptist Church to second Mr. Trevigne's movement with sympathy and money.

The Centennial and the Sabbath.

The Permanent Centennial at Philadelphia is having an ignominious ending. Against the protest of the religious papers and the various denominations in the City of Brotherly Love, the managers of the Exposition insisted on opening its doors on Sunday. It was an astonishment and a mystery that this wholesale violation of the Sabbath should be insisted on in a place famous for Sabbath observance. Expostulations and resolutions and protests had no more effect than paper balls on a locomotive. The management went obstinately ahead, opened the doors and kept them open. It was, from the first, a losing operation. But they went doggedly on. What was back of it? The telegram brings us the explanation, by which it appears there was crime at the back of it. A Mr. Morton has recently been acting President of the Exhibition. One of his first orders on coming into power was to open the gates on Sunday. This same man was President of the Market Street Railway Company. A stream of Sunday travelers over the Market Street Railway and to the Exposition would be water for his mill. Moreover, as the event now shows, his mill was sadly in need of water. Hence the Exposition, in spite of the protests of the better class of the population, and of the largest exhibitors themselves, was turned into a Sunday holiday for the idle population of the great city.

Now for the denouement. Mr. Morton got into financial trouble with the stock speculators. There seemed to be but one way out—that was to make an overissue of shares amounting to over a million dollars. In plain words, as it now appears, Mr. Morton forged paper in the above amount, and raised money on it to cover his personal obligations. He is now under arrest to answer the serious charge. And those who suffered themselves to be led by him into an acquiescence with his purpose of wholesale Sabbath violation have the poor consolation of the reflection that they were helping him in his desperate measures to stave off the publicity of his crimes.—Interior.

A Relic of the Dark Ages.

We reproduce the contents of a printed postal card that is being sent through the postoffice to many people:

METHODISM.

Deposited in the ASTOR LIBRARY, may be found a "Catalogue of Works in REFUTATION OF METHODISM, from its origin in 1729 to the present time, of those by Methodist authors, on LAY REPRESENTATION, METHODIST EPISCOPACY, etc., etc., and of the POLITICAL pamphlets relating to Wesley's "Calm Address to our American Colonies."

The copy expressly prepared for the Astor Library is largely expanded by Manuscript additions, the whole number of titles enumerating over Seven Hundred. A very large collection of said works are to be found in the Libraries of the Gen'l Theo' Sem'y of the P. E. Church, N. Y.—Theo' Sem'y of the Presbyterian Church at Princeton, N. J., and the Library Company of Philadelphia.

Surely the benevolent parties distributing this valuable and charitable information must be making room for the Reformed Episcopal Church. For the need of being superseded by something reformed is evident. In answer to the few volumes referred to in the foregoing card, we refer to the twelve millions of Methodists—men and women, whom Methodist agencies have saved from sin and brought into the Church of Christ. Most people in this common-sense land believe that a Church that does the saving work of the Son of God is far more essentially a Church than an [illegible] which contents itself with teaching its ministers to make the longest display of some of their garments. It is hard to believe that having tall boots, fancy hook and bait, and a patent pole (reaching back to the apostles), and an empty basket, has more to do with making a fisherman than a full basket of freshly caught fish. Methodism has taught mankind that the tools belong to him that can use them.—Christian Advocate.

Heaven is not a solitude; it is a [illegible] city, a city in which there are no strangers, no homeless, no poor, where one does not pass another in the street without greeting, where no one is envious of another's [illegible] or of another's more brilliant crown. The South Carolina Indictments.

The indictment, says the Independent, found by the grand jury of Columbia, in South Carolina, includes the following ex-officers: Two governors of the State, but not Gov. Chamberlain, one United States senator, one lieutenant-governor, four State senators, two members of the legislature, two representatives in Congress, two State treasurers, two comptrollers-general, one secretary of State, one judge of the supreme court, one clerk of the house of representatives, one clerk of the senate, one financial agent, and one revenue collector—making a batch of twenty-four officials charged with different crimes under the laws of that State. The grand jury that has just found these indictments is composed of persons of both parties and races, and was drawn while Governor Chamberlain was in office, and, hence, has not been extemporized for this particular occasion. Indictment, though by no means conclusive proof of the charges made, is a presumption of guilt. We can hardly doubt whether there has been a South Carolina Ring, composed of Republican officials and engaged in robbing the State. Facts enough have come to the knowledge of the public to justify this conclusion; and now that the whole matter is to undergo a judicial investigation, our earnest hope is that every rascal whether black or white, will receive his due award. Let justice be done, no matter where it falls. We should be glad to hope for similar justice to those barbarous Democratic murderers that, previous to the last election, rioted in the blood of colored citizens.

Gen. Grant, replying to various addresses which he received at Sheffield, England, September 27th, referred to the American tariff, and reminded his hearers that the United States had to raise money to pay off a great debt incurred by the war. The revenue from imports was regarded solely as a means attaining the end. If the United States abolished revenues from imports foreign bondholders would very soon cry out when their interest was not forthcoming. He added: We get along well enough with the payment of our debt and will compete with you in your manufactures in the markets of the world. The more of your merchants and mechanics that go to America, the better; nothing pleases us more than the immigration of the industry and intelligence of this community. We have room for all, and will try to treat you as you have treated me to-day.

"Cardinal Antonelli," says The Catholic, in discussing the Countess Lambertini scandal, "was not a priest, never celebrated a single mass. He was an eminent statesman, connected with and always willing to render valuable services to the Holy See." Certainly he never was a priest; but he was a deacon, the clerical order just below that of priest, under the same vow of celibacy and chastity, and was the closest adviser of the Pope.

Gen. Grant is not sanguine of success in the effort to reform office-holders. In a recent interview with a New York Herald correspondent, he said of it:

I do not believe it will succeed, though I wish it could, in some practical way. Take Schurz, for instance. He is making a business of civil service reform. But he is a humbug, and Mr. Hayes will find him out before long.

Sunday School.

OCT. 14, 1877.—PAUL AT JERUSALEM.

SCRIPTURE.—ACTS 21: 27-39.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me they will also persecute you."—John 15: 20.

TOPIC.—"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake."

(Condensed from the Nat. S. S. Teacher.)

When the seven days were almost ended.—What seven days are here referred to is not quite clear. They are supposed to be the final seven days in which the vow would be completed. Jews which were of Asia. The hatred which had been toiled at [illegible] had a sudden and better opportunity granted it at Jerusalem. The Jews from that city saw, and [illegible] their old opponent, and, [illegible] made use of unscrupulous means to rid themselves of him [illegible]. Adroitly cloaking their [illegible] in the guise of zeal for the [illegible], they raised the cry that he [illegible] polluting that holy place, by bringing into it an uncircumcised [illegible]. Nothing would so quickly [illegible] the anger of a Jewish mob as [illegible] that in their midst was [illegible] Jew, guilty of such a [illegible]

[illegible] him out of the Temple. So [illegible] not be desecrated by [illegible] act of violence. The [illegible] the proprieties, and such [illegible] is a keen satire on [illegible]. Many would never [illegible] against them, who [illegible] to [illegible] for [illegible] would now shut a church in the time of such a disorder. Went about to kill him. That is, trying to kill him. Weapons were not at hand, and so they were seeking to accomplish their end by beating him.

BOUND (33-36).—The sudden appearance of the Roman soldiery put a stop to their murderous proceedings. The Roman government knew that its throne in Palestine was seated over a volcano, which was liable, at any time, to break forth, and, hence, they kept a large force at hand, ready to quell any popular uprising. Especially were they watchful during the progress of a feast like that of Pentecost, for, then, great numbers assembled from all parts of the world, more bitter in their hatred of the Roman rule, even, than those who had constant experience of it. On this account, therefore, there was a guard more than usually large, and more than usually vigilant in the tower of Antonia. The watchman, looking down upon the court, easily could see the commotion that had arisen, and, in a moment, it was filled with Roman soldiers. Like the mob at Ephesus, they knew that they were liable to be called in question for that day's uproar, and the thought of this, as well as the sight of the disciplined ranks of the soldiers, had something to do with the alacrity with which they left off beating Paul. Ran down. To the mob it looked as if the soldiers were going to charge upon them. The Romans were a little more prompt and merciless in dealing with a mob than our authorities lately were.

Bound with two chains. To two soldiers, just as Peter was bound, when sleeping in prison. His arms only being prisoned, he was able still to walk. When thus pinioned, he scarcely could have helped thinking of the prophecy of Agabus, and of its quick fulfillment. It is an old heathen motto that "The mills of the gods grind slowly," but, sometimes, they grind exceeding fast. When God is ready there are no delays.

The endeavor of the captain to ascertain the offense of which, he took it for granted, Paul was guilty, was unsuccessful. Like the similar riotous assembly at Ephesus, "the more part knew not wherefore they were come together." A blind rage had given them the voices of Babel. No two agreed as to the cause of their assault upon the prisoner. Despairing of finding out what his crime was, he commanded him to be carried into the "castle," or, rather, barracks.

BRAVE (35-39).—In all this there was much to try one's nerve. It takes a courage which but few possess, nublenobiugly to face an enraged mob. He, already, had had a taste of their anger, and now that he was surrounded by the guard, the multitude, disappointed of its prey, crowded so against the soldiers that the pressure lifted Paul off from his feet. It was in that way that he was "borne of the soldiers." A mob has not the claws and fangs of a beast of prey, but it is none the less dangerous and ireful when interrupted in its feast of blood. They could not get at him, but they could, and did, show their impotent spite, by crying: "Away with him!" It was the same cry that had spoken the doom of Christ, some thirty years before. And how did Paul bear himself in the midst of this terrible ordeal? In a way that compels our admiration. His courage never deserts him; he never loses even his composure. His behavior is simply heroic. His question to the captain indicates his self-command. That question, spoken as it was, in Greek, revealed the fact to the captain that he had been laboring under a mistake. He had taken Paul to be the Egyptian impostor, who, Josephus says, led out a rabble on the heights near the city, promising them that, at his word, the walls of Jerusalem should fall down. His deluded followers were routed and scattered by Felix, but he escaped. Perhaps the captain was a little disappointed that Paul was not the Egyptian! His question, literally, is: "Then thou are not that Egyptian?" Upon learning whence he was, he treats him with more respect, and readily grants him leave to speak to the people. But this permission never would have been granted, we may be sure, merely from the fact that Paul was a citizen of Tarsus. His carriage in peril had commanded the respect of the soldier, who knew how to appreciate true courage. As the raging of the waters but the more clearly show how immovable is the rock against which they dash, so every trial but made the real greatness of the apostle the more conspicuous.

This arrest was God's way of answering Paul's desire to go to Rome! He put him on his way without expense to himself or to the churches, and that, too, without materially hampering him in his mission of preaching the gospel! No doubt that he would have chosen differently, had a choice been given him—but would he have chosen so wisely? We see in this, as in so many of the instances we have studied, how "all things work together for good to them that love God," and how it is that the Lord can make the wrath of man to praise him.

Anxiety about salvation is the most reasonable thing in the world; and we feel ready to ask, can that man have a soul, or know that he has one, who is careless about its eternal happiness? Is he a man or a brute? Is he in the exercise of his reason, or is he a maniac?—John Angell James.

New Publications.

THE METROPOLITAN PULPIT.

Volume one of this valuable monthly is now before us in a well-bound book of 200 pages. The purpose of this publication is to give the sermons of the leading ministers each month, in New York and vicinity, also sermons, sketches and skeletons from distinguished German preachers. A department is devoted to giving Scriptural illustrations. The Metropolitan Pulpit is well worthy of a place in every minister's study. The price is $2.00 a year.

Address "Religious Newspaper Agency," 21 Barclay street, New York.

THE HOMILIST.

The Homilist has for several years been published in London as a serial and then bound in volumes. Nearly forty of these volumes have been published. The Homilist has been pronounced by the celebrated Dr. Lange, of Germany, and many others equally well qualified to judge, to be the best book of its class ever published. The book costs in London $1.75, but because of duty tax, if brought from London, it costs in America $3.00. The Religious Newspaper agency is publishing the Homilist in this country and sells them for $1.60. The volume before us is Vol. XII, editors series. Sent to any part of the United States for $1.60.

LECTURES BY JOSEPH COOK.

The Religious Newspaper Agency have issued five of the best lectures of Joseph Cook, in an octavo volume, bound in paper. It contains 80 pages and will be sent to any part of the United States or Canadas, postpaid, on receipt of forty cents. The lectures are: 1. Certainties in Religion. 2. The Atonement. 3. God in Natural Law. 4. New England Skepticism. 5. Trinity and Tritheism. Some of these Lectures have been delivered during the last summer at Chautauqua and Lake Bluff Sunday School Assemblies. Mr. Cook is a very remarkable man. He has the rare faculty of grasping and putting in the simplest words, the most profound and abstract truths, respecting man's moral being and its relations to the world and God. He has succeeded in meeting scientific and metaphysical skeptics of this age on their own ground, and using their own methods he vindicates religious truths. His lectures should be read by every thoughtful christian. He stands to-day the central figure in the New England pulpit. In the very home of American skepticism he stands without a rival in his power to meet and overthrow that skepticism in its most subtle and yet plausible phases.

THE COMPLETE PREACHER.

This is another monthly publication by the Religious Newspaper Agency, and gives verbatim reports of sermons by eminent divines. This number contains five sermons. Price $2.00 a year. Single copy twenty-five cents.

WIDE AWAKE.

Wide Awake for October is a number of rare worth. The illustrations are superb. The November number will contain a merry Thanksgiving Story, "Polly Pepper's Chicken Pie." Its very little readers will have a Thanksgiving Story all to themselves, by Mary Standard Robinson, and the story of "Pinkey Posey's Seven Doctors." D. Lathrop & Co., Publishers, Boston. Single number twenty cents. $2.50 a year.

EXTENSIVE ART GALLERY.—Next to the Bible, no book is more useful than Webster's Dictionary. The Unabridged is an extensive art-gallery, containing over three thousand engravings, representing almost every animal, insect, reptile, implement, plant, etc., which we know anything about. It is a vast library, giving information on almost every mentionable subject. It indeed has been well remarked that it is the most remarkable compendium of human knowledge in our language.—Household Advocate.

PROPOSALS FOR CUSTOMHOUSE CARTAGE.

CUSTOMHOUSE, NEW ORLEANS, LA., Collector's Office, September 19, 1877.

In accordance with the provisions of section 25 of the act of Congress, approved June 22, 1874, which reads as follows: "That public cartage of merchandise in "the custody of the Government shall be "let after not less than thirty days' notice "of such letting to the lowest responsible "bidder giving sufficient security, and "shall be subject to regulations approved "by the Secretary of the Treasury"; and the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned will receive sealed written proposals, addressed to him at this office, until 12 o'clock m. of SATURDAY, October 20, 1847, for doing the public cartage of dutiable merchandise at this port for a period of one year from date of contract.

Public cartage should be understood to include all goods in bond, whether passing from the vessel or other conveyance in which imported to the warehouse, or from one vessel or conveyance to another, or from the warehouse on permits for exportation, all unclaimed goods, and all goods ordered to the Appraiser's store for examination. Merchants, however, will be allowed to cart their own merchandise to bonded warehouses in their own bonded drays, should they desire to do so.

No proposal to charge more than twelve cents per package, large and small as they run, will be entertained.

The bidders, in making proposals, must accompany the same by evidence in writing of their responsibility and that they can give undoubted security in the sum of fifteen (15) thousand dollars for the faithful performance of the work and to indemnify the Government against any loss.

CITY HALL, New Orleans, Sept. 23, '77

The following is published for the information of all DRUMMERS and AGENTS SELLING BY SAMPLE:

City Ordinance No. 3779.

SEC. 58. Every person acting for him or herself or as an agent traveling for others, who shall receive orders, or display samples, or sell goods in any manner whatever, shall pay for his or her license the sum of $100.

The attention of those failing to comply with the above is called to section 74 of said ordinance:

SEC. 74. Any person or persons, firm or firms doing any business, or engaged in any trade, calling or profession, in this city, or performing any act or acts made subject to license by this ordinance, or any part or parts of the same, without license as herein provided for, or who shall violate in any way or manner the provisions of this ordinance, shall be and are hereby made liable to a fine in a sum not less than ten dollars, and in an additional amount according to the nature of the offense, but not to exceed one hundred dollars; or to imprisonment not exceeding one month.

The ordinance will continue to be strictly enforced, and all parties knowing of any violations of it are respectfully requested to notify this office.

MOODY: His Words, Work and Workers.

EDITED BY REV. W. H. DANIELS, M. A.

With an Introduction by Rev. Chas. H. Fowler, DD., LL.D.

Of the many volumes called out by the wonderful career of Messrs. MOODY AND SANKEY, all have hitherto been more or less fragmentary, and without systematic arrangement. In the above work the design has been to bring within the compass of a single volume of generous size THE MAN HIMSELF: A full and Systematic Presentation of his Bible Doctrines: An account of his most [illegible] CO-WORKERS; and a chapter on that most marvelous movement [illegible], THE GOSPEL TEMPERANCE REVIVAL.

In order to make the volume fresh and complete, Mr. Daniels, who edits this work, has made a visit to Boston, to learn, by personal observation, as he has done in the case of the Moody and Sankey revivals in other great cities on both sides of the Atlantic, the progress of the revival work there.

This volume contains 552 pages, crown octavo, including twelve full-page illustrations; is elegantly printed on fine paper; is handsomely bound; and is not only a book of the widest and most permanent interest and value of any yet published in this line, but is also the

Throughout.—Full Organ, (knee stop,) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up,) knee Swell. I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Franz Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The origin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Franz Liszt, in which full sonorous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of the great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry out and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new Instrument was seen and tested by a number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Courier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class," evincing "extraordinary progress." After its receipt and trial, Dr. Franz Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

FAITH.

Faith of our fathers! living still
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword;
Oh, how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word;
Faith of our fathers! Holy Faith!
We will be true to thee till death.

Our fathers, chained in prison dark,
Were still in heart and conscience free;
How sweet would be their children's fate,
If they, like them, could die for Thee!
Faith of our fathers! Holy Faith!
We will be true to thee till death.

Faith of our fathers! we will love
Both friend and foe in all our strife;
And preach thee, too, as love knows how,
By kindly words and virtuous life;
Faith of our fathers! Holy Faith!
We will be true to thee till death.

Manhood.

OUTLINES OF A SERMON TO YOUNG PEOPLE BY REV. GEORGE H. SMITH, NEW YORK.

Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon, his son, ... I go the way of all the earth; ... and show thyself a man. [illegible]

[illegible] ... listened to one ... he stood begging ... The last words of ... when spoken ... to them, are ... interest.

I. ... of the dying father ... to his successor ... [illegible] ... Yes, but what is ... a man ... the divorced ... [illegible] ... tall, robust ... [illegible]

manly character. The liar is a coward. He is afraid to tell the truth. He is essentially mean and unmanly. Stealing is the resort of weak, cowardly felons who have not head, hands, heart and manly courage to earn an honest living. All vice is weakness, all virtue is strength, and hence

III. The foundation of manhood is strength.—Strength of purpose, will-power, determination, self-control, power to resist popular customs when wrong, prevalent vices that have become aristocratic, fashions and habits of evil that have fastened on people whom you consider above you in age, experience and profession; power to be called eccentric, odd, queer, to be sneered at. You need a courage that will not dilly-dally with evil, but at the first solicitation say "no," that will "dare to do right, dare to be true." Hence in this brief charge the very first accents are, "Be thou strong." David knew it required strength.

IV. The source of this strength is in God, and many are the exhortations in His Word to be strong and courageous. Joshua i: 6—"Be ye strong and of a good courage." 1. Cor. xvi: 13—"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men: Be strong." Eph. vi: 10—"Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might." Moses, Joshua, Paul, Luther, Wesley, were men of mighty power, and they all found their strength in God.

V. The important aim of this charge was the right development and formation of character.—This should be the first aim of every young man. This is the first aim of the gospel, now so often overlooked in this busy, bustling, noisy age. We have Sabbath-school conventions, Christian conventions, temperance conventions, all discussing questions of work. All right, proper, and to be commended. But sometimes, in our anxiety to know what to do and how to do it, we forget what we are to be and how we are to be it. The Sabbath-school and prayer-meeting are run on time after the fashion of an express train and with as much engineering. The king did not waste his dying breath telling his successor what to do and how, but what to be. Soon after the disciples were commissioned, they returned to tell the Master of their great work, "Even the devils are subject to us." "Rather rejoice because your name are written in heaven," was the reply. Christ said little about methods of work, much about the character of the worker. Paul's first instruction to Timothy was, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." Hence this charge of father to son, "Show thyself a man." Deceit, falsehood, lust, etc., are all intruders. Cast them out, show thyself. Let not the animal reign, but the man. Be a man, and then you will be what every true man is—a king.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Premium Bonds.

We take from the Times of the 5th inst., the following explanations of the Premium Bond Plan for scaling and funding the city debt:

The old bonded city debt was abolished by law on the first of July, 1875. Since then no interest has been paid upon it. The premium bonded debt was substituted in its place. On that date 1,000,000 premium bonds, of $20 each, bearing five per cent. interest until paid, were printed. They are held by the city for exchange for the old bonds, at dollar for dollar. About 12,000,000 of old bonds have already been thus exchanged for premium bonds. The remaining premiums are still in the hands of the city.

The 1,000,000 of premiums at twenty dollars each amounts to twenty millions of dollars. This is the city debt. A portion of this debt is to be paid every six months for sixty years. But which portion? That is the thing determined by lottery, and here is where the "allotted series" and the "drawn" ... "elect" come in. For the purpose of this drawing ... of bonds are ... [illegible] ... There are ten ... in the million ... contains one hundred ... two thousand ... drawing ... [illegible] ... Under the premium ... the total amount of taxes ... for 1877, for principal ... prizes, is $329,250 ... it is true, will infor it, or keep it three months, and take his chances in the next drawing. But if it belongs to one of the drawn series he has made a double strike. Because it will be redeemed in January, and is receivable for taxes and licenses; it is at once worth par or $20. In addition to this it has five per cent. accrued interest from July, 1875, which will be redeemed with it. This makes it $22 50. But this is not all. It has, on top of all, an important and fascinating value as a genuine lottery ticket. This brings us to the premiums.

Next January when the principal and interest of the nine thousand bonds drawn in July and October are paid, fifty thousand dollars in addition thereto will be distributed among the lucky holders, in the shape of prizes ranging from $20 to $5000. Then each of the nine thousand drawn bonds will stand one chance in eight to win a prize of not less than $20 nor more than $5000. To illustrate, suppose the laborer with $7 goes on to Carondelet street to-morrow and buys, say premium bond No. 163 of series No. 2. At the "drawing of the series," on October 15, suppose series No. 2 is drawn. His bond being one of that series is instantaneously worth $22 50. He can sell it for that and as much more as its value as a ticket in the January prize drawing may command for it. He will, however, be most likely to keep it until the drawing, when he will receive his $22 50 certainly, and perchance No. 163 will be the number that will draw the $5000 prize.

The triple point to this plan is, that it has all the chances of a lottery with none of the losses, all the convenience of a deposit of money in bank with none of the risks, and all the profit of loaning money on ordinary interest with none of its trouble, dangers or expenses.

The only weak spot about the whole thing is the fact that the holders of four million three hundred thousand dollars of old consolidated bonds, are refusing to exchange those bonds for premiums, and litigating the city with a view to enforce the payment of their old bonds in preference to others. But all they can do is to litigate until they become exhausted and accept the situation. There is a first class chance that the city will beat them, but if it does not, if they have the law and the courts all with them, it will nevertheless take them about as long as it is taking Mrs. Gaines to bring an unwilling community to its knees.

In the meantime their hostility is really and in truth a great advantage to the city's interest as against the immediate interests of the premium bondholders. It raises a cloud of dust and keeps the price of bonds down, and this is turned to the city's benefit by a most excellent feature of the plan. So long as these consolidated bondholders refuse to fund, $4,300,000 in premium bonds will remain in the hands of the city awaiting their exchange.

All the while, however, some of them are being drawn in the series to be paid, and consequently in the prize drawings also draw prizes. The money which is set aside to pay their interest, principal and prizes is not kept on hand for the obstinate holders of the old bonds whenever they make up their minds to come in. On the contrary it is used to redeem the city's debt by buying in from the lowest bidder in the open market, either old unfunded bonds or new outstanding premium bonds, which of course are cancelled.

For example, suppose that all the forty-five series or four thousand five hundred bonds to be drawn on the 15th belong the bonds the city still has on hand. Their principal of $90,000, their accrued interest of $11,250 and the prizes of $50,000, if they should draw them all, making $151,250 in cash, instead of extinguishing $90,000 of the premium bonded debt will be used in the market to purchase premium bonds at the rate say 33⅓ cents on the dollar and will thus extinguish $453,750 of the debt, or more than three times as much as would be extinguished if all the old debt was already funded and all the new bonds outstanding.

The success of the plan thus far has been simply brilliant. Its operations speaks for themselves in facts that are more eloquent than words. Already it has reduced the debt $1,129,146 53. It has not done this by increasing taxation. On the contrary, the city taxes have been reduced from three per cent. in 1873 to one and a half per cent. in 1877. This reduction has been made possible only by the workings of this plan. ... it has saved two millions ... to our people in taxes ... Three years ago our city ... for the simple item of interest on the city debt, amounted to ... Under the premium ... the total amount of taxes ... for 1877, for principal ... prizes, is $329,250 ... it is true, will increase gradually each year, but on the other hand it must be remembered that the ability of the city to pay will increase as this breathing spell enables her to recover, and that the size of the debt is being certainly reduced.

The idea that premium bonds don't bear interest is a mistake. They bear five per cent until they are drawn and paid, which on the present market value is equal to 15 per cent. The interest is not separable from the principal. It cannot be cut and spent. But each year it is kept, the bond becomes five per cent more valuable. The series to which it belongs may be drawn next year or forty years hence. But when it is drawn, the principal with the accumulated interest to date are all paid in a lump, and it has a chance to draw a prize.

In the normal state of affairs which is now restored, the market value of undrawn bonds will increase more than five cent. per annum, and thus the interest can always be more than realized by selling the bond, the intrinsic money value of an unknown premium bond ten years from now will be 98½ cents on the dollar. The market value on account of the prizes will necessarily be more.

There are two distinct drawings—The "series drawings" which are quarterly, and the "premium drawings" which are semi-annual. The series drawings occur on the 31st of January, the 15th of April, the 31st of July, the 15th of October. The premium drawings and semi-annual payments of drawn bonds, their interest and prizes, occur on January 15th and July 15. The second year of the operations of the plan ended with last June.

During these two first years of the plan, 250 series, or 25,000 bonds, were drawn, amounting to $500,000, on which the interest was $33,750, all of which amount was paid in cash. During the present, or third year, 9000 more bonds, with interest and prizes, will be likewise redeemed. Of the $1,129,146 53 of bonds cancelled and extinguished $568,386 53 were old unfunded and $560,760 were new premium bonds.

A Mother's Influence.

A distinguished public man of Indiana, the late Hon. D. D. Pratt, was engaged at the time of his sudden death, in writing for his own town paper, reminiscences of his life. Afflicted with heart disease, and otherwise in feeble health, he dictated to his daughter what he designed for publication. He was narrating, and his daughter writing the story of a terrible temptation which assailed him when quite a youth. By attention to business and correct deportment, he had won the implicit confidence of all who knew him. This confidence was shown, when on one occasion—before the days of rapid and easy communication by means of railroad and telegraph—he was sent with twenty-two thousand dollars, to deliver in the far distant Cincinnati. Day after day on his long horse back journey, he guarded his treasure with the most scrupulous fidelity, without a thought of dishonesty. But he said:

"There was a moment, a supreme and critical one, when the voice of the tempter penetrated my ear. It was the old tempter that sung in the ear of Eve. It was when I reached the crown of those imperial hills that overlook the Ohio River when approaching Lawrenceburg from the interior. The noble stream was the great artery of communication at that day, before a railroad West of Massachusetts had been built. What a gay spectacle it presented, flashing in the bright sunlight, covered with flat boats, with rafts, with gay painted streamers, ascending and descending, and transporting the passengers in brief time to the Gulf of Mexico, the gate way to all parts of the world. I had but to sell my horse and go aboard one of these with my treasure, and I was absolutely beyond the reach of pursuit.

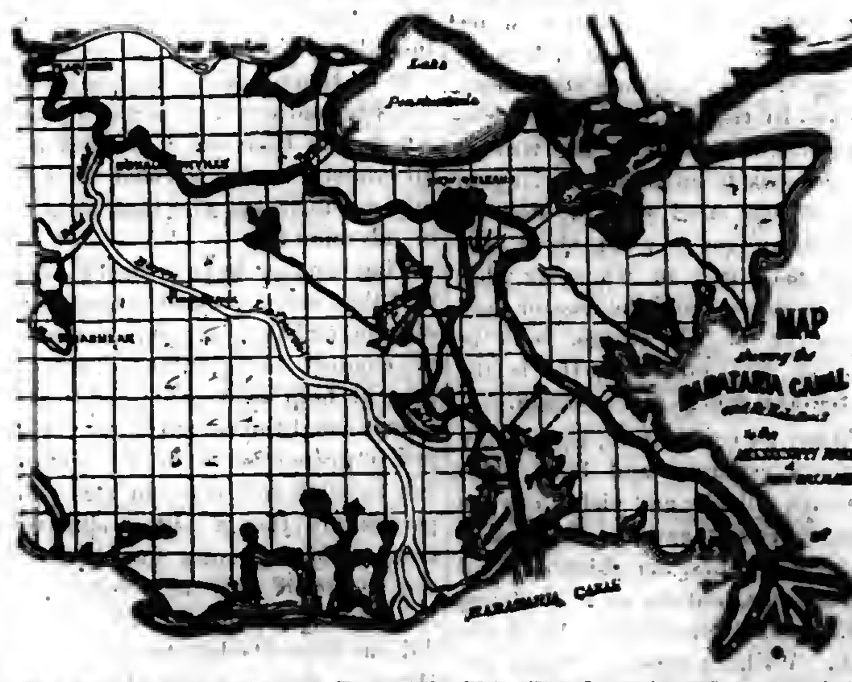
There were no telegraphs then, flashing intelligence by any agency more subtle than steam and far outrunning it; no extradition treaties requiring foreign government to return the felon.

The world was before me, and at the age of twenty-one, with feeble ties connecting me with those left behind, I was in possession of a fortune for those early days.

I recall the fact that this thought was a tenant of my mind for a moment, and for a moment only. Bless God it found no hospitable lodgement any longer. And what think you, gentle reader, were the associate thoughts that came to my rescue? Away over the rivers and mountains, a thousand miles distant, in a humble farm-house, on a bench, an aged mother reading to her boy the oracles of God." * *

At this point his voice choked, his emotion overcame him, he said to his daughter, "We will finish this at another time"—he laid his head back over his chair, and died almost instantly without a groan.—Kentucky Presbyterian.

THE BARATARIA CANAL.



The line proposed for the Barataria Ship Canal, projected and originally surveyed by John Cowdon, starts from the Mississippi River, at Harvey's Canal, opposite New Orleans, and enters the Gulf through Grand Pass, at Fort Livingston.

The distance by the surveyed route to the Gulf is less than sixty miles. The cost of the work, as estimated by J. J. Williams, who in connection with G. C. Forshey, made a careful and accurate survey of the route, is as follows, to-wit:

The cost of 24 foot lock at New Orleans and sea walls on the bar and a channel to the depth of 12 feet clear through will cost $1,768,758.

2. The cost of the 24 foot channel clear through, 150 feet wide, will cost $4,535,431.

3. For the cost of a 36 foot channel $6,620,000.

4. For the cost of a 36 foot channel, in round numbers, say $10,000,000.

The Barataria Ship Canal Company was chartered by the last Legislature of this State, which also passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, This Legislature regards the opening of the Mississippi River, with a deep and permanent outlet to the Gulf of Mexico, through Barataria Bay, as a matter of great importance to not only the city of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana, but the whole Union, as well as the commercial interest of all civilization; therefore be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana, the Senate concurring, That we urgently request the Congress of the United States, at its earliest possible moment, to grant such charter or other legislation as may be necessary to enable the Barataria Canal Company to place this great enterprise properly before the capitalists of the world.

A Cat's Curiosity About Bees.

Charles Kaiser, who has the only hive of bees in town, says that when he first got his swarm, his old cat's curiosity was much excited in regard to the doings of the little insects, the like of which she had never before seen. At first she watched their comings and goings at a distance. She then flattened herself upon the ground and crept along toward the hive, with tail horizontal and quivering. It was clearly evident that she thought the bees were some new kind of game. Finally she took up a position at the entrance to the hive, and when a bee came in or started out, made a dab at it with her paws. This went on for a time without attracting the special attention of the inhabitants of the hive. Presently, however, "Old Tabby" struck and crushed a bee on the opening leading to the hive. The smell of the crushed bee alarmed and enraged the whole swarm. Bees by the score poured forth and darted into the fur of the astonished cat. Tabby rolled herself in the grass, spitting, sputtering, biting, clawing and squalling as cat never squalled before. She appeared a mere ball of fur and bees as she rolled and tumbled about. She was at length hauled away from the hive with a garden rake, at the cost of several severe stings to her rescuer. Even after she had been taken to a distant part of the grounds, the bees stuck in Tabby's fur, and about once in two minutes she would utter an unearthly "yowl" and bounce a full yard in the air. On coming down she would try to scratch an ear, when a sting on the back would cause her to turn a succession of back somersets and give vent to a running fire of squalls. Like the parrot that was left alone with the monkey, old Tabby had a dreadful time.

Two or three days after this adventure, Tabby was caught by her owner who took her by the neck and threw her down near the bee-hive. No sooner did she strike the ground than she gave a fearful squall, and at a single bound reached the top of a fence full six feet in height. There she clung for a moment with tail as big as a rolling-pin, when with another bound and squall she was out of sight and did not again put in an appearance for over a week.—Virginia City, (Nev.,) Enterprise.

Vos Bender Henshpecked?

Any shentleman vot vill go round behind your face, and talk in front of your back about sometings, vas a shwindler. I heared dot Brown say week pefore next apont me dot I vas a henshpecked huspand. Dot vas a lie! De proof of de eating vas in de puddings: I am married twenty year already, and I vas yet not pald-headed. I doon't vas conder some pettygoats goferaments; shtill I tinks it vas petter if a feller vill insult mit his vife and get her advices apout sometings or oder.

Dem American vomans don't know sometings nefer apout his huspant's peesnesses, und vhen dem bart times comes, und not so much money comes in de house, dot makes not some tifference mit her. Shtill she moost have vone of dot pull-pack-in-de-front hoop-skirt-pettigoats, mit every kind trimmings. Pooty soon dot huspant gets pankerupted all to pieces. Dey send for de Doctor; und vhen de Doctor comes de man dies. Den dot vomans vas opliged to marry mit anoder mans vot she don't maybe like mit four or six shildrens, on account of his first vife already, und possobably vone or two mudders-by-law,—vone second-handed, und de oder a shtep-mudder-out-law. Den she says mit herself, "I efen vish I vas dead a little."

Now if a Chermans goes dead, dot don't make a pit of tifference. Nopody vould hardly know it, except maybe himself. His vife goes mit de peesness on shust like notings has happened to somebody.

American vomans und Cherman vomans vas a tifferent kind of peobles. For inshtinct, last year dot same feller, Mr. Brown, goes mit me in de putcher poesness togeder. He vas American man,—so vas his vife. Vell, many time when efery peobles got de panic pooty bad, dot vomans comes to her huspant und says she moost have money. Don she goes out riding mit a carraiges.

Vonce on a time, Brown says to me, "Bender, I vould'nt be henshpecked." So he vent off und got himself tight—shust pecause his vife tells him, blease don't do dot. Den he sits down on his pack mit de floor, und if I am not dere dot time he nover vould got home.

Vell, dot night, me und my vife, ve had a little talk apout sometings; und de next tay I says to Brown, "Look here vonst! My vife she makes sausages, und vorks in dot shtore; also my daughter she vorks py de shtore und makes bead-skeeses; und your vife vas going out riding all de times mit de horse-car, und a patent-tied-pack-cardinal shtriped shtockings. Now your vife moost go vork in de shtore und cut peefshteaks und make sauerkraut, or else ve divide not equally any more dot profits."

Vell, Brown goes home und he tells his vife apout dot. Den she comes pooty quick mit Brown around, und ve had a misundershtanding apout sometings, in vhich eferypody took a part, including my leetle dog Kaiser. Pooty soon up comes a policemans und arrests us for breeches of de promises to keep de pieces, und assaulting de pattles mit sometings. Den de firm of Bender und Brown vas proke up. I go apout my peesness, und Brown goes mit his peesness. My vife she helps in de shtore. His vife goes riding mit de horse-cars, und efery nights she vas by de theater.

Vot's de gonsequences? Along comes dot Centennial panic. Dot knocks Brown more high as two kites, py Chimminy! My income vas shtill more as my outcome. But Brown, he goes 'round dot shtreets mit his hands out of his pockets, und he don't got a cent to his pack. VON BOYLE.

Congress will meet at noon, Oct. 15.

The Herald's Salt Lake dispatches report the indictment and arrest of Orrin Porter Rockwell, the notorious Mormon murderer, and chief of the Danites, for participation in the Aitken massacre in 1858. Rockwell was a ready tool of the Mormon leaders. He was accused in 1840 of the attempted assassination of Gov. Tilburn and W. Boggs of Missouri. It is believed Rockwell and associates murdered Almon W. Babbitt and companions on the Plains in 1856. The massacre of a party of apostle Mormons, is also laid to his charge. Several additional murders are imputed to him. He promises to make a confession.

A formal reception was granted the Sioux chiefs who recently visited Washington, at the President's mansion, at which Spotted Tail and several of the leaders made speeches stating their wants. They ask to be transferred to good lands upon the White River, and when they are established in their new homes they wish to remain permanently. If this shall be granted they offer to abandon all claim to the Black Hills. They profess a desire to settle down to the cultivation of the land. They ask for free trade with the whites, and protest against the policy which forces them to buy their goods from post-traders only, who, having a monopoly of the Indian market are able to plunder their customers. Still another reform they wish is the right of transferring their supplies from the posts to their homes in their own wagons, and they argue intelligently that it is an extortion to compel them to pay the traders high prices for work they are able to perform themselves. The chiefs are now awaiting the response of the Government.

God our Refuge.

The forty-sixth Psalm is a sublime ode, expressive of the highest Christian confidence. The first verse strikes the key-note: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." What a very shout of triumph this is. The world may look to its own wisdom for counsel in the day of trial; it may cling to its formulas of unbelief in the day of soul affliction; it may trust in chariots and horses, backed by earthly thrones and principalities, to overcome the wrong; it may seek to satisfy the cravings of an immortal mind with the dictates of human reason; in short, the world may trust in whom or what it pleases, but God the creator and preserver of all things, both in Heaven and on earth, He is the Christian's refuge and strength.

What we call nature, is, in many respects generous and kind. Her laws are reliable, and yield to us the means of sustenance. The earth yields her fruits, the skies descend in blessings, and the air is burdened with grateful fragrance. All this is well. Without these, we could not live, and if it was all of life, simply to live, then man would need no other refuge than nature provides. His body could be fed, and when like all else in nature it decayed, it would find a resting place. But the nature that we see, is only the outer garb of the real world, and our bodies that are allied to that nature, are but the temporary homes in which the real man lives for a brief time.

If to what nature does for us in the movements of her laws, we add the highest fruits of human thought we advance greatly in providing a refuge for the soul. We have crossed the Rubicon toward our highest destiny. Mind is superior to, and must triumph over matter, and every hour given to the study of nature, to the investigation of her laws, and the solving of her mysteries, and the practical bearing of her teachings, only prepares the way for the inflowing of higher truth.

If we add to the teaching of nature the intuitions of the soul, we rise a step higher. We then enter the realm of moral truth. We acknowledge the distinctions between right and wrong. We then catch glimpses of the proper relations we sustain to nature, to our fellow men, and to ourselves. We even dream of immortality, and feel within us the quickenings of its thought. The stars above us may come to be sentinels pointing onward and upward to their Creator. All things in nature may speak of their Maker, and awaken longings to know Him and be like Him. There have been periods of the world when the most diligent and profound study of nature has been combined with the thoughts of the best intellects and purest souls. This combination occurred amid the grandest triumphs of human progress in art and social culture. Socrates was one of the purest types of such an age. He even combined more than we have mentioned. It is quite probable that he was the object of a special inspiration. At any rate, he was a pure and noble type of man, seeking rest for his soul amid the teachings of nature, and the best impulses of this life. He succeeded in part, but the uncertainty with which he spoke of the future, shows that his soul-rest was not perfect. When about to drink his death, he said to his executioner: "I take this not knowing whether I shall be better off than you to-morrow."

Add to what nature and the intuitions of the soul may yield us, the power of human sympathy, and the soul has another aid to rest. What it is that binds heart to heart, and links destiny with destiny, we cannot tell, but that all are definitely [illegible], and that each soul is [illegible] affected by other souls about [illegible] are well established facts. Now, when sorrow comes; when calamity [illegible] our substance, or the [illegible] away our loved [illegible] then we yearn for human [illegible]. And how grateful it is [illegible] poured upon our souls [illegible] upon the drooping [illegible] and bless us. O, [illegible] live in this world with[illegible] the power of [illegible] They [illegible] calamities of life, [illegible] these as well as [illegible] when the [illegible] from [illegible] Then there [illegible] life in which [illegible] bring no solace [illegible]

Next above the sympathy of human hearts, is that of the angels:

"Angels are men of a superior kind:
Angels are men in lighter habit clad,
High o'er celestial mountains winged in flight.
And men are angels loaded for an hour,
Who wade the miry vale and climb with pain,
And slippery step, the bottom of the steep."

"The angel of the Lord campeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth Him." Christ said, "take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones: for I say unto you that in Heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven." "Are they not all ministering angels sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?"

That angels have a being, and that they are interested in the affairs of men, and that they are a source of comfort to the afflicted, and a present help in trouble, are truths clearly taught in God's Word. And just in proportion as they are superior to earth and man, in that proportion are they a higher spiritual refuge. Man knows but little of the power of this help because of his sins. Were our lives but pure, did our thoughts but dwell more in Heaven; were our aspirations more after God, and was our communion unbroken with Him, then the power of the unseen world would more truly be felt and recognized.

But let us suppose the life to be pure, and the heart to be brought into all possible sympathy with the angelic hosts—would the soul then have a refuge and help that would be sufficient? No. He alone that created the soul, that formed its wonderfully intricate being, that knows its every want, that comprehends its highest destiny, and its greatest possible danger. He alone, who has power to create and redeem the soul, can give it a sure refuge and strength. Beyond law, the soul's refuge is in Him whose word is law—back of the souls own best impulses we must go to Him whose breath those impulses are—above the friends that circle about us, we must go to Him that is a friend indeed—above the angels that circle about the throne the soul must go to Him by whom angels were created. Hence we sing—

"Nearer my God to Thee,
Nearer to Thee,
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me,
Still all my song shall be
Nearer my God to Thee,
Nearer to Thee."

The Jetties and the Barataria Canal.

An old adage says, that "it never rains but it pours." It seems that we are to have an exemplification of this in the solution of the question of deep water to the sea. A water route, by which sea-going vessels of the first-class, could be brought to this port, was a prime necessity, not only to the commercial interests of this city, but of the Mississippi Valley. Whether this was to be obtained by improvements at the mouth of the river, or by canal, was a question upon which our most eminent civil engineers have always been divided in opinion. Captain Eads, backing his faith by his works in taking all risks, has given us the former, in the Jetties, and the interest aroused in the latter, in the past few weeks by Captain John Cowdon, at Memphis, Louisville, Cincinnati and other points, indicates that the Barataria Ship Canal is to become a reality in the near future.

We give on the first page of this paper a map, showing proposed route of this canal, with estimates of cost. The distance by it to deep sea-water is some fifty miles shorter than by the river. The friends of this enterprise claim that when it is completed, a vessel can be put to sea at less cost by way of the canal than by the jetties—that the charge for towage in the greater distance on the river would amount to more than the tolls required by the canal. In addition to all commercial advantages, it will be pleasant for the people of this city to be placed in more direct communication with Barataria Bay—its delightful summer resorts, fishing and salt-water bathing. The following is Captain Cowdon's description of the Barataria route:

It is designed to commence the canal opposite New Orleans, at what is known as the Harvey Canal, which is now 6 feet deep and 60 feet wide, and five miles long, which brings us to where the work of nature commences, where we strike the Barataria Bayou, which is, for 12 miles, 150 feet wide and 20 feet deep. A continuation of this bayou widens from 300 to 600 feet, with a clear twenty-feet channel all the way; thence another bayou 2 miles long, with a depth of 8 feet and a width of 120 feet; thence a cut through the marsh of 8 miles, which intersects Bayou Saint Denis, which is from 1500 to 1800 feet wide and from 20 to 30 feet deep, for 6 miles; thence through Barataria Bay, with a depth of from 7 to 10 feet, 10 miles to Barataria Harbor, where there is now an area of from 3 to 4 superficial square miles of water, from 24 to 70 feet deep. The Grand Pass is 1500 feet wide, with a depth of from 40 to 70 feet. Through this pass there is a daily in and outflow of Gulf water, as computed by Professor Forshey, of 8,029,000,000 cubic feet. When this vast volume of Gulf water may be confined between guard walls across the bar, the walls placed 2000 feet apart, it will give an easy and permanent channel of at least 40 feet in depth, there being no mud or silt from the mouth of the Mississippi or from the upper end of the canal, to fill it up, as the month of the canal at the river end will be secured by locks. This great work can be accomplished at a comparatively trifling expense. A company for the construction of the canal is organized, and has the money with which to complete the work, and will commence as soon as some more legal legislation shall be secured from Congress at its next session.

As to the success of the Jetties, we subjoin a few extracts from the recently published letter of Captain Eads, reviewing the last official report of the United States inspecting officer, Captain M. R. Brown.

Section 17 on Captain Brown's chart, located immediately in advance of the jetties, contains an area of about 38 acres. By his report, this section has actually had an average increase of depth in twelve months of almost four feet.

Instead then of the rapid reformation of the bar that was to have occurred according to the arguments and statements of the opponents of the jetties, we find that the building of them has produced results in advance of them, the very reverse of those predicted in the letter of the chief of engineers previously referred to; and that from the district on which the anticipated shoaling was to occur, there has been actually taken away from it under the effect of the jetties, in twelve months, according to Capt. Brown's surveys, 1,145,976 cubic yards of deposit—a quantity sufficient to fill a street or canal fifty feet wide and ten miles long to an average depth of eleven and a half feet, and this too occurred while the river current took up from the jetty channel an additional amount sufficient to fill to the same depth a canal twice as large.

The report shows that the amount of materiel removed from between the jetties in a period of one hundred and seven days was equal to 1,546,917 cubic yards. Surely if the reformation of the bar is to take place within the next century, it would show some signs of it during the period when the channel between the jetties is being washed out and formed. Already about five million cubic yards have been removed from between them, and a very large additional amount has been removed by the effect of our works at the head of the pass, where a channel has been scoured out with a minimum depth through it of nearly, or quite 23 feet, and yet we find a continual deepening of the sea immediately in advance of the discharge from the jetties.

Certainly, after the testimony furnished by the government surveys and those of my assistant engineers, no man who regards truth and fair play will now assert that the theories and conditions relied upon for securing a permanent channel by the jetty system are not triumphantly demonstrated by these results.

The substantial and permanent character of the jetties has been endorsed by the commission appointed to examine them last winter, composed of Generals Barnard, Wright and Alexander, United States engineers. They have been subjected during their construction to some of the most severe storms ever known in the Gulf of Mexico without sustaining important injury, and the one which occurred a few days ago equalled or surpassed in fury the previous ones without doing any damage to them whatever.

When these facts are contrasted with the extensive injury reported to have occurred to the jetties being constructed at Galveston, the value of the plan of construction we have pursued must be apparent.

The porous character of the mattress work has permitted a large portion of the water received at the upper end of the jetties to pass off latterally through them without reaching the jetty month. While this delays the deepening of the channel at the lower end of the jetties, the sediment carried off through them has built up extensive shoals against them on the sea sides of the work, and they are thus immensely strengthened against the attacks of the sea almost all of the way out to their seaward ends. These shoals are now visible at low tide, and cover many hundred acres, and they are already so high as to materially lessen the wastage of the water that formed them. Although the river has been extremely low for several months, and its erosive forces greatly reduced, the solidification of the jetties by sedimentary deposit in them and by the compressing effects of the large quantity of stone put on them, has tended to give us more benefit from the river current and from tidal action than we could otherwise have had, so that a continual improvement in the channel has been noticable ever since the low water season began.

The improvement of the channel has been such that the government has ceased its dredging operations at Southwest Pass, and the jetty channel is now the recognized highway for the deep draft vessels trading to New Orleans. Capt. Brown, in his August report, gives 20 feet and 6-10 as the least depth of channel through the jetties. Recent advices give a wide channel over 21 feet deep.

The Pastor and Stewards.

A brother asks, "Can a pastor remove a steward from his office and fill it with another without due trial?"

Stewards can only be removed by a vote of the Quarterly Conference, on the motion of the pastor. If a steward is tried and expelled from the Church that removes him from his office, because stewards must be members of the Church. The pastor, of himself, can neither remove nor appoint stewards. Look at the discipline.

Louisiana State Consols are now in demand and stand high. Not a few attribute this to the change in our State Administration. This is a mistake. The change has helped them some, but the real cause is in the fact that the late Administration under Governor Kellogg, by Constitutional amendment, limited the State debt to $15,000,000, and provided that the income of each year should go only to pay the expenses of that year. Added to this was the scaling and funding bill, by which the doubtful claims against the State were subjected to legal tests, and the whole debt scaled forty per cent. and funded in new bonds. The provisions of the law were partly carried out under Governor Kellogg, and have been completed under Governor Nichols. The final result has just been published in the Democrat, and shows the debt of the State to be now not quite $12,000,000. That is $3,000,000 less than the Constitutional limit. It is the bonds of this reduced debt that are valuable. The Chamber of Commerce, while Mr. Kellogg was Governor, appointed a committee, of which Gen. C. Bussey and Hon. J. H. Oglesby were members. This committee secured the framing of the above law and a Republican Legislature passed it, and also submitted the Constitutional amendments, and Republican votes made the amendments a part of the Constitution, while Democratic papers and votes sought to defeat them. We are in favor of doing justice to all parties.

The war between Russia and Turkey still furnishes the chief topic of interest in foreign news. In Europe the Turks hold Plevna, and have repulsed several attacks. The Russians hold Schipka Pass in the Balkan mountains, but this seems to be of little practical importance. Winter has come and it is probable that the campaign for this year is over in Europe. In Asia the battle has been renewed by Russia. An attack was made along the line defending Kars, the chief fortified town protecting Constantinople from the East. Accounts differ, but it seems certain that the Russians were repulsed with the loss of several thousands. Thus a second time, has Russia been defeated in Asia.

The unexpected and almost uninterrupted success of Turkish arms has had a powerful effect upon public sentiment. Russia is threatened with being reduced to a second rate power in military prowess. Still the final victory of Russia is generally conceded, because of her immense reserve forces. Everything indicates that the war will be carried on another year. Up to Sept. 12th., Russia reports a loss of 52,000 men.

Will the editor of the Central Methodist please give his readers our explanation of what we mean by Our Southern Methodism, and let them judge whether that explanation covers the case or not? We are willing to abide by their verdict.

So far as that editor himself is concerned, the following paragraph from his pen in his paper of the 22nd ult., is of a character to make his opinions of but little value. A more ungentlemanly item we have not seen disgrace a Christian paper. It is false in its statements, and displays a degree of uncharitableness of judgment truly pitiable. Here is the item:—

Now that the title to three churches in New Orleans, taken from us during the war at the point of the bayonet, has been confirmed to the Northern Church, the editor of the Southwestern hollows, in substance, Hurrah for fraternity. Well said. But for the advantage Northern Methodism expected by it, fraternity with us would not have been thought of. Every time the settlement of a church trial results in our favor they talk mad at us, and use hard names, but when they win, a shout is ordered, and their joy is full.

Rev. Jesse Boring suggests in the interests of fraternity in the Southern Christian Advocate, Macon, Ga., that the Methodist Episcopal Church withdraw entirely from the Southern territory, and that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as equally withdraw from the territory of the Church, North.

We advise that brother to study the general minutes of the two churches he names. One or two conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South we could name, has more members, ministers and churches than the M. E. Church, South, has in all the northern States and territories.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. D. Mucker, Georgetown, Texas, writes: "We have just closed a ten days meeting in which there were ten conversions, and eight accessions to the Church. We have a good Sunday-school."

Rev. R. Anderson, St. Paul circuit, Miss., says: "At a meeting just closed there were fifteen conversions and twelve accessions to the church. The Sunday-school shares with the church the spiritual blessing."

Rev. J. D. Walden, Goodman, Miss., writes: "At a meeting just closed at Ebenezer, there were seven conversions and thirty-three accessions to the church. May the blessings of the Lord abide with us."

Rev. A. Wesley, Cotton Gin, Texas, says: "So far this year, we have had sixty-eight accessions to the church, and thirty-nine persons have been baptized. This is in a wild portion of the State. Pray for us that the Spirit may direct us."

Rev. G. L. Lynch, of St. Charles, La., reports an excellent Sabbath of services, Oct. 7th, Rev. M. Dale, of New Orleans, was present and preached an excellent sermon, and conducted communion services at night. Bro. Lynch is well liked by his people. He has been quite sick but is better.

Rev. Jesse P. Price, Brownsville, Tenn., says: "I have just closed a protracted meeting at my appointment in the country at which seven persons professed faith in Christ, and four united with the church. The members of both church and Sunday-school are greatly revived, and our prospects for the future bright."

Rev. D. James, Shubuta Circuit, Miss., says: "We have just closed a protracted meeting in which there were twenty-five conversions, and the same number of additions to the Church. There are five appointments on this Circuit, and the work at each is in good condition. I am seventy years of age, but the Lord has strengthened me and blessed me in my labors."

Reuben Patton, Nolensville, Tenn., sends an interesting account of a grand union Sunday-school exhibition and pic-nic held at Mint Springs in his vicinity. Five schools were present and a delightful time was experienced by all. Among the subjects discussed by the speakers were "Education, its advantages and the difficulties of obtaining it," "Sunday-schools," "Temperance," and an essay by a young lady on "Manners."

Rev. W. M. Estass, Gonzales, Texas, writes: "At our Camp meeting, just closed, we received eight persons into the Church in full membership, and six on probation. This makes twenty-three accessions during the year, including two Baptist preachers and one from the A. M. E. Church. We have had to labor under many disadvantages this year. Our house of worship having been burned up, our people are greatly disheartened and discouraged. They think it useless to put up another wooden building, and they are too poor to build of brick or stone. I support myself in part by teaching. May the Lord bless this people and direct them in their afflictions."

First Street Church, New Orleans, had an interesting series of meetings on Sunday, October 7th. The morning was given to the Sunday-school, the children spoke pieces and sang, and made an offering of $11 for the missionary cause. The school was addressed by Rev. E. Williams, who urged upon the children the necessity of industry, economy, morality and education. The pastor, Rev. H. Green, also spoke, and Messrs. Campbell and Blunt. At 3 o'clock the old veteran, Scott Chinn, preached, and at night Allen Luster spoke. Thirty-two dollars were collected during the day.

Rev. D. McLachlin, Presiding Elder of Okolona, Miss., District, says: "We have just held the Third Quarterly services for Columbus, and Columbus Circuit. The work of both we found in a most encouraging condition. Rev. Wesley Jones, at Columbus, has received during the year ninety-two persons into the church, and there have been eighty-one conversions. The Sunday-school numbers one hundred and seventy-five, and is very prosperous; has recently purchased a new organ at a cost of $310. Rev. H. Hardy in charge of the circuit commenced the year under unfavorable circumstances, but the Lord has blessed his labors. He has had sixty-nine accessions and there have been about sixty conversions."

The City.

The Louisianian is out again.

U. S. Marshal Wharton has gone to Washington.

Dr. M. A. Southworth has gone on a business trip to the North.

Mr. T. H. Dickson, Secretary of the Vicksburg Cotton Exchange, was in the city last Monday.

Hon. W. L. McMillen, it is reported from Washington, will be offered the pension Agency, vice Isabelle, suspended.

There is a report that the Republican is to be revived as a weekly, with Mr. Tracy at the head. We hope this is true.

The receipts at the Custom House for the week ending Oct. 6th, was $110,165.12 in coin, and $3,624.93 in currency; total $113,790.05.

Rev. Mr. Alexander has returned to the pastorate of the Gasquet Congregational Church, and takes the Presidency of Straight University.

The result of the late examination of teachers, for the Public Schools has not been published as yet. Several hundred were examined.

Among the evidences of returning good feeling between the North and South, one of the best is the increasing willingness of Northern capitalists to invest money in the South. One instance is that of the White Star Shoe Company of Boston and Philadelphia. This large firm has established a branch at 596 Magazine street, in this city. We welcome it to our midst and trust that its success may be excellent.

The Fulton Canning Company, of Fulton, Texas, have an office at 51 Carondelet, under the management of Hon. E. Pilsbury. The Company is engaged successfully in a most important enterprise. They supply in two and six pound cans, roast beef, beef tongues, beef kidneys, green turtle for soup, &c. All the original flavor is retained. We have tried these meats and they are excellent.

There was a grand convocation of Odd Fellows in New Orleans last week. Delegates were present from many States and Canada. Only colored Odd Fellow Lodges were represented. The procession was one of the most orderly, best uniformed and drilled that we have seen on the much paraded streets of this city. About fifteen hundred were in line. At night, in St. Patrick's Hall was an immense gathering, an oration by J. M. Vance, Jr., music and good cheer for many hours.

From Nashville.

The President's reception here was a very flattering endorsement of his Southern policy. The old flag waved everywhere, and it reminded one of the glorious 4th in anti-bellum times North of Dixie. The President could not object to the display of popular enthusiasm. Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, was of course warmly received. He was entitled to the particular respects of his old associates in the Confederacy. His presence, however, did not detract from the cordiality of the popular ovation to the President. The Committee in charge of the preparations, blundered in arranging some of the details of the reception, and placed the different speakers—the President, Hampton, Key and Evarts—where they were surrounded by a score of men, and but a few individuals of the thousands that were on the Capitol grounds could see or hear them.

The schools of Nashville open with a larger attendance than usual. The city schools are crowded, and many of the colored children have been refused admission because every seat was full. There is talk of building another house for the colored children. It is very much needed, scores, if not hundreds, of them are compelled to run the streets, when they should be acquiring the elements of an education. The Central Tennessee College shares in the general increase in attendance upon the schools. The increase over the first month of the last school year is about forty per cent. Yesterday the Tennessee Conference of the A. M. E. Church visited the college in a body by the invitation of the faculty. Bishop Wyman was present, and the Conference and students being assembled in the college chapel, the president welcomed the Conference as co-[illegible] in the great educational [illegible] the colored people. [illegible] speeches were made by the bishop and the secretary and assistant secretary of the Conference, Brothers Thomas and Shafer and the Rev. J. G. Thompson, vice-president of the board of trustees of the college. At the close of these exercises in the chapel the Conference repaired to the dining room, where all partook of an excellent repast that had been prepared by the matron, Mrs. Lucy Dean, assisted by willing [illegible] among the students. The whole affair passed off pleasantly and will be remembered by the students and members of the Conference as one of the pleasantest episodes in life.

Some of the churches in the city are enjoying seasons of revival. The Temperance reform, under the lead of some of the most prominent clergymen, is moving on in the form of the Murphy reformation.

[illegible] to the expectation of many [illegible] and Democrats, the [illegible] of the city [illegible] a very large [illegible] in the municipal election last [illegible], Sept. 29th.

FIRST DAY.

[illegible]

From our Mission Rooms.

Dr. Nast is once more in America.

The Secretaries of the following Conferences will confer a great favor on the Mission Rooms, 805 Broadway, New York City, if they will furnish them with a copy of their Conference minutes, to-wit: New Mexico, Delaware, Colorado, Montana, Utah, Columbia River, S. California, Oregon, Central German, Iowa, Detroit, Michigan, Cincinnati, N. W. Swedish, E. Ohio, Des Moines, California, N. W. Indiana, Indiana, S. W. German, and all others, not mentioned, meeting this fall.

The Fourth Annual Meeting of the Japan Mission was held this year in Tokio, July 10—16. Rev. J. C. Davisson preached the opening sermon, who was chosen Secretary, with Bro. Keedo as assistant. Seven young men passed the examinations. Six of them were recommended for admission on trial in an annual Conference, and will be duly presented to one or more of the home Conferences accordingly.

A very interesting Conference meeting with the Missionary of the Methodist Church of Canada was a feature of the occasion. A uniform hymn book for these two Methodist bodies seemed desirable, and much effort was made to secure uniformity in these Methodist bodies in the use of theological terms and ecclesiastical phraseology in the translation of the Ritual.

Home methods are imitated in many or most of these foreign Conferences and annual meetings, and hence the anniversary occasions become seasons of interest there as here. The native preachers catch the spirit of these occasions, and the inspiration of the audiences, and even their enthusiasm rises to a high degree. At the Biblical Anniversary in this case the Agent of the American Bible Society of China and Japan, Rev. L. Gulick, lent his encouragement to that cause. He spoke through an interpreter. On Sunday cake and tea were substituted for bread and water at the Love Feast. Dr. Maclay preached in Japanese and baptized a child of Bro. Davison. The Canada Methodist, represented by Rev. Geo. Cochran, who presided at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper on Sunday. Two native brethren addressed the Sunday School in the afternoon, and Rev. J. H. Correll preached in Japanese at night.

The public debt reduction during September amounted to $3,882,524 80.

Oct. 21, 1877.—PAUL AND THE BIGOTED JEWS.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts 22: 17-30.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"But woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye shut up the kingdom of Heaven against men."—Matt. 23: 13.

TOPIC.—"Cast down, but not destroyed."

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

Paul had just come out from under the hands of the mob. His clothes must have been torn, his hair dishevelled, his face bruised and bleeding, and his whole person covered with dust. He presented anything but the appearance of the ideal orator. Hampered in his gestures by his chains, and his aspect reduced to caricature, he, certainly, had none of those accessories that help to give an orator success.

Directed (17-21).—When I was come again to Jerusalem. Three years in Arabia intervened before that visit. Gal. 1: 18. Denounced (21, 23).—Very wisely he had kept back that hated word "Gentiles" until he was compelled to speak it. Not just at that word itself, but at this plain declaration of his calling, occurred such a scene as discloses better than anything else could, how they abominated the idea that men of other nations could stand upon an equality with them before God. Their [illegible] mere mention of the thing betokens how much more they were the children of the devil than the favorite children of God, as they claimed to be.

[illegible] the reprobation so strongly expressed, the chief captain could scarcely avoid the conclusion that Paul must be guilty of some horrible offense, and so commanded him to be brought into the barracks again, that he might "examine" him by scourging. Torture has been resorted to in all ages to make men confess their crimes. It is not a very long time ago that [illegible] many a [illegible] from [illegible] that did not have a word of truth in them. That process [illegible] to call "putting men to the question."

[illegible] him with thongs. It is un[illegible] whether this should be [illegible]

no Roman could be scourged at all, whatever was his offense. That indignity was reserved for the back of slaves. Neither was it lawful to degrade one with bonds before he was convicted of any offense. All violations of these immunities, on the part of magistrates or others, was punishable with death. The chief captain, therefore, had cause for fear. Without waiting to be dismissed they "which should have examined him" departed. Paul, though not freed, still was the victor. Once more his presence of mind saved him from indignity and suffering. As ever, he was superior to the circumstances by which he was surrounded.

Debarred from proceeding in the forcible way in which he had intended, to find out the crime which he still assumed Paul had committed, he brought him before the Jewish Sanhedrim. But, before he did this, he loosed him from his bonds. He stood in the presence of the council unshackled, and, not only that, but with the whole power of the Roman government pledged to see that he was robbed of none of his rights. Paul before the council, invested with the inviolable prerogatives of a Roman citizen, is in a very different position from the unprotected Jew who was, so short a time since, the subject of their hate.

In 1869, a man was taken up in Cuba under suspicious circumstances, and, by the Spanish authorities, was condemned to be shot. He was an Englishman by birth, and an American by naturalization, and the consuls of the two countries united in an effort to save his life. The authorities, however, were inexorable, and the man was taken out for execution. At this critical moment the English consul threw around the doomed man the British flag, and the American wrapped him in the folds of the stars and stripes, and both dared the Spaniards to fire upon those national emblems. That they did not care to do. Firing on them was a different thing from shooting at a single individual, whose death prevented all danger of retaliation. This incident, illustrating so closely as it does Paul's experience, suggests how thoroughly protected the sinner is who has wrapped around him the robe of Christ. And, further, that Paul had a better citizenship than that to which he appealed. He was a fellow citizen with the saints and of the household of God." He belonged to the royal household of the Great King. If the chief captain was afraid because unwittingly he had bound a Roman citizen, much more reason had he for fear at having shown such indignity to an accredited ambassador of the Most High God. It is a mistake to suppose that he is indifferent to what is done to his subjects. "He that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye." No outrage upon a single one, even the most humble, of his servants, ever passes unnoticed or is unfelt by him. If those who give to his disciples a cup of cold water are sure of a reward, then those who oppress them are equally sure of punishment. "Shall not God avenge his own elect?" "I tell you," says Christ "that he will avenge them speedily." And the fearfulness of that retribution—who can imagine it! Could it be known, every arm that is now lifted against any one of his "little ones" would fall paralyzed. Let the oppressors of the saints, and the saints themselves, realize that no citizens of any human government are so jealously guarded and so fully avenged as those whose citizenship is of that better country, that is, the heavenly.

M. ADAMS P. E.

The Season of Intermittents.

All miasmatic complaints, in other words, all disorders generated by unwholesome exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In every section subject to the visitation of fever and ague, or other intermittent diseases, the causes which produce these maladies are now actively at work. This, therefore, is a period of the year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet the unwholesome conditions of the atmosphere by a course of tonic and alterative treatment. Foremost among the invigorants, recommended by time and experience as a means of fortifying the system against all endemic and epedemic maladies, stands Hostetter's Stomach bitters. By a timely use of the bitters, the feeble resident of an unhealthy soil may escape the sickness which, without the aid of this potent ally of nature, will be apt to overtake the strongest.

No man engaged in business in this country makes more fair and generous offers to those unacquainted with him than does Daniel Beatty, Esq., of Washington, N. J., and certainly no man can keep them better. Every instrument he sells, piano or organ, is fully warranted for six years, and, while he sells for cash, and thus gives the advantage of the lowest prices, yet no stranger is asked to advance a dollar out of his own control, until he has seen and tested the instrument. See his advertisement in this paper, and if you intend buying an instrument, write to him and examine his method of doing business.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

PROPOSALS FOR CUSTOMHOUSE CARTAGE.

CUSTOMHOUSE, NEW ORLEANS, LA., Collector's Office, September 19, 1877.

In accordance with the provisions of section 25 of the act of Congress, approved June 22, 1874, which reads as follows: "That public cartage of merchandise in "the custody of the Government shall be "let after not less than thirty days' notice "of such letting to the lowest responsible "bidder giving sufficient security, and "shall be subject to regulations approved "by the Secretary of the Treasury"; and the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned will receive sealed written proposals, addressed to him at this office, until 12 o'clock m. of SATURDAY, October 20, 1847, for doing the public cartage of dutiable merchandise at this port for a period of one year from date of contract.

Public cartage should be understood to include all goods in bond, whether passing from the vessel or other conveyance in which imported to the warehouse, or from one vessel or conveyance to another, or from the warehouse on permits for exportation, all unclaimed goods, and all goods ordered to the Appraiser's store for examination. Merchants, however, will be allowed to cart their own merchandise to bonded warehouses in their own bonded drays, should they desire to do so.

No proposal to charge more than twelve cents per package, large and small as they run, will be entertained.

The bidders, in making proposals, must accompany the same by evidence in writing of their responsibility and that they can give undoubted security in the sum of fifteen (15) thousand dollars for the faithful performance of the work and to indemnify the Government against any loss.
JOHN E. KING,
Sept. 27-4t. Collector of Customs.

STARS AND FLOWERS.

When Eve had led her lord away,
And Cain had killed his brother,
The stars and flowers, the poets say,
Agreed with one another

To cheat the cunning tempter's art
And teach the race its duty,
By keeping on its wicked heart
Their eyes of light and beauty.

A million sleepless lids, they said,
Will be at least a warning;
And so the flowers would watch, by day,
The stars from eve till morning.

On hill and prairie, field and lawn,
Their dewy eyes upturning,
The stars still watch from reddening dawn
Till western skies are burning.

Alas! each hour of daylight tells
A tale of shame so crushing
That some turn white as sea-bleached shells,
And some are always blushing.

But when the patient stars look down
On all their light discovers
The traitor's smile, the murderer's frown,
The lips of lying lovers,—

They try to shut their saddening eyes,
And in the vain endeavor
We see them twinkling in the skies,
And so they wink forever.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va. Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, WM. P. GROVE.

J. G. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

SKIN DISEASES.

Swayne's All-healing Ointment is also a specific for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barber's Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Perfectly safe and harmless, even on the most tender infant. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes, $1 25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price. Sold by all leading Druggists. Prepared only by DANIEL F. BEATTY'S Pianos and Organs.

From E. Parson, Brookville, Kansas.

"The piano came safely yesterday, we find it all that fancy painted or you promised. The instrument is handsome and its tone is pure and full. I see no reason why, with ordinary care, it may not last a lifetime. Those who, like me, cannot afford to pay five hundred or a thousand dollars for a name, will, I am sure, thank you for saving them the exorbitant profits of dealers in general, and making it possible for any industrious man or woman to be the possessor of a first-class organ or piano."

From R. Gibert, Doud's Station, Iowa.

"Organ is received. The accomplished organist who gets it says she would not exchange it for any organ she ever saw or heard from any other factory, whatever the price. In mechanical skill, simplicity of construction, and purity of tone, I have never known its equal. It is emphatically the best organ for the least money

I have sold many other makes of organs, some of which I thought could not be equaled, but, like 'King Saul,' your organs are 'head and shoulders' above theirs in the leading elements that constitute a complete organ."

IMPROVED CABINET ORGANS.

Throughout.—Full Organ, (knee stop,) Vox Humana, Octave Coupler, (coupling up,) knee Swell, I. Forte, II. Forte.

The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing that specimens of this fine Organ, (fac similes in their musical part of one furnished Dr. Frans Liszt,) are now ready, and may be seen at their Warerooms and Principal Agencies. The origin of this improved Organ, and of its name, is as follows:

Having occasion to make an organ expressly for the very celebrated Dr. Frans Liszt, in which full sonorous power was especially desired, as well as such delicacy and purity of tone as could afford satisfaction to so critical a judgment as that of this great maestro, we took the opportunity to carry out and introduce improvements which had been first presented in our Organs, at the U. S. Centennial Exhibition, with others which had long been in progress. The result was more than satisfactory to ourselves; the improvement greater than we had ventured to expect. In our own warerooms in Boston and New York the new Instrument was seen and tested by a number of the best musicians in the county, who pronounced it a material advance upon all that had before been accomplished. In the rooms of the Agent for the sale of our Organs in Hannover, Germany, it was also greatly admired. The Hannover Courier declared it to be "at the very height of development of instruments of the class, evincing 'extraordinary progress.'" After its receipt and trial, Dr. Frans Liszt wrote to the Agent: "The beautiful organ of Mason & Hamlin Organ Company of Boston receives no less praise here than in Hannover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded, and widespread renown of these superb instruments." It was immediately put in use in his orchestra.

We are confirmed in our judgment then, that the tones of this new Organ are the finest that have ever been produced from reeds, not because of mere oddity of effect, but from their true diapason-like quality and fulness, and from their excellent power and pervading and sustaining effect; and that, as a whole, it is, in proportion to its size and extent, much in advance of anything we have before been able to produce.

Circulars with full particulars, also Catalogues illustrating and describing all the styles of the celebrated MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS, which have taken highest honors at all the World's Exhibitions of recent years, are the only American Organs which have ever taken highest award at any such, sent free.

KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRHŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is as favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

OUR MINISTER'S SERMON.

The minister said last night, says he,
"Don't be afraid of givin';
If your life ain't worth nothin' to other folks,
Why, what's the use of livin' ?"
And that's what I say to my wife, says I,
There's Brown, the mis'rable sinner,
He'd sooner a beggar would starve than give
A cent toward buyin' a dinner.

I tell you our minister's prime, he is,
But I couldn't quite determine,
When I heard him a-givin' it right and left,
Just who was hit by his sermon.
Of course there couldn't be no mistake
[illegible] of long-winded prayin',
For [illegible] and Johnson they set and [illegible]
At every word he was sayin'.

And the minister he went on to say,
[illegible] kinds of cheatin',
And [illegible] for every day
[illegible] meetin':
I [illegible] the man that gives
[illegible] at my preachin',
[illegible] the follewin' week

havo. There was a man, in one of our prayer-meetings, who was always telling God in his prayers that he was full of wounds and putrifying sores, etc. He found that in the Scriptures, and thought therefore the Lord would be pleased with it. There was a brother at Poughkeepsie who used to pray, "O Lord, make me so full of Thee that there will be no room for evil!" The devil passes by such a man and says, No room there. Be full. The clouds come and hold the full goblets to the parched lips of the flowers. In my garden I hear the watery footsteps as the clouds come and give to overflowing. So God is every ready to come and pour out blessings on the waiting Christian.

But I must hasten. "Though I walk through the valley and shadow of death," etc. (v. 4). The time will come when we will understand that. Through that valley no mortal can go with us. "Thou art with me." Many a time as I think of that valley, it is not radiant but dark, then I recall this verse, and I say with the Psalmist, "I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." It is Christ's Almighty hand, wounded and bleeding for me, that will lead me.

"Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me" (v. 4). Comforted by the rod! Yes, we find comfort in affliction, blessed be God! The goblet is filled with bitterness, but Christ looks upon it and the bitterness is turned to sweetness. Joy comes out of sorrow. The rod and the staff—crook—are different. With the crook he lifts us out of difficulty and trouble. There is a difference between a shepherd's rod and a theological club. Then, the shepherd's rod had on the end of it a bit of vermillion, by which each sheep was marked. God puts His marks on His sheep. Not only the ninety and nine will be gathered in, but the full hundred. The Church will then have accomplished its full mission.

Now, a few words touching the two concluding verses of the chapter. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies" (v. 5). There is a hidden banquet, we are told, for the soul, where all alone we feast with Christ. You can sit down with your Savior to this silent feast anywhere—even on Broadway, that human, roaring Niagara. God preparest the table. What honor! God is said to be our bed-maker. He maketh our bed in sickness. Here the king comes in royal robes and spreads for us, in presence of all the world, a feast. The great nations across the waters are honoring America in the honors they are bestowing on our great, silent general. Kings and queens do the honors. The King of all the universe bestows infinitely greater honors on us. No earthly royal family ever made such a feast as that to which we were invited. No general or Emperor ever had such service as the humble Christian, for the King of heaven and earth bows the heavens and comes down and spreads his table for him. You pity that beggar in rags. He has no need of pity, he is a Christian; and what unseen multitudes of shining ones are waiting to do him honor, for he is gaining victories over earth and hell!

Then there is the kingly blessing, "Thou anointest my head with oil" (v. 5). David knew what it was to be anointed. He felt now the seal of royalty placed on him from on high. The seal every one of us have to-day. I know not how to go farther. I am dizzy with a glimpse of the dazzling glories that await us. Napoleon contemptuously called an earthly throne a piece of pine with a bit of velvet on it. Oh, how poor is earthly royalty! It will take me all my life to get through pitying the kings of the earth, so infinitely beyond theirs are the honors that await every Christian.

"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life" (v. 6). The place for the wagons loaded with supplies is immediately in the rear of the army. The supply is infinite.

"I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever" (v. 6). Here the great ones of the universe, true kings and princes, will be assembled. What would you say of a prince who, going to his distant palace, should be crying on the cars because of his inferior traveling clothes and fare, and the inconveniences of the journey? We would say, Foolish man, you are traveling now; the palace will be by and by. Oh, to dwell forever in the [illegible] of God! Is there room there [illegible] all? In my Father's house, [illegible] Christ, are many mansions. [illegible] there is room for all in the [illegible] of God, in the city of God.—[illegible] Pulpit.

Washington Letter.

(From our regular correspondent.)

It is quite apparent that while the coming session of Congress will be eventful, and the season gay, money will not be spent so prodigally as in the past. The hotels complain that the race of millionaire statesmen is fading from the land. Senators and members seem unwilling to pay high prices, and the stylish West End boarding houses that have been able to command from $100 to $300 per month for a suite of two rooms, now find it difficult to engage them for half that price. Boarding house and hotel areas have been increased in the last few years, and competition, prevailing ideas of economy, together with the simpler style of living under the present regime, are all having a tendency to make existence at the national capital as cheap as, or perhaps cheaper than it has ever been.

It is the opinion of the President that the extra session will continue until the time for the regular session to begin, and that many members and Senators are of the same opinion is proved by their hiring residences and preparing to keep house.

The message of the President will be confined mostly to matters for which the extra session was called, and the annual reports from the departments will not be submitted to Congress until December. The Secretary of State will present correspondence relative to American representation at the Paris Exposition, on which there will probably be prompt action.

There is much speculation afloat over the consequences likely to follow should Senator Morton remain helpless, and Senator Spencer unfriendly to the administration. The latter is spending his honeymoon in the Black Hills and is believed, by some, less anxious to be in the Senate Chamber during the present session, than to be returned as Senator from the future State of Wyoming. At any rate it is known he will not be in Washington until December. Gov. Kellogg has returned to New Orleans, saying he will make no effort to secure a seat in the Senate until Senator Morton is able to advocate his claims. In spite of newspaper reports of his improving health, there is a very general impression that the great Senator will not again enter the Senate Chamber; and "there will be none left in Ithica to bend his bow." Senator Sharon who is looking after his silver mines in Nevada, will not take his seat before December, and it is not improbable that President Hayes will find himself confronted with a Democratic Congress; but, how a Democratic Congress can antagonize his administration, without arraying itself in opposition to its own avowed policy is a question difficult to answer.

There is every indication of an exciting and interesting session, a large number of journalists have arrived prepared to represent their various papers, and there is the wonted bustle and animation among the quid nunes on newspaper row where the doors have been closed for weeks. C.

Carlyle on Job.

I call the Book of Job, apart from all theories about it, one of the grandest things ever written with a pen. One feels, indeed, as if it were not Hebrew—such a noble universality, different from noble patriotism, or sectarianism, reigns in it. A noble book! All men's book! It is our first, oldest statement of the never-ending problem, man's destiny, and God's ways with him here on this earth. And all in such free, flowing outlines; grand in its simplicity, and its epic melody, and repose of reconcilement. There is the seeing eye, the mildly understanding heart. So true every way; true eyesight, and vision for all things, material things no less than spiritual; the horse—"hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?"—he laughs at the shaking of the spear! Such living likenesses were never since drawn. Sublime sorrow, sublime reconciliation; oldest choral melody as of the heart of mankind; so soft and great; as the summer midnight, as the world with its seas and stars! There is nothing written, I think, in the Bible or out of it, of equal literary merit.

We have more than one burial picture in the Bible. The rich man was buried, of course, with a very expensive funeral, and Lazarus, doubtless, to the tune of "Rattle his bones

Over the stones,
He's only a pauper whom nobody owns."

Hell finished the programme in the first case, and Heaven took charge of the latter.—Witness.

If Adam had not sinned, the Son of God had not died; consequently that amazing instance of the love of God to man never had existed which has in all ages excited the highest joy, and love, and gratitude from his children.—Wesley

Nevertheless.

"Nevertheless," said Christ, "hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." This, then, is the string from which we must draw forth music, "Nevertheless," which being interpreted by being pulled in pieces, signifies that truth is never-the-less sure because of opposition. "Nevertheless," not one atom the less is the truth certain to prevail, for all that you may say or do against it. Jesus will surely sit at the right hand of power, and come in due season upon the clouds of heaven. Let us dwell for a little time upon this important fact, that truth is none the less certain because of the opposition of men and devils.

He gives himself that lowly, humble title of Son of man, as best indicating himself in his condition at that time. "Hereafter ye shall see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven." The humiliation of Christ did not in the least endanger his after glory. His sufferings, his shame, his death, did not render it any the less certain that he would climb to his throne. Nor did the cavilings of his opposers keep him for one instant from his place of honor. I wish you to remember this, for there is a great principle in it. There are many poor weak-minded people who cannot take sides with a persecuted truth, nor accept anything but the most popular and fashionable form of religion. They dare not be with truth when men spit in its face, and buffet it, and pour contempt upon it, but it will be victorious none the less, although cowards desert it and false hearted men oppose it. If it stand alone at the bar of the world, a culprit to be condemned—if it receive nothing but a universal hiss of human execration—yet, if it be the truth, it may be condemned, but it will be justified; it may be buried, but it will rise; it may be rejected; but it will be glorified, even as it has happened to the Christ of God. Who would be ashamed of truth at any time when he knows the preciousness of it? Who will tremble because of present opposition when he foresees what will yet come of it? What a sublime spectacle—the man of sorrows standing before his cruel judges in all manner of weakness and poverty and contempt, at the same time heir of all things, and appointed, nevertheless, to sit at the right hand of power and to come in the clouds of heaven.—Spurgeon.

An Incident of Chas. Sumner's Early Life.

The Secretary of War had laid upon his desk this morning a letter which is of peculiar interest. It has just been discovered by one of the clerks in looking over some of the older files of the department. It was a letter from Maj. Sumner, father of the late Senator Sumner, to the Secretary of War, asking that his son, Charles Sumner, then a lad fifteen, might be appointed military cadet at West Point. The letter recites that he is a good boy, without bad habits, well grounded in the common branches of English, with a fair knowledge of French, knowing something of Latin and Greek, and prepared to enter Harvard College; that his parents destined him for a classical course of study, but that the lad's preferences seemed to be for military life. Mr. Sumner said that he could not claim the appointment for any deserving of his own from the country, but his father, the lad's grand father, Maj. Sumner, had done good service in the Revolution. Mr. Sumner added that he referred by permission to his member of Congress, Mr. Daniel Webster, and ventured to say that Mr. Webster knew him well enough to know that he would not recommend anybody to office without he had merit, be he his own son or no son. The letter is written in a clear, round hand.—Washington Dispatch.

In an artible on the union of the different evangelical churches, Dr. Summers wants each one to remain distinct, with a separate autonomy. Let there be inter-communication, exchange of pulpits, co-operation in general interests, prayer for each other, non-interference with each other's operations, and the cessation of angy controversies. "We," adds the Doctor, "know nothing better than this, but if anything better can be devised to promote the unity of the church we shall be glad to see it."

The oldest church edifice in the Christian world is said to be at Orleansville, in the diocese of Algiers. The old church of Oppidum Tinglitei was erected A. D. 323, soon after the conversion of Constantine, as has been recently ascertained from an inscription on the pavement of the church. The mosaic pavement, the vaults to a height of about six feet, a part of the altar, and the bishop's seat still remain.

An Extraordinary Sentence by a Judge.

The following extract is taken from a sentence recently pronounced by Judge Reading, of Chicago, upon the liquor dealers who had violated the law by selling it to minors. It will pay a careful perusal:

"By the law you may sell it to men and women, if they will buy. You have given your bond and paid your license to sell to them, and no one has a right to molest you in your legal business. No matter what the consequences may be, no matter what poverty and destitution are produced by your selling according to law, you have paid your money for this privilege, and you are licensed to pursue your calling. No matter what families are distracted and rendered miserable; no matter what wives are treated with violence; what children starve or mourn over the degradation of a parent—your business is legalized and no one may interfere with you for it. No matter what mother may agonize over the loss of a son, or sister blush at the shame of a brother, you have a right to disregard them all, and pursue your legal calling—you are licensed. You may fit up your lawful place of business in the most enticing and captivating form; you may furnish it with the most costly and elegant equipments for your own lawful trade; you may fill it with the allurements of amusement; you may use all arts to allure visitors; you may skillfully arrange and expose to view your choicest wines and captivating beverages; you may induce thirst by all contrivances to produce a raging appetite for drink, and then you may supply that appetite to the full, because it is lawful; you have paid for it—you have a license. You may allow boys and children to frequent your saloon; they may witness the apparent satisfaction with which their seniors quaff the sparkling glass; you may be schooling and training them for the period of twenty-one, when they, too, can participate—for all this is lawful. You may hold the cup to their lips; but you must not let them drink—that would be unlawful. For, while you have all these privileges for the money you pay, this poor privilege of selling to children is denied you. Here parents have the right to say, 'Leave my son to me until the law gives you a right to destroy him. Do not anticipate that terrible moment when I can assert for him no further rights of protection. That will be soon enough for me, for his sister, for his mother, for his friends, for the community, to see him take the road to death. Give him to us in his childhood at least. Let us have a few hours of his youth, in which we can enjoy his innocence, to repay us in some small degree for the care and love we have lavished upon him.

"This is something which you, who now stand prisoners at the bar, have not paid for; this is not embraced in your license. For this offence the court sentences you to ten days' imprisonment in the county jail, and that you pay a fine of seventy-five dollars and costs, and that you stand committed until the fine and costs of this prosecution are paid."

We have not before heard from any source such an arraignment of the license law as this.

The Uses of the Lemon.

As a writer in the London Lancet remarks, few people know the value of Lemon juice. A piece of lemon bound upon a corn will cure it in a few days; it should be renewed night and morning. A free use of lemon juice and sugar will always relieve a cough. Most people feel poorly in the spring, but if they would eat a lemon before breakfast every day for a week—with or without sugar, as they like—they would find it better than any medicine. Lemon juice used according to this recipe will sometimes cure consumption: Put a dozen lemons into cold water and slowly bring to a boil; boil slowly until the lemons are soft, then squeeze until all the juice is extracted; add sugar to your taste and drink. In this way use one dozen lemons a day. If they cause pain, or loosen the bowels too much, lessen the quantity and use only five or six a day until you are better, and then begin again with a dozen a day. After using five or six dozen the patient will begin to gain flesh and enjoy food. Hold on to the lemons, and still use them freely for several weeks more. Another use for lemons is for a refreshing drink in summer, or in sickness at any time. Prepare as directed above and add water and sugar. But in order to have this keep well, after boiling the lemons, squeeze and strain carefully; then to every half pint of juice add one pound of loaf or crushed sugar, boil and stir a few minutes more until the sugar is dissolved, skim carefully and bottle. You will get more juice from the lemons by boiling them, and the preparation keeps better.

The Hunted Fox.

Many stories have been told to illustrate the extraordinary sagacity, or what is commonly, but I think unfairly, called the cunning of the fox. The singular shifts and devices resorted to by that clever animal to fling the hounds in pursuit of him off the scent, or to escape their fury, have often excited my admiration, and I confess that in reading the details of a fox chase my sympathy always goes with the pursued, not with the pursuers. There is one anecdote of a fox saving his life by a bold and happy stroke, which I know to be perfectly authentic, and have much pleasure in now putting on record. One day, during the hunting season, a lady was sitting in the dining room of an old mansion-house in the southwest of Scotland, when she suddenly heard the sound of hounds and horn, and perceived that the chase was passing not far from her door. In a few minutes she was startled by the crash of a broken pane in a section of the bow window near which she was sitting. Looking round she saw that the damage had not been done by any stone or ball that had struck the glass but by the hunted fox, which had thus made a desperate dash for his safety. Reynard was in the room, perfectly worn out with fatigue, and seemed piteously to implore protection. The lady of the mansion would not have been a woman had she not sheltered the poor animal who had flung himself upon her mercy. She instantly opened a wall-press in the room, and, as she pointed to the bottom of it, the fox entered and allowed himself to be securely shut in. The shutter was closed upon the broken pane, and a few hounds that appeared in front of the house, after running suspiciously about for a little, were called off to join the pack. The lady from her window had the satisfaction of seeing the huntsmen at some distance digging away for half an hour at a covered drain in which they suspected the fox had taken refuge, and through which he had probably passed. After their fruitless search "the field" went off disappointed, having had a capital run, but lost their fox. Meanwhile "the villain" as some of the spectators called him, lay safe in his quarters. He was allowed to remain in the house all night, and in the morning he was offered by his kind protector a good breakfast of porridge and milk, of which he heartily partook. The worthy Scotch lady, in telling the story, used to conclude by saying that when the fox had finished his breakfast, "he waggit his tail and gaed his ways."—Leisure Hour.

The Human Garden.

Look at your flower-garden, lying yonder before your windows. You know what care you must give if you would have it prosper; how you must train the tender vines, and water the young plants, and weed and loosen the soil. Left to itself, great weeds would soon choke the flowers; and though you find it hard to have as many roses as you want, it would be difficult to be rid of the crop of nettles that would spring up if you forget the beds a week.

So it is with the human garden. The bad things grow faster than the good, and without help, too; while you must not only help the earthly blossoms—the human herbs of virtue—but fight for them against the human weeds.

It is romantic and pretty to say that good always triumphs, and that the right is always victorious, but it is not true; and those who have power should always remember this.

One of the noblest tasks a great man can take upon himself is, to weed the human garden and give the good, the pure, and the honest plants a chance to bear flowers and fruit, of which those stinging nettles, evil men, are always striving to rob them.—N. Y. Ledger.

Evidence continues to multiply that the cane crop has been practically uninjured by the storm of last month. As the Times predicted, the cane has righted itself and now, except the inconvenience of having to cut crooked cane, the planters will find themselves as well off as if there had been only a gentle hesperian zephyr instead of that awful gale three weeks ago. Indeed there are advantages resulting from the very violence of the hurricane. The prostration of the cane and the whipping off of the flag have exposed to the action of the atmosphere a large quantity of the smaller growth which, otherwise, would not have ripened. Already there begins to spread over the surface of the stalks that black glucose formation produced by the agency of oxygen and which is a sure indication of an unusual percentage of saccharine. It is very probable that a good many expensive overseers and managers of large pretensions will utilize the storm to account for their shortcomings, but we venture to say there are not a dozen planters in the State who conscientiously believe they have lost three per cent. of sugar.—Times.

The Chattanooga (Ga.) Commercial says: "A company has been formed and the stock subscribed to build an inclined railway from the base to the summit of Lookout Mountain. The motive power is to be a large engine located somewhere near the Point, which will propel the cars by means of a strong steel wire rope, one car ascending while the other descends. The cars will be fitted with automatic brakes which will stop them instantly in case of accident. The work is controlled by energetic men who will commence at once and propose to have cars running within 90 days.

The famine in India is daily becoming more and more horrible. The editor of The Madras Times writes (August 1st) as follows:

"The population in Southern India more or less afflicted by famine numbers 24,000,000. In the most favorable circumstances, at least one sixth of the people will die. The famine is immeasurably greater than was that in Bengal. In Madras no camp of 3,000 rises morning after morning without leaving thirty corpses. In the interior the distress is most fearful. One gentleman passing down a valley in the Wynaad district counted twenty-nine dead bodies on the road. A coffee-planter, seeking shelter from the rain in a hut, found six decomposing bodies in it. On any day and every day mothers may be seen in the streets of Madras offering their children for sale, while the foundling portion of the poor-house is full of infants found by the police on the roads, deserted by their parents. Since the famine commenced 500,000 people have died of want and distress. The first big tragedy may be expected in Mysore. Information has reached me from Bangalore of two cases of cannibalism already."

Southwestern.

39 Natchez St., New Orleans, La.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1877.

TWO MONTHS FREE.

Now is the time for all our preachers to begin the canvass for subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN for 1878. We make this liberal proposition: for two dollars CASH we will send the SOUTHWESTERN from November 1, 1877, to January 1, 1879, we paying the postage. This gives the paper two months free.

Will all our pastors please read this to their congregations, and begin the canvass at once? Who will send us the first cash list for 1878? Address Nelson & Phillips, Lock Box B, New Orleans.

Bishop Haven was so far recovered from his sickness as to preside at the Ohio Conference.

Mr. H. W. Douglas has resumed his old position at the head of the publishing department of the New York Advocate.

Mississippi Outlaws.

Southwestern Mississippi, especially Osyka and vicinity, seems to be over run by outlaws and there seems to be no power to punish them. The following letter from Mr. W. E. Harrell, Mayor of Osyka, tells its own story: Governor Stone has been appealed to, to allow the citizens to organize a company of militia for self protection, but refused to give permission. In answer to appeals for help months ago he said wait until after the election. He still persists in refusing help, and the law abiding citizens are afraid, that their property will be destroyed if they organize, except, under the protection of the State. Can it be possible that these bull-dozing outlaws are the political confederates of Governor Stone, and he fears to touch them? This letter we clip from the Summit (Miss.) Times.

The N. O. Times of the 14th, publishes the same letter, and administers a deserved rebuke to Governor Stone. Governor Stone and the entire State officials patronage is in the hands of the Democracy.

OSYKA, PIKE CO., MISS., October 8, 1877.

Editor Summit Times:

Having seen in the Clarion of the 3d of October a series of resolutions purporting to be from the citizens of Osyka, in mass meeting assembled on the 27th of September last, declaring the publications in the Summit Times and the New Orleans Times, so far as they relate to Osyka, to be untrue, I feel called upon as an officer of the law to give to the public all the facts regarding the outrages committed here, and in so doing I believe that I have the approval of a majority of the citizens, although, I am sorry to say, they are so completely bull-dozed (with a few exceptions) that they will not assemble and publicly endorse my actions.

In the so-called mass meeting of the citizens of this town (in which I am credibly informed not more than twelve or fifteen persons took part), they admitted the killing of one and whipping of a few other negroes in June last!

This, of itself, is sufficient to prove the report of lawlessness; but, as it is only a partia admission of the outrages committed in this town, I will proceed to detail the facts, of which the few "Citizens in Mass Meeting Assembled," seem to be ignorant, and in so doing will commence at the beginning:

1. On the night of the 24th of June last, a number of negroes of this town appeared on the streets with arms, and several of them stated afterwards they were induced or persuaded to come out by Samuel E. Roberts, the same person now under indictment for the murder of Frank Posey, who told them the Bulldozers or Regulators were coming into town that night, to regulate them, and that they ought to get their guns, come out and defend themselves, and that if they would, he would go with them. Some of the negroes were seen by W. D. Davidson and myself, and we told them to go home, or they would bring on trouble and if they did not they would be arrested! * * *

2. On the night of the 30th June, or the morning of the 1st of July, a number of armed and masked men went to the house of Frank Posey, shot and killed Frank Posey, whipped two other negroes, Henry Macke and Louis Mulvy, and fired into the house of Add Coleman, and made the night hideous with their yells and oaths!

3. On the night of the 28th July, so I was informed by Mr. I. W. Cutrer, two negro men were taken from his premises by a body of armed men and whipped. One of these negroes came to me and said that the men were armed and masked who whipped him. These men sent by this negro to me, a note of a very threatening character against J. W. Terry and myself.

4. On the night of the 23d of August, a body of armed and masked men appeared in town; they fired into my office, the post-office, and the business houses of W. D. Davidson and J. W. Terry, and left a note of menace against W. D. Davidson. W. D. Davidson states that he received a message that he had made himself obnoxious, and must leave, or his life would be taken. Enclosed with this you will find the sworn statement of Louis Mulvy, made before me on the 25th of September, which needs no explanation.

After Louis Mulvy made the above statement, he fled to Tangipahoa, from where he writes he was driven by men from this place [illegible] were Samuel E. [illegible], Wash Cutrer, Hughey [illegible], Keating and others, [illegible] who attempted to [illegible] firing three shots at [illegible]. You will also find [illegible] of threat against [illegible] J. W. Terry and [illegible].

[illegible] attention to his extensive [illegible] the unlawful [illegible] inability to [illegible] also stated [illegible] were [illegible] the [illegible] who, I [illegible] in the presence of witnesses, to the governor that he could not guarrantee protection of the law to any one, as the county site had been entered at night by a body of armed men, for the purpose of taking the jail keys from him and liberating the prisoners, and that in consequence he had been sleeping out in the woods nine nights.

W. C. HARRELL.

Our Subscription Book Department.

The Methodist Book Concern, Nelson & Phillips, Agents, opened a Subscription Book Department, at the headquarters of the Concern in New York, in August, 1875. Mr. H. W. Knight, a gentleman of experience in the business, was placed in charge. Since then, a little over two years, about seventy-five thousand volumes have been sold. The list embraces "The Pictorial Family Bible," which is a magnificent volume, containing 1,200 illustrations and a splendid array of helps to the study of the Bible.

Another book is "The Lord's Land," by Rev. Dr. Ridgaway. Over $5,000 were spent in illustrating it.

"The Great Men of God" is a beautiful volume, in which the best thoughts on the grand old characters of the Bible are portrayed by such authors as Dean Stanley, Bishop Oxenden, Rev. Dr. Guthrie and others.

Another attractive book of this department is "The History of the United States," by Professor John Clark Ridpath, of the Asbury University. The book reflects great credit upon the gifted author

"The Child's Bible" is another superb volume, to place in the hands of children. Its clear, large type and beautiful illustratrations make it exceedingly attractive.

The last book thus far brought out by this department is "Moody: His Words, Work and Workers," written by Rev. W. H. Daniels, the man of all writers most familiar with Mr. Moody's style, he having been present at Mr. Moody's meetings in Liverpool, London, Edinburgh, Dublin, New York, Chicago and Boston. The great popularity of this book is attested by the very large sale of 25,000 copies in five months after publication. An intelligent agent canvassing for this book, and who had sold the work of another publisher, states that "it gives as much history of Mr. Moody on the first sixty or one hundred pages as can be found in the entire volume of the other work," and that "the Bible portraits and outlines of Mr. Moody's theology are alone worth the price of the book."

Mr. Knight says he expects to round off the year 1877 with a sale of at least 100,000 books for this department since its organization.

Our publishers have arranged for employment of canvassing agents and shipping all the above books from New Orleans. Already several agents are at work and doing very well, especially in selling the Bible and the work on Moody. Large commissions are given. Send for circulars giving full particulars. Address Nelson & Phillips, Lock Box B, New Orleans.

Tennessee Conference.

SECOND AND THIRD DAYS.

The Conference met at 8½ this morning. Bishop Harris was present, and explained the cause of his absence at the opening of the session yesterday. The half hour of religious exercises having passed, the subject of the division was taken up. At the last session of the Conference the colored members of the conference who were then unanimously opposed to division and are still opposed to it, agreed that if the white brethren requested separation at the present session of the conference, their request should be granted. This question has been agitated in the conference for several years, and as it was probable, would be, by the white brethren till the separation should take place; the colored brethren and the few white members of the conference who opposed separation, thought it best, for the peace of all concerned to permit the division to take place according to the following report. The vote of the white members of the conference was taken, as is mentioned in the report, and resulted in 19 in favor and 4 against division.

Whereas, The majority of the white brethren, members of the Tennessee Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, have from time to time expressed themselves as desirous of forming a new conference, stating among their reasons for such action, their belief that the meeting of the colored brethren with them in annual conference relation, interfered with their success among the whites, in the bounds of their work, and

Whereas, The General Conference at its last session in Baltimore, made provisions for the formation of such new conferences, when a majority of both white and colored members of the conference agree thereto, and

Whereas, A majority of the white members of this conference, present and voting, have asked that such new conference be formed, therefore

Resolved 1. That the Bishop presiding at the present session of this conference is hereby requested to form the brethren expressing this desire, including the McMinnville and Memphis Districts, into a new annual conference to be called the Central Tennessee Conference of the M. E. Church; said organization to take place at the close of the present session of the Tennessee Conference.

Resolved 2. That any member of this conference shall have the privilege of remaining in the Tennessee Conference, or of joining the one to be organized according to the above resolution.

Resolved 3. That nothing in this action shall prevent any change in the bounds of this conference, by a vote of its membership and quarterly conference, choosing to which annual conference it shall belong.

The report was adopted almost without debate. The action of the white brethren surprised no one here. The convictions of those who opposed separation remain the same, but they yield to what seems to be the necessities in the case, to secure peace. They are not convinced that the white work has suffered by the meeting of the colored and white in this conference. The statistics show a healthful increase some years and a decline in others, but the conference has met together for the past twelve years, with a considerable increase in membership, church property, and benevolent collections. It may be that the growth of the white work will now be rapid, and the Central Tennessee will be a vast power in the State, to which all who love one common Saviour will say, Amen. The conference went on with the regular minute business. The Districts were called and the Presiding Elders made their reports. C. Pickett, P. E., read an interesting report of the Murfreesboro District, on which he closes his fourth year, with this session of the conference.

The third day of the conference finds the work well advanced. The Educational Anniversary was held last night. Bros. Braden, C. S. Smith, T. Carter, B. F. Tillan and Prof. G. Ridpart, of the Tullahoma College, made addresses. The following brethren, all white, have been located at their own request: T. B. McCrary, H. B. Crowell, W. G. Haynes, L. P. Cousey, J. A. Lansing, and Henry Stevens. The right kind of men for the work are scarce. Poor people, poor pay and hard work are not attractions which draw many of the young among the ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ.

SHELBYVILLE, TENN., Oct. 5, '77.

D. W. H.

FOURTH DAY.

A. G. Park conducted the devotional exercises at the opening of Conference. James L. Lewis was transferred to this Conference, from the West Wisconsin Conference.

After the report of the examining committee and representations by the Presiding Elders, Wm. Shimmin, J. B. Bradford, H. Robinson, R. S. Sampson, P. Gregg, C. Bollington, H. Moody, Wm. Dwegans, and L. M. Moore, were continued on trial.

A. L. Walker, John M. Todd, G. W. Marsh not being prepared on their studies were continued on trial in the first year. J. C. Cox, B. Towne, and Geo. Blair were discontinued.

Rev. S. Savage, D.D., agent of the American Bible Society, was introduced and addressed the Conference on the aim of the Society, to supply the destitute, with the Word of God. He gave some specific directions as to how this should be done. The committee appointed yesterday in the case of W. J. McAnually reported that he be permitted to withdraw from the M. E. Church under charges. The committee in the case of P. A. Pearson reported, recommending his location, which was adopted.

The Conference passed a resolution adopting the advice of the General Conference, on the use of Tobacco by the ministry, and refused to admit one of the class recommended by the committee of examination and by the Presiding Elder, who was not ready to make a sacrifice of his "quid" and renounce the habit of its use. The following were admitted into full connection. H. Bowers, J. W. Wells, George Havel, M. C. Young J. W. McNeal, T. Woods.

John Seay, J., S. Finley, J. L. Park, J. W. Hart, A. Phillips, were continued in the supernumery relation.

L. Richardson, A. Hayes, and Jos. Smith were continued as superannated.

S. H. Sticklin, C. W. S. Woods, B. B. Manson were made effective.

J. H. Derryberry and R. J. Cook were located at their own request.

J. F. Turner, H. A. Granthum, Francis Deal and John Pickett were admitted on trial.

The committee to audit the Presiding Elders accounts reported them correct. The committee on education reported favorably on the Central Tennessee College, Tullahoma College, Dixon Academy, West Tennessee Preparatory School and the East Tennessee Wesleyan University. The treasurer of the Conference Missionary Society reported last night. The amount of collections for the year, from the McMinnville District	$136,32.

Murfreesboro	320 15.
Memphis	69 45.
West Tennessee	57 05.
Total	$582 97.
Last Year	$516 22.
Increase	$66 75.

The Baptist, Cumberland Presbyterian and M. E. Church, South, pulpits will be supplied to-morrow by the Conference.

The Conference Temperance Society will hold a meeting to-night in Reid Chapel and the Freedman's Society Anniversary will be held in Scott Chapel. "B."

Shellyville, Tenn. Oct. 6, '77.

The following comments and appointments we copy from the Daily American:

Hitherto the Conference has been what is termed a mixed Conference, having about three-fifths of its members white and the rest colored. The Tennessee Conference is now nearly all colored, having only four white members, while the Central Tennessee Conference is entirely white. The division of the Conference has been a matter of discussion for several years. The colored members, and quite a respectable minority of the whites opposed division and continued to do so, but finally yielded to the request of the white members, against their own convictions of what they believed best for the entire church. The white brethren distinctly asserted that they felt impelled to their course, not by anything between themselves and the colored brethren, but from influence outside of the Conference and the church. The following are the appointments of the Lord & Taylor.

This business firm of New York announces to the ladies of New Orleans, in another column, that they are prepared to fill orders by mail or express. Read their announcement and be assured that there is no more reliable firm in the country.

Holston Conference.

This conference met at Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 27, Bishop Harris presiding. Upon the calling of the roll fifty-four members were found to be present. J. J. Manker was elected secretary. A paper from the North Carolina conference was presented, asking for a change of boundaries between the North Carolina and Holston conferences. James A. Amies, M. R. M. Burke, A. F. Creswell, F. M. Hinds, D. S. Hodsden, J. D. Robeson, T. B. Rossell and C. S. Long were admitted into full connection and elected to deacon's orders.

The Knoxville Chronicle, which gave a very full report of the conference, says: "More than one hundred ministers have been in attendance. Bishop Harris has presided, and the universal verdict has been that he is a most excellent presiding officer. He is firm, prompt, decided, but kind and forbearing. We have looked in upon the body frequently, and most say that we have seldom seen business transacted in a more dignified and orderly manner than has been done by this conference. This speaks well for their intelligence as men and as ministers.' Rev. E. Q. Fuller preached an able sermon on Sunday morning, at the conclusion of which fifteen deacons were ordained by the bishop. Dr. N. G. Taylor preached in the afternoon. In the evening Bishop Harris addressed a large audience on the subject of missions in foreign lands.

The following are the benevolent collections: Missionary, $863.51; Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, $2.45; Freedmen's Aid Society, $26.50; Tract cause, $23.10; Episcopal, $93.07; Sunday-School Union, $62.38—total $1,070;56.

Dr. Fowler of the New York Advocate pays the following tribute to the late Dr. Duncan, of the Southern Methodist Church:

"In this man has fallen a gentleman of polished manners, a scholar of extended attainments, a thinker of unusual deliberation and clearness, an orator of almost faultless finish, a friend of genial fidelity, a Christian of scriptural charity, and a man of supreme manliness. As we mingle our tears with the tears of those who knew him better, over this, another common grave, may our hearts be wedded into everlasting brotherhood.

The Iowa Methodist Conference at its recent session resolved to entreat all ministers and members who use tobacco to desist for conscience' sake; and to vote for the admission of no one to the conference who uses tobacco, without a pledge that he will abandon it.

The Rev. J. C. Fletcher, of Indianapolis, in a letter to the Journal telling of a visit to Terre Haute, writes: "As I was on my way to church, in company with one of the oldest citizens of Terre Haute, I noticed a carriage driving in the direction of the country, and my companion remarked: 'That carriage contains the Hon. Mr. Scott and wife. Mr. Scott is the ex-member of Congress from this district. They are going to a little country Methodist church in the vicinity of Secretary Thompson's farm. It is there that Col. Thompson is in the habit, when at home, of each Sunday expounding the Scriptures to his farmer neighbors. He is now spending his vacation with us, and every Sabbath he preaches the Gospel. In this he is ably encouraged by his wife, who is one of the salt of the earth.' I listened with delight and admiration to these statements of my informant, and was made thankful that in the Cabinet of the first nation of America—that the Secretary of the Navy of the second maritime power of our globe—is 'not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ.'"

Boys and Girls, now is the time to be thinking of what you are to read next year. Do all of you know what a charming magazine Golden Hours is? We feel more than safe in commending it to you. We approve of it thoroughly, and advise every one of you to send the publishers Fifteen cents for the November number, that you may know and like it, and be ready to subscribe for 1878.

Send to Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. James Ellis, Hazlehurst, Miss., says: "Our campmeeting was a very pleasant and profitable one. There were twelve conversions and five accessions. Our church and Sunday-school are doing well."

Rev. John Gaston, Vicksburg, Miss., says: "We have just closed a meeting in which there were twelve conversions, and fourteen persons united themselves with the church. We have two hundred dollars raised toward building a new house of worship."

Rev. Addison Moore, La Harpe Street Church of this city, reports fifteen conversions during the past quarter and twelve accessions to the church. The Sunday-school numbers sixty members and is very prosperous. P. Barrow is Supt., and Mrs. Houston, assistant.

Rev. C. Frierson, Greenwood, Miss., writes: "We have been blessed with a gracious revival in which there were forty-one conversions and fifty-three persons united with the church. I pray God that the heavenly manna may continue to fall upon our community. We have just completed a new church that will seat five hundred people."

Rev. D. W. Maddox, Shuqualak, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a five weeks meeting in which there was manifested a gracious outpouring of the Spirit. During the time one hundred and twenty-five persons united themselves with the church. Bro. W. D. Sims, of Meridian circuit, assisted us in the services."

Rev. Taylor Moore, Texarkana, Texas, says: "When we came to this work the prospects were not encouraging. There was no house of worship and no church organization. But the blessings of God have been with us. We now have a church building 30x45 feet, on which there is but twenty dollars indebtedness, and this we expect soon to pay off; and we also have a parsonage. Our congregations are large, and we have had nineteen recent accessions to our church."

The City.

Bishop Keener of the M. E. Church, South, has returned from an extended Episcopal tour and will be at home for a month.

Gen. W. L. McMillen has been appointed Pension Agent, vice Isabelle whose bond was defeated. Gen. McMillen will honor the position.

Mr. Charles Heath arrived in the city last Saturday, and yesterday went up the Ouachita to spend some time on the plantation owned by him and his brother.

Mr. D. B. Wood of the firm of D. B. Wood & Co., whose marriage occurred in Pittsburgh a short time since, has returned to the city for the winter.

Postmaster Parker is again at his post, after several months absence in the North. Col. Parker is pronounced by General Key the best Postmaster in the South.

There is considerable dissatisfaction among ex-union soldiers and sailors over the appointments lately made in the Custom House. A petition signed by several hundred is on its way to Washington setting fourth their grievances.

The teachers of the city schools were elected last Saturday night, but have not yet (Tuesday) been assigned to their positions, except in the High, or as they are called, Academic Department. The latter schools opened Monday of this week, and the others are to open Thursday.

We have received a circular showing that the late change in the Public School text books will cost the parents $48,000. A pretty large sum for an "impoverished" people to pay. If the change had been made by the Republican Board there would probably have been some pretty severe criticisms.

Mrs. F. R. Hardon, 27 & 29 Chartres street, has received a large and first class stock of millinery and fancy goods. Wednesday, October seventeenth, occurs her fall and winter opening. It will be a gala day among the ladies. Mrs. Hardon has a great variety of French bonnets and hats.

The N. O. Presbytery met last week. The churches are reported prosperous. The Presbytery uttered a timely word against Sabbath desecration. It said: In the past our State has had an unenviable precedence in the violation of the command, "In it thou shalt not do any work, thou nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man servant, nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger that is within thy gates;" and it is difficult to refrain from drawing a parallel between ourselves with so many broad acres untilled for years and Israel of old, whose land God made to lie fallow, that the "Lord might have her Sabbaths," would that our people would recall and heed the words of Isaiah. (Isa. 58: 13, 14.)

Rev. Drs. F. C. Holliday and J. H. Bayliss, of Indianapolis, as a deputation from the Indiana Conference visited United States Senator Morton, and presented him a series of resolutions passed by the Conference. The resolutions expressed high appreciation of Mr. Morton's public services, and say that the calamity which has overtaken him is one before which the clamor of parties should be hushed by the voice of patriotic prayer. The interview was affecting and the the Senator said that nothing in his personal history had given him more pleasure or greater gratification than to receive their resolutions.

We clip the following from the Central Christian Advocate: "The Missouri Conference of the African M. E. Church met last month in [illegible], Mo., Bishop Slaughter presiding. The reports were of a favorable character, and the session hopeful and harmonious. During the session the Rev. J. M. Hughes, fraternal delegate of the St. Louis Conference, M. E. Church, was received very cordially, and addressed the Conference. The Rev. Dr. H. M. Turner of Philadelphia, Book Agent of the Church, responded on the part of the Conference. It was agreed that a delegate should be sent to the next session of the St. Louis Conference."

The death of Mrs. Dr. Miner Raymond in Evanston, Ills., Sept. 18, at the age of sixty-three, removed from the church militant a [illegible] Christian character. She was a true wife, mother, friend [illegible]. The bereaved husband has the sympathy of the entire Church.

...day him, and the Pharisees, who dragged him the other, to save him from being destroyed. In the heat of their sudden adoption of him, the latter did not realize how far they endorsed the whole scheme of Christianity by vouching for the credibility of the revelation that he had received! Neither did it occur to them that it was for narrating these same facts that they had shouted against him, only the day before, that he was not fit to live! But when swayed by passions, human nature never is, or tries to be consistent.

A Divine Visitor (10, 11).—"After storm cometh rest." No matter how long nor how hard is the day of trial, night comes with its quiet and its peace. That, for the Christian, is the time to turn unto God for strength and for comfort. From the fact that God visited him, can we doubt that, by his hard pallet that night, Paul sought consolation and encouragement at the hands of his Redeemer? From the same fact it is evident that Paul was greatly downcast. All moral heroisms have their reactions, and leave their actors weak and craving for sympathy. And, that night, Paul specially must have needed solace. Apparently he made no progress. He knew that his triumph was only transient. He saw no way out of his environment. No doubt that he had grave fears as to whether he had acted wisely. The more conscientious Christians are, the more they are liable to be troubled with such fears. But such tender anxieties for the honor of the Master are to be welcomed, for they are sure to bring the Master himself that he may soothe them away. At other times, as to Paul on the sea, he may send an angel to be his minister, but, after such a trial, he will himself be the comforter.

Looking into the character of his encouragement to discover the nature of his despondency, we find that the reassuring words, "Be of good cheer, Paul; for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou also bear witness at Rome," indicate that he had been despairing of ever seeing Rome and there testifying for the Lord. He was the apostle to the Gentiles, and his most cherished desire evidently had been to preach Christ in the chief Gentile city. How uplifting that assurance was!

This is a lesson for us who teach, as well as for those whom we teach. The one who stood by the imprisoned apostle is our comforter, also. And he is not one whose tender ministrations are to be had only upon extreme occasion, but his own affectionate assurance is: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." He is ever a present help in trouble.

The Northern Advocate of last week contains a lengthy editorial article upon Mrs. Van Cott, which concludes as follows: "She is a pattern to none but herself. Woman preachers may far better imitate the men than imitate Mrs. Van Cott. They will appear less masculine if they do the former than if they do the latter; but they should do neither. Mrs. Van Cott is masculine without any imitation of masculinity. Her manner is the free natural use of her powers. The same freedom and naturalness with ordinary women will leave them all their womanliness. Where the Spirit of God is, there is liberty—liberty for even marvelous men and marvelous women. But not many of us are marvelous, and we must use our liberty within the limits of ordinary endowments."

M. ADAMS P. E.

The Season of Intermittents.

All miasmatic complaints, in other words, all disorders generated by unwholesome exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In every section subject to the visitation of fever and ague, or other intermittent diseases, the causes which produce these maladies are now actively at work. This, therefore, is a period of the year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet the unwholesome conditions of the atmosphere by a course of tonic and alterative treatment. Foremost among the invigorants, recommended by time and experience as a means of fortifying the system against all endemic and epedemic maladies, stands Hostetter's Stomach bitters. By a timely use of the bitters, the feeblest resident of an unhealthy soil may escape the sickness which, without the aid of this potent ally of nature, will be apt to overtake the strongest.

Every man to be successful in any branch of manufacturing, must turn out good goods. There is no permanent success without it, consequently success is a strong recommendation for quality. When we find parties like Mr. Daniel F. Beatty, of Washington, New Jersey, the manufacturer and proprietor of the Beatty Piano and Beatty's Organs, making sweeping sales each month and each month increasing, there is no other conclusion to be reached than that the instruments are superior. Every patron of Mr. Beatty speaks in the same strain, pronouncing them the best. See his advertisement in this paper,

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

FREE. Any person who will make and forward me a list of the names of reliable persons of their acquaintance who wish to procure an instrument, either Piano or Organ. I will use my best endeavor to sell them one, and for every Piano I succeed in selling to their list within one year, I will credit them with $10, and for every Organ $5, to be applied on payment of either a Piano or organ; and when it amounts to a sum sufficient to pay for any instrument selected at the lowest price, I will immediately ship the instrument, free, or after any amount is credited the balance may be paid me in cash and I will ship them the instrument. They need not be known in the matter, and will be doing their friends a real service, as I shall make special offers to them, selling a superior instrument for from one-half to two-thirds what is ordinarily asked by agents. Please send me a list at once, and after you have made inquiry you can add to it. Address, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey. oct18-1t.

PROPOSALS FOR CUSTOMHOUSE CARTAGE.

CUSTOMHOUSE, NEW ORLEANS, LA., Collector's Office, September 19, 1877.

In accordance with the provisions of section 25 of the act of Congress, approved June 22, 1874, which reads as follows: "That public cartage of merchandise in "the custody of the Government shall be "let after not less than thirty days' notice "of such letting to the lowest responsible "bidder giving sufficient security, and "shall be subject to regulations approved "by the Secretary of the Treasury"; and the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned will receive sealed written proposals, addressed to him at this office, until 12 o'clock m. of SATURDAY, October 20, 1847, for doing the public cartage of dutiable merchandise at this port for a period of one year from date of contract.

Public cartage should be understood to include all goods in bond, whether passing from the vessel or other conveyance in which imported to the warehouse, or from one vessel or conveyance to another, or from the warehouse on permits for exportation, all unclaimed goods, and all goods ordered to the Appraiser's store for examination. Merchants, however, will be allowed to cart their own merchandise to bonded warehouses in their own bonded drays, should they desire to do so.

No proposal to charge more than twelve cents per package, large and small as they run, will be entertained.

The bidders, in making proposals, must accompany the same by evidence in writing of their responsibility and that they can give undoubted security in the sum of fifteen (15) thousand dollars for the faithful performance of the work and to indemnify the Government against any loss.

JOHN E. KING,
Sept. 27-4t. Collector of Customs.

BEATTY PIANO.
GRAND, SQUARE AND UPRIGHT, AND BEATTY'S CELEBRATED GOLDEN TONGUE PARLOR ORGANS.

A word in their favor, read;

From the (Elgin, Ill.,) Reformer:

"We have in our own house one of the pianos advertised by Daniel F. Beatty in another column, and do not hesitate to recommend it from our knowledge of its quality. Mr. Beaty has dealt very honorably by us."

Dr. E. Sedgwick, of Bonapart, Iowa, says:

"Organ came to hand all safe; and after one hour's trial I send you the cash. It more than meets my expectations. The tone is exceedingly fine and melodious, and the case is stylish and beautifully finished."

From J. L. Everitt, Esq., Cashier National Bank, Broadway, N. Y.:

"Organ No. 600 received. As I am fully satisfied with the instrument, I remit without further delay. I have not thought it necessary to call in experts to test it. All my family are delighted."

Every instrument fully warranted for six years as strictly first-class in every respect, and as a guarantee of good faith they are shipped on from 5 to 15 days' test trial, money refunded and freight charges paid both ways by me if they are in any form misrepresented or prove unsatisfactory.—Nothing fairer than this can be offered. AGENTS WANTED, but where I have none large discounts made to introduce in new localities. Send for Illustrated Advertiser, (Catalogue Edition), with testimonials from distinguished persons, some of whom you may know, before buying elsewhere. Address, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey. oct18-2t.

The Pianos and Organs manufactured by Daniel F. Beatty, of Washington, New Jersey, are more earnestly and generally commended by the Press, and music loving public than BEATTY'S instruments manufactured in this country or Europe. The Pianos have the greatest possible depth, richness, and volume of tone, combined with a rare brilliancy, clearness and perfect evenness throughout the entire scale, and above all, a surprising duration which never changes under the most delicate or powerful touch. The celebrated "Golden Tongue" Reeds in Beatty's celebrated Organ in conjunction with the perfected Reed Boards produce sweet, pure, and powerful tones. Every instrument Piano and Organ, fully warranted perfect in every respect, and will be shipped on from five to fifteen days' test trial, the manufacturer paying freight both ways, if the instrument is not satisfactory. Illustrated Advertiser, (Catalogue Edition,) sent free on application. Address DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

FATHER AT PLAY.

Such fun as we had one rainy day,
When father was home and helped us play!

And made a ship, and hoisted sail,
And crossed the sea in a fearful gale—

But we hadn't sailed into London Town,
When captain and crew and vessel went down,

Down, down in a jolly wreck,
With the captain rolling under the deck.

But he broke out again with a lion's roar,
And we on two legs, he on four.

Ran out of the parlor, and up the stair,
And frightened mamma and the baby there.

So mamma said she'd be p'liceman now,
And tried to 'rest us. She didn't know how!

Then the lion laughed, and forgot to roar,
Till we chased him out of the nursery door;

And then he turned to a pony gay,
And carried us all on his back away,

Whippity, lickity, kickity, ho!
If we hadn't fun, then I don't know!

Till we tumbled off and he cantered on,
Never stopping to see if his load was gone.

And I couldn't tell any more than be
Which was Charlie and which was me

Or which was Towser, for all in a mix
You'd think three people had turned to six.

Till Towser's tail had caught in a door;
He wouldn't hurrah with us any more.

And mamma came out the rumpus to quiet,
And told us a story to break up the riot.

Who Was Casabianca?

THESE Organs excel in ALL IMPORTANT CHARACTERISTICS. Comparing them with instruments of the kind from the best makers, as placed in competition at the UNITED STATES CENTENIAL EXHIBITION AT PHILADELPHIA, 1876, the very able jury, after the most thorough examination and comparison, UNANIMOUSLY assigned to the Mason & Hamlin Organs "THE FIRST RANK IN THE SEVERAL REQUISITES OF THE CLASS, viz: smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action." GEO. F. BRISTOW, Esq., one of the examining jurors, writes: "I believe that every member of the Jury heartily concurred in assigning to those of your make, and your's only, the first rank in all important qualities of such instruments."

This emphatic judgment is entirely in accord with that reached at ALL THE WORLD'S EXHIBITIONS OF RECENT YEARS. In competition with the best makers of the world, they were awarded first medals or highest honors at the great Expositions in PARIS, 1867; VIENNA, 1873; SANTIAGO, 1875; and PHILADELPHIA, 1876; being the only American Organs which ever won any medal in any European World's Exhibition.

The judgment of the most skilful musicians respecting these Organs is scarcely less uniform and emphatic. THEO. THOMAS, the distinguished former and conductor of THOMAS' ORCHESTRA, pronounced them "the best instruments of the class made, either in this country or Europe;" adding that a wide acquaintance with musicians enables him to say that "they generally regard the Mason & Hamlin Organs as unequalled by any others." OLE BULL, whose judgment, especially of qualities of tone, is perhaps as highly cultivated and discriminating as that of any man living, says; "They excel all instruments of the class I have ever seen;" adding that their fine quality of tone is in contrast with that of other Reed Organs." JOHANN STRAUSS, the famous Vienna composer and conductor, wrote, when in this country: "I know of no similar instruments, anywhere, at all comparable to them." Dr. FRANZ LISZT, than whom no living musician is more highly esteemed, and for whose especial use Mason & Hamlin had recently the honor to make one of their Organs, wrote to the Agent in Hannover, Germany, after its receipt and trial, as follows: "Budapest, 28th February, 1877. The beautiful Organ of the Mason & Hamlin Organ Co. in Boston, receives no less praise here than in Hanover. It fully justifies the remarkable, well-founded and widespread renown of these superb instruments." CHARLES GOUNOD, the composer of FAUST, and perhaps the most popular of living composers for the Organ, selected a Mason & Hamlin Organ for use in his Concerts in London, and the most distinguished musicians of the principal cities, and the artists of the opera, when they have occasion for an instrument of the class, either in sacred and secular concerts, or for private use, always select a Mason & Hamlin Organ when it is attainable. Mr. IRA D. SANKEY, appreciating their superiority, has used them in all the Moody and Sankey meetings in England and America. The New York Christian at Work, May 31 1877, says: "A clerical friend at our elbow, who has preached in hundreds of country churches, and addressed hundreds of Sunday Schools, says that he can almost always tell when a Church or Sunday School has a Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organ. He has often been annoyed beyond endurance by the sufferings produced by broken-winded and otherwise infirm instruments, but he has yet to see the first Mason & Hamlin Organ, large or small which failed to give satisfaction."

It would be easy to heap up testimony like this from the four quarters of the globe: from the most distinguished musicians and those who have had best opportunity of observing such instruments, of all countries; who recognize, and do not hesitate to declare, the superiority of the Mason & Hamlin Organs to all others.

AS TO PRICES.—But while it is conceded by all who have knowledge in such matters (except such as are trying to sell other Organs—and even by some of these) that the Mason & Hamlin Organs are unequalled; the very standard of excellence among instruments of the class, it is by many supposed that the price must be correspondingly high. This is an error. The unequaled facilities of the Mason & Hamlin Co., accumulated in the largest factory in the world, and perfected by experience in the manufacture of nearly ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND ORGANS, and the great demand for their Organs, enable them to produce and sell their work at prices which would be impossible without such facilities and occasion to manufacture so largely. It is not claimed that the Mason & Hamlin Organs can be offered at the prices of the very poorest Organs, made at a fraction of the cost of good work, merely to sell; but the difference in price is very small, and the difference in value very great. Mason & Hamlin Organs, with two sets of reeds and three stops, are now sold for cash, for $100 each; with nine stops at $114. They are also offered for easy payments on most favorable terms. A small Organ, but of the best quality, may be had by payment of $7.20 per quarter (three months) for ten quarters. Large sizes at proportionate rates. All Organs made by this Company are of the same very best quality.

Observe that dealers often recommend and try to sell inferior Organs, because they get larger commissions and discounts on them. Insist on having a Mason & Hamlin, and it will certainly be the best.

THE VARIETY OF STYLES now offered is larger and finer than ever before, including Organs from $55 to $1,000 and upwards each. But the greatest number of styles are from $150 to $25[illegible] each. The new styles, ready this season pronounced the finest ever offered. They are adapted to all uses, public and private; to all climates and positions; being in cases from very plain to very elegant.

AN ILLUSTRATED QUARTO CATALOGUE, with accurate illustrations from photographs, of the appearance of all styles, with descriptions and explanations of steps, and full particulars, with Price List will be sent free to any one desiring it. Address:

DANIEL F. BEATTY'S
Pianos and Organs.

From E. Parson, Brookville, Kansas.
"The piano came safely yesterday, we find it all that fancy painted or you promised. The instrument is handsome and its tone is pure and full. I see no reason why, with ordinary care, it may not last a lifetime. Those who, like me, cannot afford to pay five hundred or a thousand dollars for a name, will, I am sure, thank you for saving them the exorbitant profits of dealers in general, and making it possible for any industrious man or woman to be the possessor of a first-class organ or piano."

From R. Gilbert, Doud's Station, Iowa.
"Organ is received, The accomplished organist who gets it says she would not exchange it for any organ she ever saw or heard from any other factory, whatever the price. In mechanical skill, simplicity of construction, and purity of tone, I have never known its equal. It is emphatically the best organ for the least money
I have sold many other makes of organs, some of which I thought could not be equaled, but, like 'King Saul,' your organs are 'head and shoulders' above theirs in the leading elements that constitute a complete organ."
AGENTS WANTED, but where I have none, large discounts made to have them introduced in new localities. Send for Illustrated ADVERTISER (Catalogue Edition,) containing testimonials from persons, some of whom you may know, sent free. Address, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey. oct11-2t

This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

The Golden Stairway.

Against the shining battlements
[illegible] by heavenly hands,
Beneath the watchful eye of love
The golden stairway stands.

And ever as the day and night
On Time's swift currents flow,
To [illegible] from that world of light
The angels come and go.

While [illegible] songs the air resounds:
"Lay down your worldly cares;
Come, mount with us the shining rounds,
And climb the golden stairs.

"The way is long, the path is steep,
Yet [illegible] above;
The dear Lord, Master of us all,
Looks down with eyes of love.

"If but one trembling step should slip,
If but one tear should fall—
The [illegible] from any lip—
He sees and treasures all.

"[illegible] in nobler air
[illegible] in faith and love,
Who [illegible] in prayer, the unseen fair,
To equal paths above.

"For only on these golden rounds
Can any win the crown,
From Him who watches every step—
Who [illegible] the stairway down."

Christ the Revealer.

OUTLINES OF A SERMON BY REV. SAMUEL COLCORD, N. Y.

I am the light of the world.—John viii: 12

For four thousand years the world wanted a light. It once had this [illegible] when in Eden God walked [illegible] conversed with man; but that [illegible] rejected by man, had departed, and the world was in darkness. [illegible] and sudden flashes [illegible] were seen, as when [illegible] servant Abraham; [illegible] forth the [illegible] amid fire and [illegible] He appeared to Elijah [illegible] quiet of a still small [illegible] glow of that [illegible], and man was [illegible]. The pro[illegible] far down into the [illegible] above the [illegible] rays of a com[illegible] called to the [illegible] for thy light [illegible] the world looked [illegible] of right[illegible] and a [illegible] of [illegible] only [illegible] of the [illegible] who have looked for [illegible] physical [illegible] derived [illegible] the [illegible] for [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and plow [illegible] of light[illegible] half [illegible]

[illegible] el away, the atmosphere of the soul grows deadly, and all spiritual life dies. But we can view that Sun to-day in only one of His aspects, and take only a very meagre, introductory view of that. We will consider Him as the Revealer. "I am the light of the world." Light is a revealer. "Whatsoever doth make manifest is light."

1. We know God as He is revealed in Christ. His thirty-three years of life and his death were a revelation of the Father. The Father's attributes are illustrated in the life of Christ. He reveals the Father's love. He Himself was love incarnate. What a revelation of the Father was that scene upon Calvary!

He reveals the Father's purposes of mercy. His life was the pleading voice of God persuading men to repentance. It was the mercy of God that brought Him from heaven's throne down to this sin-laden, sorrowing earth. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself." The world did not know that it had a Father until Jesus taught it to say, "Our Father which art in heaven."

2. Christ reveals all spiritual truth. Without the light of the spiritual Sun men are spiritually blind, and cannot see spiritual things. Suppose you had been blind from your birth, and knew this fair world only by the senses of hearing, taste, touch and smell, and the descriptions of friends; but suddenly, by some magic power, you receive your sight and strength of vision to bear the light. What a revelation to you of this earth! What a changed world! How different from what you supposed it to be! A man groping in spiritual blindness cries, like Bartimeus, "Jesus have mercy on me. Lord, that I may receive my sight," and suddenly there comes to him the Light of the world. How all things become changed! The perfection of God's plan becomes clear to him. He sees the meritorious works of the Savior as all sufficient. His sins were punished in Christ; they were expiated on Calvary; he was saved then. These things were never real to him until now. The atonement was made before—eighteen hundred years before; his salvation was wrought out by the Savior before; it was finished; the work was done. These all existed as facts, but he had not the light by which to see them. The Light of the world is the revealer of these things. If we see no beauty in them, it is because we are in darkness.

A man goes forth on a dark night. Stretched before him lies a beautiful landscape. But he sees no beauty. All is covered up in darkness. Night hangs like a veil over all that beauty. But the night is passing on into morning, and after awhile he sees indistinctly objects near him and, over against the eastern sky, the dim outlines of trees and mountains appear. Soon other objects are seen; outlines give place to details, the trees are hung with foliage and blossoms, verdure covers the valleys, and here and there the mountain side. Plants, tinted leaves and flowers beautify the scene; groups of clouds and flying birds relieve it. Last of all the sun appears above the eastern horizon. It was his coming that had revealed all that beauty. Mountains, valleys, rivers, rocks, trees, flowers, clouds—all were there before, but light, the revealer, was not there.

So it is when a man comes out from the darkness of sin into the glorious light and liberty of the Sons of God. All the great truths of Christ's salvation existed before, but they were hidden from his view beneath the night of unbelief. Jesus had died—the just for the unjust; the atonement was made; the price had been paid; his redemption was accomplished; these all existed as facts, but Christ, the Light of the world, had not come to him. When that light comes, when Christ illuminates the soul, these great truths become real to him. He sees that Jesus died for him, the debt is paid for him, pardon and salvation are given to him. He knows Christ now, not as the divine man of to-day, the commingled humanity and divinity; but as surety for him, present with him, guiding him, cheering him, helping him, keeping him. Christ has become real to him; His love the controlling passion of his soul; His spirit, the guiding principle of his life. The Light of the world, the divine Revealer has made the way clear, and now he walks no more in darkness, for he has the Light of life.

[illegible] seek this Light, for in the [illegible] darkness He is the soul's [illegible] need.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Your Next Preacher.

BY REV. G. W. FARMER.

[illegible] of this life [illegible] pastor. [illegible] a preacher. That much is settled. He will be a man of God. Not an angel or a seraph of God, but a man. As such he will have human affections, passions and temperament. He will be to a great extent the creature of circumstances. It takes a rare combination of genius and energy to make circumstances or to rise superior to them. Ordinary men, such as your new preacher will probably be, are moulded in large measure by their surroundings. You will make—nay, will be his surroundings; and for at least half of his success or failure, as the case may be, you will deserve praise or blame.

He will come among you a tried man, having passed through the severest tests, rigidly continued for a term of years. As far as human care and caution can do it, he will be certified to you as a man worthy of all the honors due to his sacred office. So you need not take him on probation. He has been tried already and not found wanting. You may safely recognize and "receive" him at sight. Probably he will come as a stranger, and you may secure the plaudit, "I was a stranger and ye took me in." Welcome him. Take time to do it. I have seen five hundred persons leave their homes and business for two hours to welcome a circus. Can you not do as much to welcome God's minister? Meet him at the station with a goodly company of glad faces and warm hearts. Open to him at once your hearts and your houses. Relieve him of suspense and anxiety concerning the nature of his reception. Do not say with lugubrious face that you are accustomed to receive whomsoever the Bishop sends; but be heartily glad he has come, and say so. Be glad, look glad and act glad, and he will catch the gladness from you.

He may have a wife. A good many preachers have wives. No well regulated preacher should be without one. In fact, nothing earthly short of a good wife can keep a preacher properly regulated. This woman will depend upon the women of her husband's new charge for society and all the comforts society brings. Hitherto she has moved amongst folks as good as you. She comes in self-denial among strangers, as the faithful wife of a faithful man. While he ministers to you she is ministering to him; and only the judgment can reveal which is the greater work. Give her at once the place among you to which her relation and sacrifices entitle her. Dismiss formality and seek a cordial intimacy. Your pains will not be wasted. Every smile, every word of cheer, every tender, womanly act will return to you with compound interest in the rich ministrations of her husband. You will make her husband happier and he will make you happiest of all.

It is possible he will have children. The itinerant buries his prattlers one by one and leaves their dust behind. But lest he should have over much sorrow the "All-Father" does not take them all. They are not likely to be the best children in the world—nor the worst. They see too many phases of religious profession, and are forced into too many different associations to admit of the former supposition, while indubitable facts contradict the latter. They will however average well with anybody's children. They lighten the pastor's home and warm his heart. They eat from the same loaf in more senses than one. Make that loaf large in every sense. This brings us to another point.

He will have wants. He is not likely to have a private fortune. Not many rich are called to his ministry, and but few of the called answer. They prefer to pay for a substitute. Your preacher is far more apt to come to you with debts than dollars. Give him the dollars and let him pay his debts. Supply his immediate wants at once. Why not? Do you expect him to supply yours? You pay the grocer, the butcher, the market-man and the milk-man cash or by the week. Is not the gospel more than meat and salvation more than butter? Pay your preacher by the week. It will be light on you and light on him.

Pray for your preacher. Do this twice each day and you will see your prayer answered. You will answer some of them yourself. Give him your counsel. In the multitude of counselors there is safety. But don't expect him to follow all the counsel you give. Advice is like milk—only the cream makes butter. Your suggestions may not be taken, yet it may start a new line of thought and be the seed of a rich harvest. Another thing. Don't estimate the value of your advice by the length of your purse. God's ways are equal. He may have given you money and somebody else brains.

But my sheet is out. Meet your preacher, welcome him; make him glad; help his wife, and smile on his little ones. Pray for him fervently and frequently, give him Godly counsel, place yourself under his orders for God's work, and soon the Master will pour you out an overflowing blessing.—Central Advocate.

A Little Class-Leading.

The following questions, says the Chronicle and Sentinel, were read in St. Paul's Church, Augusta, Ga., by the late rector, the Rev. W. H. Clarke.

Who would your life be practically different if there were no God?

What amount of careful, intelligent study have you ever given to the Bible?

Is God's revelation of himself and his dealings with men a subject of as much interest to you as questions of science or literature?

Do you ever trifle with and almost boast of doubts on the nature or revelation of God, as if infidelity were a mark of high intelligence, instead of a subject of intense pity?

Do you refer events to secondary causes, instead of owning God's hand in them?

Can you be said to really to believe in God when the presence of a human being is a greater restraint upon your action than the fact of His all-seeing eye?

Do you ever let sins pass without any effort to check them, thinking it will be easy to repent afterward?

Have you ever taken half the pains to do things pleasing to God, that you have to gain the affections of a human being?

Do you get real pleasure from your prayers, reading, and meditating on holy things? or do you get through them to satisfy the demand of your conscience, and are secretly glad when they are over?

Have you ever felt God's service such a restraint that you wished you could get rid of it altogether?

How many minutes out of the twenty-four hours do you give in any way to God, either in offering him praise, asking for his help, or trying to learn his will?

Is there any practical connection between your prayers and your life?

Have you as great a realization of God's presence in public worship as that certain persons whom you know are there?

Are you as careful to be reverent in God's house as you are to observe little matters of etiquette in society, whispering in service-time, talking loud immediately after it is over, and making greater provisions for your own ease of body than you would think of doing in another person's dressing-room?

Is your standard of Christian duty higher than when you first began to serve God?

When some period of suffering or danger in your life is over, are you as hearty in thanksgiving as you were in prayer for it to be removed?

Which do you think you bear most frequently in mind, your trials, which perhaps are very small, or your mercies, which are undoubtedly very great?

Do you trust God half as truly as you do a beloved wife, husband, parent, or friend?

Do you dishonor God's fatherly care by indulging in fears, anticipations of coming evil, and dark imaginings about the future?

Do you come up even to the old standard of giving a tenth part of your income to God's service?

Can you recollect six times in your life that you ever denied yourself to the extent of real inconvenience from love to God?

What have you ever done solely with the thought of God's glory?

If you can give up the world for yourself, do you still covet it for your children?

In the education of your children, is the first thought, what will train them to serve God? or to take a brilliant position in society?

If you are offering to God any outward service in his Church, or to his poor, will your motives bear sifting?

What have you ever done for the souls of others?

Would you not make greater efforts to save the body of any one whom you might see in peril of fire, or drowning, than you have ever made to save souls from the destroying power of sin?

Is it pleasanter for you to dwell upon people's faults rather than on their virtues? or their failures, than on their success?

Do you speak of the faults of others unnecessarily?

Do you give hard judgment on sins to which you have never been tempted, while you are full of excuses for your own?

How do you bear contradiction or ridicule?

Are you angry when you are proved in the wrong?

Do you mimic the peculiarities or infirmities of people?

Do you often determine to have your own way at any cost, without considering the pleasure or convenience of others?

Do you make yourself unnecessarily the subject of conversation, and introduce stories which tend to your own credit?

Do you dwell upon your ailments or troubles to the weariness of others?

Do you make use of the omission or oversight of another to gain some advantages for yourself?

Do you give unnecessary trouble to those who wait on you, or try their temper and patience by your whims and fancies?

Do you secretly wish that failure or disappointment may happen to some one who has injured or offended you?

Do you color and add to events you describe for your own ends or amusement, or to be thought clever or witty?

Do you read books which appeal to the passions, or put sin in an attractive light?

Are you discontented with your position, means, or the circumstances which surround you?

Do you long after something withheld from you, or rebel against loss, misfortune, or bereavement?

How Mr. Moody was Softened.

"I used to think, said Mr. Moody, that God was behind the sinner with a double-edged sword ready to hew him down. But I went to England in 1867, and in Dublin, one Sunday night, I went to hear a boy preacher. I didn't know who he was, but he said he would like to come to America, and I looked at him, and I didn't think he could preach. However, he told me to write to him and let him know if I wanted him, and I didn't want him and didn't write. But he came over here and reminded me of the night I met him in Dublin. I wrote him a rather cold letter, but I got another in return, saying that he probably would be in Chicago soon, and if I wanted him to preach he would preach. Well, I didn't know what to do with him. I was going out of town, just then, so I said to the officers of the church, 'I wish you would let this man preach.' They didn't much want to, but I said, 'let him preach Thursday and Friday nights any way.' And so he came and preached. When I got back home the first thing I said to my wife, was, 'How did that Irishman get along?' And my wife said, 'why, they like him very well; but he preaches very different from you. He preaches that God loves men.' Well, I said, 'he must be wrong.' Thats what we all say when any one differs from us. 'Well,' said my wife, 'I think you'll like him, because he proves everything by scripture.' Well, I went to hear him Sunday; and he preached from the 16th verse of the third chapter of John: 'For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' And I noticed a smile all over the audience. He had preached two sermons already from that text and they wanted to hear another. And he went through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation, to prove that God loved man. And I noticed a great many people brought their Bibles and referred to the passages he quoted. Monday night there was a great crowd there to hear him, and he said: 'My friends, if you will turn to the 16th verse of the 3rd chapter of John you will find my text.' Well, there was a great smile all over the audience. I thought that was about the best sermon I had ever heard. It was better than the first one, and it melted my heart. My heart went out toward the people as it never went out before, and I asked God to forgive me for not having loved them better. The next night the crowd was still larger, and again he said; 'My friends, if you will turn to the 16th verse of the third chapter of John, you will find my text." He preached a wonderful sermon, and touched a higher chord that night. The next night we went again, and thought he surely couldn't preach again from those words, but he said: 'My friends, I want to speak to you tonight on the 16th verse of the 3rd chapter of John." And, surely enough, he preached a sixth sermon from that text, and touched a higher chord than before. Well, the next day he got up and said: 'My friends, I've been hunting all day long for a new text, but I can't find one, so you will please turn to the 16th verse of the third chapter of John. [Laughter.] I remember well one thing he said: 'For a week I have been trying to tell you how much God loves you, but my poor, stammering tongue is not able to do it. If I could get Jacob's ladder, and go up to Heaven, and ask Gabriel if God loved man, all Gabriel could say would be: 'God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life.' And, my friends, I have been preaching this Gospel ever since.

A clergyman, a widower, with seven grown-up daughters, left home a few days ago for a neighboring city, and wrote back that he had some news which would surprise them—he had just married a widow with six children. The seven grown-up daughters had an awful time until he returned—alone. One of them mustered up courage to ask: "Where is our mother?" "In Heaven, I hope." But I mean the widow with six children that you married." "Oh! I married her to another man."

Aztec Ruins.

The ancient ruins which are scattered all over this country are some of the strangest unwritten pages of history. Our fertile valleys have been densely inhabited and highly cultivated by an enlightened race of people centuries ago, while the ruins of the houses, corrals, towns, fortifications, ditches, pottery-ware, drawings, non-interpretable writings, etc., go to show there were many arts cultivated in those days which are now entirely lost to the human race. Their houses have been built of almost every kind of rock, from small boulders to the finest sand-stone. Some of the finest of these ruins, and the most perfect, are located fifteen miles up the Animas river, or about thirty-five miles below Animas City, in a large valley fifteen miles long by seven wide, on the west side of the river. This valley has been covered with buildings of every size, the two largest being 300x600 feet, and about three hundred feet apart.—They are built of small sandstone laid in adobe mud, the outside walls being 4 feet and the inside walls from 1 1-2 to 3 feet. In the lower story port holes a foot square have been built for defense. There are rooms and halls for about four stories high still standing. About the second story, on the west side, there has been a balcony along the entire length of the building. No signs of a door are visible in the outer walls, and the ingress must have been from the top. On the inside there are passages from room to room. Most of the rooms are small, from 8x10 to 12x14 feet, the doors being 2x4 feet. The arches over the doors and port holes are 1 inch wide, placed across, on which the masonry is placed. The sleepers supporting the floors are of cedar, about 8 inches through and from 20 to 50 feet long, and about 3 feet apart. A layer of small round poles is then placed across the sleepers, then a layer of thinly split cedar sticks, then about three inches of dirt, then a carpet of some kind of coarse grass which forms the floors. The rooms that have been protected from exposure are white-washed, and ornamented by drawings and writings. In one of these rooms the impression of a hand dipped in white-wash, on a joist, is as plain as if it had been done only a few days ago. In another room there are drawings of tarantulas, centipedes, horses and men. One room in the eastern portion is quite a curiosity, it being perfectly round, and must have been used for a hall. It is about twenty feet across. In some of these rooms have been found human bones, bones of sheep, corn-cobs, goods, raw-hides, and all colors and varieties of pottery ware. These two buildings are exactly the same in every respect. Portions of the building plainly show that it has been destroyed by fire, the timber being burnt off and the roofs caving in, leaving the lower rooms entirely protected. The rock these buildings have been made of must have been brought a long way as nothing to compare with it can be found within twenty miles. All the timber used is cedar, and has been brought at least twenty-five miles. Old ditches and roads are to be seen in every direction.

In conversation with the Navajoes in regard to these ruins, they say their forefathers came their five old men's ages ago (500 years) and these ruins were here, and the same then as now, and that they have no record of it whatever.—Colorado Springs Gazette.

Morality and Religion.

"When Ulsses sailed past the isle of the Sirens, who had the power of charming by their songs all who listened to them, he heard the sorcerous music on the shore, and to prevent himself and his crew from landing, he filled their ears with wax, and bound himself to the mast with knotted thongs. Thus, according to the subtle Grecian story, he passed safely the fatal strand. But when Orpheus, in search of the Golden Fleece, went by this island, he—being, as you remember, a great musician—set up better music than that of the Sirens, enchanted his crew with a melody superior to the alluring song of the sea-nymphs, and so, without needing to fill the Argonaut's ears with wax, or bind himself to the mast with knotted thongs, he passed the sorcerous shore not only safely, but with disdain.

"The ancients, it is clear from this legend, understood the distinction between morality and religion. He who, sailing past the island of temptation, has enlightened selfishness enough not to land, although he rather wants to; he who, therefore binds himself to the mast with knotted thongs, and fills the ears of his crew with wax; he who does this without hearing a better music, is the man of mere morality. Heaven forbid that I should underrate the value of this form of cold prudence, for wax is not useless in giddy ears, and Aristotle says youth is a perpetual intoxication. Face to face with Sirens, thongs are good, though songs are better.

"'Sin hath long ears. Good is wax;
Wise at times the knotted thongs;
But the shrewd no watch relax,
Yet they use, like Orpheus, songs.
They no more the Sirens fear;
They a better music hear.'

"When a man of tempestuous, untrained spirit must swirl over amber and azure and purple seas, past the the isle of the Sirens, and knots himself to the mast of outwardly right conduct by the thongs of safe resolutions, although as yet duty is not his delight, he is near to virtue. He who spake as never mortal spake saw such a young man once, and, looking on him, loved him, and yet said, as the nature of things says also, 'One thing thou lackest.' Evidently he to whom duty is not a delight does not possess the supreme prerequisite of peace. In the presence of the Siren shore we can never be at rest while we rather wish to land, although we resolve not to do so. Only he who has heard a better music than that of the Sirens, and who is affectionately glad to prefer the higher to the lower good, is, or in the nature of things can be, at peace. Morality is Ulysses bound to the mast. Religion is Orpheus listening to a better melody, and passing with disdain the sorcerous shore.

"Aristotle was asked once what the decisive proof is that a man has acquired a good habit. His answer was, 'The fact that the practice of the habit involves no self-denial of predominant force among the faculties.' Assuredly that is keen, but Aristotle is rightly called the surgeon. Until we do love virtue so that the practice of it involves no self-denial of that sort, it is scientifically incontrovertible that we can not be at peace. In the very nature of things, while Ulysses wants to land, wax and thongs can not give him rest. In the very nature of things, only a better music, only a more ravishing melody, can preserve Orpheus in peace. This truth may be stern and unwelcome, but the Greek mythology and the Greek philosophy which thus unite to affirm it are as luminous as the noon."—Joseph Cook

Suspension of a Chinese Priest for Heresy.

The Chinese are very imitative. The Chinamen in California, having seen something of the Christian method of dealing with heresy, concluded to try the virtue of that method on a pagan. The Rev. Swang Bung, in the course of a polemical discussion with a neighboring China person, characterized the latter's Joss (or deity) as a horse-thief. Of course, this was Celestial blasphemy, and measures were at once taken to discipline the pig-tailed theologian. Proof of his heterodox utterance was taken, and he was challenged to produce from the Budhist literature of the last three million years a single authentic record of a horse-thieving Joss. All he could produce was a dim tradition that in pre-historic ages Joss had helped faithful Chinamen to steal horses from "outside barbarians." This failed to meet the case, and amid a fusilade of fire-crackers and bombs the council suspended Swang Bung from the ministry. As the Celestial Moderator observed: "Hi! yi! Chinaman church allee same Melica man church! Swang Bung too muchee chin-chin. Makee Bung hunt him hole."

The Danger of Wine.

I had a widow's son committed to my care. He was heir to a great estate. He went through the different stages of college, and finally left, with a good moral character and bright prospects. But during the course of his education he had heard the sentiment advanced, which I then supposed correct, that the use of wines was not only admissible, but a real auxiliary to the temperance cause. After he had left college for a few years he continued respectful to me. At length he became reserved. One night he rushed unceremoniously into my room, and his appearance told the dreadful secret. He said he came to talk with me. He had been told during his senior year that it was safe to drink wine, and by that idea he had been ruined. I asked him if his mother knew this He said no; he had carefully concealed it from her. I asked him if he was such a slave that he could not abandon the habit. "Talk not to me of slavery," he said; "I am ruined, and before I go to bed I shall quarrel with the bar-keeper of the Tontine for brandy or gin to satiate my burning thirst." In one month this young man was in his grave. It went to my heart. Wine is the cause of ruin to a great proportion of the young men of our country.—Professor Goodrich.

The issues of the British and Foreign and of the American Bible Societies for the last year alone amounted to 4,000,000 of copies of the Bible, in 252 languages and dialects. Two hundred and five of these versions have been prepared during the present century. The two societies mentioned above have circulated in all more than 160,000,000 copies.

The Sabbath Day, a Physical Necessity.

Air, sleep and food are physical necessities, because necessary to sustain physical life. Sleep may be dispensed with a few nights, so may food a few days, but the body surely dies if entirely deprived of either. So a man may break the Sabbath occasionally and recover perhaps from the bad effects—but facts prove that as a rule those who disregard that day habitually, by not ceasing to labor—go to premature graves. The body demands rest that shall be regular and satisfying. This to a great extent is met by the succession of day and night, by which time is given for sleep. But facts go to show that this is not enough. So God has set apart a whole day in each week in which our ordinary work is to cease, and the body is to rest. To those who can at any time command a few hours or a day's rest, the force of this remark is not so apparent, but its full force is felt by the laborer who depends upon his daily toil for bread. He knows the absolute necessity of a day of rest to follow the week of fatigue. On this point the general testimony of physicians is definite, and is "that the men who labor seven days in the week are not as healthy, and do not ordinarily live as long as those who work but six and rest one." Dr. J. R. Farre, of London, studied this question as a physician for forty years and gave his opinion to the British House of Commons. We quote some statements: "As a day of rest I view the Sabbath as a day of compensation for the inadequate restorative power of the body under continued labor and excitement." "The Sabbatical appointment is not (as it has sometimes been erroneously viewed) simply a precept, partaking of the nature of a political institution; but its observance is to be numbered among the natural duties, if the preservation of life be admitted to be a duty and the premature destruction of it a suicidal act." The New Haven Medical Association unanimously affirm that "Men who labor six days in the week will be more healthy and live longer, other things being equal, than those who labor seven, and that they will do more work and do it better." One of our great money-kings says: "I should have been a dead man had it not been for the Sabbath. Obliged to work all week I felt on Saturday, especially Saturday afternoon, that I must have rest. It was like going into a dense fog. Everything looked dark and gloomy as if nothing could be saved. I dismissed all and kept the Sabbath in the good old way. On Monday it was all bright. I could see through and got through. But had it not been for the Sabbath I have no doubt I should have been in my grave." Says an English author: "We never knew a man work seven days in a week who did not kill his body or mind." A celebrated importer said that "he considered the Sabbath as the best day in the week to plan successful voyages." That man became a maniac.

The experiment of Sabbath breaking has proved disastrous from the time the children of Israel went out to "gather sticks upon the Sabbath day" until now, when men seem to delight in trampling upon holy time. It does not pay in dollars and cents. In a certain company 2000 men were employed for years to work seven days in a week. They were paid double wages on Sunday. The result was that the men suffered in both bodies and mind. A change was made and the men rested on Sunday, and did more work than before. The Superintendent declared the change necessary because of the "demoralization of the men under the first system and their exhaustion of bodily strength, which was visible to the most casual observer." Illustrations might be multiplied. Independent of all moral obligations involved the Sabbath is a physical [illegible].

[illegible] body demands rest, that shall [illegible] relaxation from labor. No matter how elastic the bow if it [illegible] constantly sprung its elasticity will be lost. No matter how [illegible] the body, if it have not stated [illegible] rest, it will be hastened [illegible] grave. The word Sabbath [illegible] "cessation from [illegible] inestimable bless[illegible] be to the world [illegible] sense men re[illegible] holy.

The Quarterly, for October.

The Methodist Quarterly for October is a superior number. The following is the table of contents: "The Atonement, in its relations to the Moral Universe; J. H. Dawson, Esq., Norfolk, Va. The Words Elohim and Jehovah in Genesis; Rev. W. Aikman, D. D., Aurora, N. Y. The Rise and Development of the Castes of India; Prof. G. G. Dippold, Boston. The System of the World, Its Origin; Rev. W. B. Slaughter, D. D., Lincoln, Nebraska. The Divine Origin of the Bible; Prof. F. D. Hemenway, Evanston, Ills. Schoeberlein on the Resurrection Body; Prof. Lacroix, Delaware, Ohio.

The editorial department by Dr. Whedon is as usual scholarly, and exceedingly rich in variety and instruction. Dr. Raymond's Systematic Theology receives an extended notice, and the work is highly commended in the main. Dr. Whedon makes a very grave charge against Dr. Raymond in the matter of appropriating quite largely without credit, the terminology, key-thoughts and even special passages from his (Dr. W.'s) work in "The Freedom of the Will." Quotations are made which proves Doctor Whedon's charge to be true. Still we cannot for a moment think that Dr. Raymond would intentionally be guilty of so grave a literary trespass. Dr. Whedon's work on the Will, is a text book in the Garrett Biblical Institute, where Dr. Raymond is an instructor, and the study of this work falls in his department. By a constant use of Dr. Whedon's book we can see how its peculiar terminology and strikingly original definitions would become so familiar as to be used with as much freedom as if they were Dr. Raymond's own. This is no doubt the explanation. Dr. Raymond owes it to Dr. Whedon and himself to make suitable reparation, and no doubt will.

Speaking of the National Repository Dr. Whedon pays a high compliment to its veteran editor, Dr. Curry, and says that he has "now a large confidence of the Church in his integrity and ability." But the following significant remark is added: "Only would she (the Church) have him not dream that he has a high mission to reconstruct her institutions, or to substitute in place of the Church of Wesley and Asbury the pseudo-church of Curry."

Discussing "Formal Fraternity" Dr. Whedon puts the matter of our permanency in the South, strongly and well. He says: "Our General Conference in 1876 made the proposal, specially promising that in no case were we, as condition, to withdraw from our position in the South. The Southern General Conference entertained the proposal, and jointly with us appointed a commission to settle details. That commission performed their work with eminent wisdom. No withdrawal from our position was intimated, nor had our commission any authority to make any such intimation. * * * * If the next Southern General Conference, soon to meet, professes so to have "understood" and insists on such withdrawment, that ends the whole fraternity matter. It will then be they who are responsible for the break. It will be their turn to offer the proposals of fraternity; and we shall wait with all tranquility, even though it be through centuries and eons, for the avatar of that proposal. We shall then have shown to the world that we are irresponsible for a deadly schism in universal Methodism."

We wish the Quarterly could have a more general circulation throughout the church. Price $2 50 a year.

Stanley, the African explorer, is shortly to return home. His letters have awakened a wonderful interest in regard to that continent throughout the civilized world. He has described the interior of the country as of vast, commercial value; a greatly elevated region, abounding in well watered valleys and rich table lands, and having a delightful and healthful climate. He describes it, too, as rich in minerals, especially coal and iron, and has intimated that he has found the precious metals quite abundant. If on his coming he tells of rich gold mines, giving exact details as to location and manner of reaching, who knows but the scenes witnessed in California, and afterward in [illegible] a few years ago, are to be [illegible] in Africa—the rush of [illegible] and the rapid development [illegible]. It may be God's [illegible] opening up that continent [illegible] and Christianity.

The Colored People.

One of the most encouraging facts in relation to the colored people is, that more and more of their own members are making their voices and influence felt in the cause of truth and righteousness. The following from the pen of Hon. P. Landry, a worthy local preacher in the M. E. Church, has the true ring. Mr. Landry says:

"Having entered on a new era in the history of the South, the first question put by many of our friends is: What will the colored man do now? In arriving at a satisfactory answer to this important question we present a few points for the consideration of the race. The first in order is the dignity of labor. The only royal road to true greatness is the republican one, of honest toil; and to attempt it by any other means, is to meet with disappointment, humiliation and defeat. It is no degradation to labor, for the greatest men that ever lived were the greatest workers. No idler ever succeeded in life, and the man who, in this day of enterprise and energy, looks on labor with contempt, or treats it as a thing beneath his dignity is, in our estimate, a fit inmate for a lunatic asylum; and if its gates do not enclose him soon he may, through insanity, commit breaches such as may consign him to another and much more dreadful place and punishment.

The individual who, finding no employment save that of the fop, is too delicate to work, subsists like the lily that "neither toils nor spins," or "talks politics to all he meets," had better start to paradise "on the first boat," for all creation labors and affords no toleration to idleness and sloth. The first round in the ladder to our salvation is labor—honest labor; and he that would reach to eminence and respectability must rise and climb.

The next thing in order will be to save money and to cease from extravagance. One of our greatest evils is extravagance. We are too apt to live beyond our means, to spend wages before they are earned, and to get into debt whenever we can. To remedy this evil, retrenchment should begin at once. We must learn to live within our means, to look out for "a rainy day," to husband our resources and to save money after earning it. Let the colored man save all he can. Let him educate himself and his children—let him do this at all hazards, and let him esteem education as indispensable to his advancement and success, and then we shall be quite prepared to solve the question, "What will the colored man do?" The two great powers that move the world are wealth and intelligence; the former comes by labor, and the latter by education; and we need not go to Africa to get within reach of their influence. No; they are at no such great distance from us. America, with her broad lands offers wealth to any man who will "put his hand to the plow," and her colleges and schools offer as great facilities for education as are to be found any where else on the face of the globe.

Above all, let reformation begin in every colored pulpit in the South. Let the names of the men who occupy the pulpits be synonyms for intelligence, morality and strict integrity; and then to the question, "What will the colored man do now?" We will answer, "He will work out his own salvation," and not, as in a theological sense, with fear and trembling, but being intellectually, morally, religiously and financially equal, he will raise a banner with this inscription: "Black but comely, in morals pure, in resolution deliberate, in principle firm, in judgment sound, in all things independent."

Nashville District Conference.

The following is the Programme of exercises for the Nashville District Conference to be held at Gallatin, Tennesse, commencing Wednesday, November 21st, 1877: Introductory sermon, P. Martin; The future of the Tennessee Conference, C. Pickett; Christian Perfection, J. G. Thompson; A dessertation on the Beatitudes, J. W. Pickett; The Value of our Educated Ministry, J. Branden, D.D.; Joshua a type of Christ, M. C. Young; The excellency of Daniel's character, S. J. Harris; The way to secure a revival, James Pickett; The Power of Prayer, B. Anderson; Regeneration and the necessity therefore, J. P. Gregg; The Pastor's relation to the Sunday-school, H. Bowers; The successful Pastor, T. Chatman; How to study the Scripture, Wm. Bryant; Our Missionary work, Wm. Stevenson; The importance of the Freedmen's Aid Society, Thornton Woods; Our Educational Work, C. S. Smith; Local Preachers and exhorters will chose their own subjects. Each charge has been assessed five dollars for the Episcopal Fund, and it is hoped that each Pastor will be prepared to pay it at the District Conference. It is very important that all the District Stewards be in attendance. Remember the date, November 21st.

Another terrible accident is reported in the Collieries, near Glasgow, Scotland. Over two hundred were killed by a mine explosion.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Jeremiah Smith, Harrisburg, Texas, writes: "At a protracted meeting just closed there have been five conversions and twenty-three accessions to the Church. Our congregations are large and constantly increasing."

Rev. C. Young, Luling, Texas, says: "The Lord is blessing us. At recent meetings there have been eighty-six accessions to the Church. We have raised $130 toward the erection of a new church at Lockhart."

Rev. D. Riley, Handsboro, Miss., says: "Our quarterly services just closed were a time of great refreshing to our people. Nine persons united with the Church, and among them was a man seventy years old."

Rev. James Drayden, Greensboro, Miss., says. "In recent meetings we have had thirty-one additions to the Church in full membership, and ten on probation. We thank the Lord for his blessings."

Mr. Frank Vance, of Houston, Texas, reports that the Sunday-school of our First Church in that city is in good condition. The attendance is large, and a deep interest is manifested among teachers and scholars.

Rev. Alfred Handy, Canton, Miss., writes: "A very encouraging meeting is now in progress in our Church. The services are largely attended, and a deep spiritual interest is manifest among the congregation. Some souls have been converted. Pray for us, that our efforts may be blessed of the Lord."

Rev. J. H. Cook, Quincy, Miss., says: "We have been blessed with a very gracious revival. All ages, from eight to eighty years, have shared in the gracious work and found peace in believing. On last Sabbath we baptized fifty persons, and some yet await the administration of the ordinance."

Rev. I. N. Thomas, Moss Point, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a protracted meeting in which there were twenty-two conversions and thirty-six accessions to the Church. Adults baptized, eighteen; children fifteen. Give thanks unto the Lord for his goodness."

Rev. D. Moore, Brooksville, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a meeting in which there were ten conversions and twenty-five accessions to the Church. Spiritually my circuit is in a prosperous condition. We are building a large, new church, which we hope to complete this fall. Money has been exceedingly scarce, but we hope for better times in the future."

Pleasant Plains Church, New Orleans, held its quarterly love feast Oct. 10. The church was crowded, and a very large number spoke. Revs. Overton, Hunt, Ross, and parts of their congregations were present. The pastor, Rev. S. Priestly, reported the condition of his church as good. Two had been expelled. The church is struggling to pay off its debts, and is succeeding considering the hard times.

Rev Stephen Priestly, of New Orleans, at the request of the Presiding Elder of the South New Orleans District attended the fourth quarterly meeting services of St. James Chapel, St. James Parish, Louisiana. He preached Sunday, 14th inst. at 8 p. m. to a large audience, and after the sermon, administered the Lord's Supper to forty-nine persons. Three persons were baptized. The church has paid $60 on debts, and supported their pastor. The pastor, Rev. Prince King, will close up his year creditably.

Progress Among the Freedmen

Rev. Dr. E. P. Humphrey, of Louisville, Ky., writing to the African Repository for October says:

Let it be borne in mind that the freedmen are now rising apace in the scale of intelligence, self-respect, sound morality, and the religious sentiment and life. Nothing of the kind is more remarkable than their progress in these directions. It has exceeded the hopes of their most sanguine friends. A visit to their schools, to their churches, and to the ecclesiastical meetings of the colored preachers, would surprise those even who entertain the largest expectations respecting their enlightenment and elevation.

Dr. and Mrs. Godman are having success in their efforts to raise money in Philadelphia for the Orphans House. $500 have been forwarded as the first installment, resulting from faithful and prayerful labor.

General Religious Items.

The Bible production of our time is equal to five every minute of working time. At this rate the press is producing a Bible or a New Testament every twelve seconds.

The Government of China has issued a proclamation which not only favors religious toleration, but mentions with special favor the work of Christian missions, and enjoins upon the provincial government to favor their work.

The New York Advocate announces that Rev. William Taylor, of South India, is about to sail for Peru, South America. An unexpected door has opened to him in that country, and in order to enter it he defers for a season his return to India.

Revs. William B. Osborn, of Georgia Conference, and James A. Northrup, of the Rock River Conference, have been transferred by Bishop Harris to the South India Conference of the M. E. Church. The conference is to meet in Calcutta, Nov. 15. Mr. Osborn sailed last week. Mr. Northrup and wife will sail about Oct. 25.

Thomas Carlyle writes: "The older I grow—and I now stand upon the brink of eternity—the more comes back to me the sentence in the catechism which I learned when a child, and the fuller and deeper its meaning becomes: 'What is the end of man? To glorify God and and enjoy him forever.'"

The native Christians of South Africa are learning the lesson of self-support. At Headtown they raise $1,000 a year toward the support of their ministers, $500 for missions, and $250 for church purposes. They have erected a memorial chapel to the chief, Kama, for the building of which they raised $10,000.

The fourth United Christian Convention will be held in Exhibition Palace, Dublin, next month. These conventions were begun by Messrs. Moody and Sankey when in Ireland in 1874. All the evangelical churches of Ireland will be represented. Thus the work of God advances. A good thought formed into action can never die.

The Missouri Conference of the African M. E. Church, Bishop Shorter presiding, has unanimously condemned the African Emigration schemes now so much talked about. The Conference said, we "hereby respectfully, but earnestly protest against all such movements as only tending to distract and injure us. We believe that for the best of purpose known to God, our lot has been cast with the Anglo-Saxon on this continent for all time, and that in the discussion of this question, neither we nor they have ought to do, but to obey the commandments of God." These are words of wisdom which all interested will do well to heed.

News Items.

The death of Senator Bogy leaves only two Roman Catholics in the Senate—Kernan, of New York, and Spencer, of Alabama.

The number of colored members grows less with each Congress. In the forty-third Congress there were nine; in the forty-fourth seven, and in the forty-fifth, three.

The Indian war, so far as the Nez Perces are concerned, was brought to a close by the surrender of the chief, Joseph, with his Indians, to Gen. Miles, October 5, on Eagle Creek.

General Grant has returned to London, where he will remain, with his family, during the entire London season. He has taken apartments at the Bristol Hotel, Burlington Gardens, in the west end, the fashionable quarter of the city.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad Company have paid for sixty-five of the eighty-one lives lost at the Ashtabula disaster, at a rate averaging $5000 apiece. The most expensive life sacrificed cost the company $9000, and a newly married couple were appraised at only $3000,

The Ohio election resulted in a Democratic victory of from twenty-five to thirty thousand majority. On the contrary, the election in Iowa on the same day resulted in the old Republican majority of some forty thousand. The defeat of the Republicans in Ohio is attributed to various reasons: Secretary Sherman's financial policy, the workingmen who had a ticket in the field, and to dissatisfaction with the policy of President Hayes.

The organization of the House took place on Monday, October 15, by electing as Speaker, Samuel J. Randall, of Pennsylvania; Clerk, Geo. M. Adams, of Kentucky; Sergeant-at-Arms, John G. Thompson, of Ohio; Doorkeeper, John W. Polk, of Missouri; Post-master, James M. Stewart, of Virginia, and Chaplain, Rev. Dr. John Poisil, of Maryland.

In the Senate, the oath of office was administered to Stanley Mathews, of Ohio, elected in the place of John Sherman, resigned; J. Donald Cameron, of Pennsylvania, in the place of Simon Cameron, resigned, and D. H. Armstrong, appointed from Missouri, vice L. V. Bogy, deceased.

The New York Herald publishes Stanley's first written communication concerning his African explorations. He says he has opened to commerce an area embracing over six hundred thousand square miles containing nearly two thousand miles of uninterrupted course of water communication, divided among the upper Congo and its magnificent affluents. He says missionaries are needed in the East, and traders in West Central Africa.

The queen of Madagascar has issued a proclamation abolishing slavery in her dominions, accompanied by every circumstance that could give it impressiveness. As many as 50,000 people were assembled in a plain at the center of the capital and the proclamation was read to them. Arrangements were made for reading it, the same hour, in all the large towns of the island. The representatives of the missionary societies were present. While the order was read by the prime minister, cannon were fired to give emphasis to important passages. The substance of the announcement was, that, as the proclamation of 1874 had been evaded, all Africans, whether admitted to Madagascar before or after the treaty of 1865, should henceforth be free.

Henry Stanley, the great African explorer, in one of his letters just published says: "In East Central Africa the people are gathered under powerful Emperors and Kings—the great Empire of Uganda, which has an estimated population of 5,000,000; the great Empire of Ruanda, with an equal estimated population; the Empire of Urundi, with about 3,000,000; the Kingdoms of Usagara, the two Usuis, Unyoro, Karagwe and Usongora, and Ukerewe—all of these empires and kingdoms governed despotically, subject to the will of their respective monarchs. In his worthy efforts for the moral improvement of these benighted races the missionary, using a discreet judgment, can soon secure the good will, assistance, and protection of the supreme powers of these countries."

Good Use for a Dime.

We advise all our readers to forward their address and 10 cents to Orange Judd Co., 245 Broadway, New York, who make a special offer to send for this sum (half price and postage) the number for October 1st, of the American Agriculturist. This splendid number, besides over 50 engravings, contains a great amount of useful, practical, reliable, seasonable information, not only for the Farm and Garden, but for the Household, Children included. Most will get from it hints and suggestions worth ten or twenty times its cost....Better still, to send $1.60 and receive the paper, post-paid, from now to the end of 1878—that is, all of volume 37, with the rest of this year free. (Two copies for $1.50 each). Nowhere else can one get so much really valuable, paying information for so little money—not 3 cents a week, a sum easily saved or produced extra, which the paper will be sure to help one to do. This Journal is prepared by practical men and women, who know what they talk and write about from actual experience and large observation, and they can and do greatly aid others to profitable planning and working. Many single hints and suggestions each abundantly repay a year's cost. The fearless exposures of quackery and humbugs in every number, are invaluable, and have saved its readers and the country millions of dollars. The departments for the Household and Children are pleasing and instructive. Every number of the paper is beautifully illustrated. In short, the American Agriculturist is full of of good things, for every man, woman, and child, in city, village, and country. Take our advice and send $1.60 for 14 months, or at least send a Dime for the half-price specimen now offered, and see it for yourselves.

The City.

THE COMPLETE PREACHER.

The October number of the Complete Preacher contains five sermons from the following distinguished preachers: Dr. Joseph Parker, Dr. T. Christlieb, Dr. Armitage, Pere Hyacinthe and Joseph Cook. The sermons of Dr. Christlieb and Pere Hyacinthe have been specially translated for the Preacher. This is a very valuable number. The Preacher is published by the Religious Newspaper Agency, New York, and costs $2.00 per year. Single copy 25 cents.

THE NATIONAL REPOSITORY.

The National for November is full of good things. The first article is on Liberia, and is finely illustrated. In and About Milan is another illustrated article, and is also Crabs and Lobsters. Dr. Able Stevens gives an article on The Girlhood of Madame De Stael. That Boy: Who Shall Have Him? is continued through chapters xxvi and xxvii. The author, Rev. W. H. Daniels, is a writer of rare ability. In these chapters "That Boy" goes to a theological school, where he becomes disgusted with the absurd so-called theological discussions of Drs. Pondrus and Muehlenberg, whose object seemed more to vindicate their own pet notions than to teach the pure Word of God.

The editorial department of the National is always able. In the "Editors's Study" we have from Dr. Curry a second paper on Science and Faith.

Under the heads of Foreign Literature, Art, Nature, Religious, Current and Useful Literature and Ex Cathera, we have much that is interesting and instructive.

The National is published by Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati; and Nelson & Phillips, New York. $3.00 per year.

U. S. POSTAL GUIDE.

H. O. Houghton & Co. issue for the Government, the October number of the United States Official Postal Guide. Over forty thousand copies are circulated quarterly. It contains an answer to every reasonable question that can be asked of the post office department, and is becoming almost an indispensable manual for the counting room as well as the post office.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

Harper's Magazine for November is the concluding number of the Fifty-fifth Volume. The publishers announce for the coming year new serial novels by Miss Thackeray, Miss Mulock, and Thomas Hardy. Edward Everett Hale's story, "Back to Back," begun in the current number, is to be concluded in the December issue. Among the attractions of the December Number will be a new poem, entitled "Keramos," by Longfellow, which will be illustrated by Fredericks and Abbey, and will occupy fourteen pages of the Magazine.

The November number is richly illustrated, and full of exceedingly interesting matter.

H. W. Elliott, who knows all about Alaska, contributes a wonderfully picturesque article on that region, with twenty illustrations.

Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford's profusely illustrated paper on San Antonio, deals not alone with the almost tropical flora and the historical romance of that region; it is also a faithful representation of the wonderful agricultural resources of Western Texas.

T. Robinson Warren contributes an exhilarating illustrated article on "Yatching in Blue Waters."

By no means the least interesting article in the number is Olive Logan's fascinating narrative of Houdin's remarkable career as a prestidigitateur. His most wonderful tricks are explained and illustrated.

ALCOHOL AND THE STATE.

12m. 406 Pages. Price $1.50. By Robert C. Pitman, L.L.D., Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Mass.

The National Temperance Society has just issued a new and important work, entitled "Alcohol and the State," from the pen of Judge Pitman, who has given this subject a life-long consideration.

It treats, with great conciseness and marked ability, of what the State loses in various ways through alcohol, and, in turn, of what is the duty and proper function of the State concerning alcohol. It is of a high order of literary merit, and is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. It shows that the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the State, and the foe of all the objects for which the State exists; and presents such strong arguments, statistics, appeals, and authorities as will add greatly to an intelligent [illegible] of the Liquor [illegible]. The economic and legislative aspects of the Alcoholic discussion has never been so ably presented, and it should be in the [illegible] citizen and in every [illegible].

Nov. 4, 1877.—PAUL BEFORE FELIX.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts 24: 10-25.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled."—25.

TOPIC.—"A conscience void of offence."—16.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

A Contradiction (10-13).—The prosecutors, no doubt, felt pretty sure of their case. But, in a legal trial, one is never sure of the result until the last speech is made, and, in this case, Paul was to make the last speech. That, of itself, meant a great deal, for though Paul was no rhetorician, as Tertullus claimed to be, he was naturally eloquent, and, besides, had upon his side the eloquence of truth. The apostle follows in order, the steps of his accuser. His compliment to the judge, however, contains not a particle of untruth. He simply expresses his gratification at being tried before a judge whom experience must have made familiar with law and with evidence. To the first charge he replies that it has been only twelve days since he went up to Jerusalem to worship, and that it is easy for the governor to inform himself of all that he did within that time. If he were really "a mover of sedition" it would be specially manifest there. But the facts were that he had not been found in the temple disputing with any man, nor had he stirred up the people, either in the synagogues or in the city. There was not even a shadow for this accusation to stand upon.

A Confession (14-16).—But this I confess. Paul's method seems to have been to deny what was untrue, and to confess that which was true. He does not appear to have been studying to present his defence with the craft of a lawyer, but, on the contrary, gave it with the untrammeled simplicity and force of one who is desirious only of having the truth known. He confesses he belongs to "the way which they call heresy." "Heresy" should be translated "sect." Paul loved and never was afraid to confess himself to be of that way. He was proud of the cross of Christ, and welcomed this opportunity to identify himself with that sect, and to expound its principles. As a Christian he worshipped the God of his fathers. He had not abandoned the worship of the God of Israel and followed after the strage gods of other nations—a proceeding which might have subjected him to adverse criticism, both from the Roman as well as the Jew. He not only believed in God, but in God's revelations to his people. He put faith in them all, and in that he showed himself to be a better Jew than those who had accused him of trying to subvert the Jewish religion, for they accepted only those prophecies that pointed to Christ, as a coming dazzling king, and ignored those that spoke of him as a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. As a Christian, also, he had a hope of a "resurrection of the dead." But this was a hope which his prosecutors also "allowed," or, rather, entertained. There was, therefore, no arraignable heresy in that. In all essential points of faith, he thus showed himself to be at one with his persecutors. Lastly, he states what his Christian belief requires of him—to have a conscience void of offence, toward God and man. His faith was not only orthodox, but its professors were harmless—not the dangerous, seditious men that his accusers would have made them out to be.

A Challenge (17-21).—He proceeds next to take up and dispose of the charge that he had attempted to profane the temple. He appeals to those who came down to convict him, to say what evil had been found in him. He had been before their court. As members of that body, they knew both the accusations against him and the matters, if any, upon which he had been convicted. He reminds them that the only point raised at the council was the one which he raised himself, touching the resurrection from the dead, and quotes the very words that he used on the trial. To this challenge his accusers are silent. They know that they can not reply. He had succeeded, not only in replying to every allegation that had been made against him, but had utterly disconcerted his enemies besides.

A Continuance (22-25).—After so triumphant a vindication, of course Felix ought to have set Paul free. But the disposition of the Roman rulers to do the Jews a favor, where no favor ought to have been given them, a recompense for the evil they had done them in other instances, interferred to prevent. After the address of Paul he had a "more perfect knowledge of that way," but he was not ready to do justice to its follower. On the pretext of desiring to hear the testimony of Lysias, the case was deferred, or, as we would say now-a-days, "was continued" until the chief captain should come down.

Though not set at liberty, he was treated with respect, and was merely kept under the observation of a Roman centurion. His friends were permitted to come in and to minister unto him, and, therefore, we can imagine him as being the center of an admiring and affectionate group, of which Philip and his daughters were chief figures. The imprisonment at Cæsarea was only nominal, while the companionship which he was permitted to have was of the very choicest. "Herod's judgment hall" must have witnessed many a sweet and tender gathering of the disciples of Cæsarea. The fact of his being under the restraints of the law, and with an unknown fate hanging over him, could not but have added to the regard and the sympathy of these occasions. And if their concern for him was sweet to the apostle, how he more than repaid them by the multitude of his spiritual instructions and ministrations! The prisoner sometimes cheers those who come to visit him more than they cheer him.

The Season of Intermittents.

All miasmatic complaints, in other words, all disorders generated by unwholesome exhalations from the earth or water, are prevalent at this season. In every section subject to the visitation of fever and ague, or other intermittent diseases, the causes which produce these maladies are now actively at work. This, therefore, is a period of the year when the inhabitants of such districts should prepare their systems to meet the unwholesome conditions of the atmosphere by a course of tonic and alterative treatment. Foremost among the invigorants, recommended by time and experience as a means of fortifying the system against all endemic and epedemic maladies, stands Hostetter's Stomach bitters. By a timely use of the bitters, the feeblest resident of an unhealty soil may escape the sickness which, without the aid of this potent ally of nature, will be apt to overtake the strongest.

"ITCHING PILES"—Is one of the most annoying diseases in the world, and all can find prompt and certain relief by the use of "Swayne's Ointment." The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, particularly at night. Wm. P. Grove, U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va., writes: I suffered twenty years from this terrible disease, consulted many physicians, but found no permanent relief until I used Swayne's Ointment. It also cures tetter, pimples, all crusty, scaly, itchy skin diseases, leaving the skin clear and smooth without a blemish. Sent by mail to any address, on receipt of price, 50 cents a box. Address letters to Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. E. J. Hart & Co., New Orleans, Wholesale Agents.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, WM. P. GROVE.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry

seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered with night sweats, burning fever, pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.

HOME TESTIMONY.

DR. SWAYNE—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaperilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short, it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me, at the factory. EDWARD H. HAMSON, Engineer of Geo. Sweeney's Pottery, Ridge road, below Wallace, Phila.

Over twenty years have elapsed, and Mr. Hamson still remains a hearty man to this day—September 30, 1876.

PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND IT.

Dr. Thos. J. B. Rhoads, Boyertown, Berks Co., Pa., writes: "Your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry I esteem very highly; have been selling and recommending it to my patients for many years, and it always proves efficacious in obstinate coughs, bronchial and asthmatical affections. It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted."

Price, $1. Six bottles for $5. If not sold by your druggist, we will forward half dozen by express, on receipt of price.

Describe symptoms in all communications, and address letters to DR. SWAYNE & SON, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia. No charge will be made for advice. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicines generally.

A Word for the Mother.

Send the children to bed with a kiss and a smile—
Sweet childhood will tarry at best, but awhile;
And soon they will pass from the portals of home,
The wilderness ways of their life-work to roam.

Yes, tuck them in bed with a gentle "good night!"
The mantle of shadows is vailing the light;
And may be—God knows!—on this sweet little face
May fall deeper shadows in life's weary race.

Yes, say it: "God bless my dear children, I pray!"
It may be the last you will say it for aye.
The night may be long ere you see them again,
And motherless children may call you in vain.

Drop sweet benediction on each little head,
And fold them in prayer as they nestle in bed;
A guard of bright angles around them invite—
The spirit may slip from the mooring to-night.

Grandpa's Story.

"When I was about five years old," said Grandpa H., "my father left our pleasant home in Massachusetts, and made a home for us in the wilds of Canada. We lived in a log house, and it was surrounded, on all sides, by the forest.

BEATTY PIANO.

GRAND, SQUARE AND UPRIGHT, AND BEATTY'S CELEBRATED GOLDEN TONGUE PARLOR ORGANS.

A word in their favor, reed;

From the (Elgin, Ill.,) Reformer:

"We have in our own house one of the pianos advertised by Daniel F. Beatty in another column, and do not hesitate to recommend it from our knowledge of its quality. Mr. Beaty has dealt very honorably by us."

Dr. E. Sedgwick, of Bonaparty Iowa, says:

"Organ came to hand all safe; and after one hour's trial I send you the cash. It more than meets my expectations. The tone is exceediegly fine and melodious, and the case is stylish and beautifully finished."

From J. L. Everitt, Esq., Cashier National Bank, Broadway, N. Y.:

"Organ No. 600 received. As I am fully satisfied with the instrument, I remit without further delay. I have not thought it necessary to call in experts to test it. All my family are delighted."

Every instrument fully warranted for six years as strictly first-class in every respect, and as a guarantee of good faith they are shipped on from 5 to 15 days' test triel, money refunded and freight charges paid both ways by me if they are in any form misrepresented or prove unsatisfactory.—Nothing fairer than this can be offered. AGENTS WANTED, but where I have none large discounts made to introduce in new localities. Send for Illustrated Advertiser, (Catalogue Edition), with testimonials from distinguished persons, some of whom you may know, before buying elsewhere. Address, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey. oct18-2t.

The Pianos and Organs manufactured by Daniel F. Beatty, of Washington, New Jersey, are more earnestly and generally commended by the Press, and music loving public than instruments BEATTY'S manufactured in this country or Europe. The Pianos have the greatest possible depth, richness, and volume of tone, combined with a rare brilliancy, clearness and perfect evenness throughout the PIANOS entire scale, and above all, a surprising duration which never changes under the most delicate or powerful touch. The celebrated "Golden Tongue" Reeds in Beatty's celebrated Organ, in conjunction with the perfected Reed Boards produce sweet, pure, and powerful tones. AND Every instrument Piano and [illegible] Organ, fully warranted perfect [illegible] and will be shipped on ORGANS [illegible] five to fifteen days' test trial, the manufacturer paying freight both ways, if the instrument is not satisfactory. General News Item.

Fort Worth, Texas, has a $50,000 hotel.

In three years Texas expects to have twenty Congressmen.

A Chinese lawyer named Chay was recently admitted to the bar in London.

China is making extensive preparations for representation in the Paris exhibition next year.

The income of Baron Rothschild, who is at the head of the Vienna banking house, is $80,000 per day.

Corn-fed cattle will soon be a new article of export from Texas. Some Bell county farmers are about to try the experiment.

Paper wheels are now being tested under one of the heaviest locomotives now running over the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore railroad.

The Courier-Journal says, so great is the scarcity of water at Eminence, Ky., that it is hauled there from a distance of forty miles, and sells at the rate of $1 50 a harrel.

The whole sum needed for the transportation and erection in New York of the Egyptian obelisk now standing at Alexandria has been procured.

The Russians have ordered contractors to construct 300 kilometres (about 186 miles) of railway in Bulgaria, to build huts for 150,000 men, and hospitals for 15,000.

The late ex-President Thiers, of France, had a fortune valued at $3,200,000, and left nearly everything to his widow, for whose devoted affection he ever expressed himself profoundly grateful.

The Waco, Texas, Examiner calls the attention of scientists to a singular phenomenon in connection with Waco Creek. It has its rise about three-and-a-half miles from Waco, and is fed by a number of small springs. Between the hours of 9 and 10 A. M. and 4 and 5 P. M. "a swift stream of crystal water, five or six inches in depth," flows over its bed. During the remainder of the 24 hours there is scarcely any water to be seen.

The following summary of Russo-Turkish wars may be of some interest in the present state of affairs: "Eight times has Turkey been in danger from Russia; twice, in 1711 and 1739, she has saved herself by the force of her own arms; twice, in 1774 and 1829, has she been saved by the plague; once, in 1807, has she been saved by accidental circumstances; and three times, in 1791, 1812 and 1853, has she been saved by the intervention of other powers. In truth, a succession of marvelous escapes—fortunate, perhaps, for her, but most unfortunate for other nations, since, indirectly, from her gross mismanagement, her apparent helplessness, and the temptations she offers for attack, Turkey is the chronic and inveterate disturber of peace in Europe."

From the annual report of the National Cotton Exchange it appears that the total crop for the year 1876-77 was 4,474,099 bales, at about 467½ pounds to the bale. While 3,232,253 bales were exported in 1875-76, only 3,028,136 went abroad in 1876-77. The home consumption of cotton has been steadily on the increase since 1869-70, when it was only 872,606, with the exception of the year 1874, when there was a large falling off from the total of the year immediately preceding; but next year the demand was good, and in 1876-77 the amount used within the country rose to 1,429,005 bales. The late storms and floods have done considerable damage to the growing crops, but at a reasonable estimate the yield will be about 4,500,000 bales.

The Douglas monument, at Chicago, is to have four pilasters projecting from the corners of the tomb, which will be surmounted by four emblematic statues in sitting attitudes. They will be of heroic size, of bronze or Italian marble. One will represent History recording the doings of Illinois, who sits on another corner, and toward whom History is bending a listening ear. The other two will represent Commerce and the Arts and Sciences. There will be four has reliefs extending round the pedestal. One group will represent the aborigines hunting and fishing. Another will represent the pioneer farmers' life. A third trade and enterprise, illustrated by the building of railroads, telegraph and the unloading of vessels. A fourth, education illustrated by churches, colleges and a class receiving instruction from their schoolmaster.

As a minister of a glorious gospel are morally bound to carry into your work a spirit of hopefulness, of courage, of sunlight and joy. The kingdom you preach is a kingdom of light. Christ has no need of sombre views. A disheartened minister, standing to proclaim to the people, in place of Christ's glorious Gospel, his own dyspeptic musings, is a spectacle to men and angels. The darkness is all in you, and in so far as you preach that, you are preaching yourself and not the message given you by the Lord Jesus.

In a dark world you are sent to hold up the illuminated side of the divine economy. You are to show men God as revealed in Christ. The darkness they already know; you are to turn upon it the argand burner of Gospel truth.

THE ORIGINAL

KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

For sale by all druggists and country stores.

FOR A START!

As Sunday-school teachers are already on the lookout for the best helps to use in 1878, a plan is offered by which THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES can be taken for three months on trial at a very small cost. The Times is a 16 page weekly paper. Among the regular lesson writers during the present year, in addition to the editors, H. Clay Trumbull and George A. Peltz, have been Prof. Tayler Lewis, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, Rev. Newman Hall, of London, and "Faith Latimer." Special articles on the lessons have also been given by many distinguished Bible students. The plans for 1878 include writers not inferior to these.

HOW TO GET IT. If you will send your name and post-office address, together with twenty-five cents, to the address given below, you will receive The Times every week for three months. This offer is only for new subscribers (persons who have not taken the paper within the last six months), the regular price being $2.15 a year. For seven cents additional, a specimen copy of the Scholars' Quarterly will be sent. Specimens of the Weekly Lesson Leaf sent free.

THE SCHOLARS' QUARTERLY (issued every three months) is likely to be far more widely used during next year than ever before. Its circulation during the last quarter reached 115,000 copies. A large share of the best conducted Sunday-schools throughout the country are now using it in place of the ordinary question book. Its editors are determined that no effort or expense shall be spared to keep it in advance of all the lesson helps for scholars. Every superintendent and teacher in the country should examine it before deciding upon lesson helps for next year.

ITS COST is 25 cents a year, or $25 for a hundred copies a year. Sent by mail without cost of postage to subscribers. Subscriptions taken for three or six months at the yearly rate; under 10 copies, three months, seven cents each. To supply YOUR CLASS would cost;—For five scholars, one year, $1.25; three months, 35 cents; for ten scholars, one year, $2.50; three months, 63 cents. If ordered by the year, they will be sent each quarter in ample time for use. The issue for the fourth quarter of this year (October, November, December) is now ready. Send seven cents for a specimen copy. Postage stamps may be sent in place of currency, if more convenient. Address, the Church, but Christ in the Church. They are the letter, He the spirit; they are the channel, He the fountain and the water of life.

2. We learn to whom the invitation is given.

It is, "All ye that labor and are heavy laden." The people were bearing the burden of the law, and were pressed down under the traditions of the elders (Matt. xxiii: 4). There were burdens beyond these—hungerings of soul for freedom from sin—for peace and rest. To every such one, then, and now, and always, the invitation of Jesus is given. He called sinners. Men said of sinners against the law—of those who did not observe the "traditions of the elders"—they are fit only to be "consumed," "destroyed," "confounded," "slain." Men thought they did God's service when they cursed them. Even John would call down fire from heaven upon the inhospitable Samaritans. Jesus said, I have come not to save good men, but bad men, and He always worked in harmony with this plan. Would that the whole Church were in sympathy with it now! "The angels rejoice more over one sinner that repenteth," etc. And so redemption is heaven's best song, sung by sinners saved, "who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

3. We learn what Christ asks men to do.

"Take my yoke upon you and learn of me." The people were worn and wasted under the yoke of tradition. The yoke is designed as a help to draw the load. Christ's service is perfect freedom. As the cargo steadies the ship, so it steadies us in life's sea. In our best moments we crave service. The Master says, Live as I live, lovingly seeking the good of others. Giving heart and hand to the service of Christ, we must learn of Him how to do His service. This is no new thing in the experiences of men. How does the artist learn? He goes to the fields and forests, to the mountains and streams; he studies them; he lives with them till he catches their inspiration, and then he takes his canvas.

The sculptor has his model before he has his marble. "Looking unto Jesus" should be the watchword of the soul. "Take my yoke upon you," [illegible] and then "follow him" that you may know how to bear it.

4. We learn on what the invitation is based.

(a) "For I am meek and lowly in heart." Christ had a divine consciousness and lived a divine life, and it was right for Him to reveal His purity and glory and to talk of them too. We are so accustomed to insincerity and pride in men, we see so many faults in those who profess to be "meek and lowly in heart," that we doubt those who claim perfection. But no one doubts Christ because He claims it. He lived it before He claimed it. (b) "For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." All things are light to love. Paradox as it may seem, experience confirms the claim of Christ. The mother knows it who sees her children developing under her watchful care into better boys and girls. The yoke and burden of Christ! they are like the wings of a bird; like the legs of a runner; like the hand of a climber; like the eyes of a guard.

5. We learn what the reward is.

"I will give you rest." Down deeper than all desire in the human soul is this craving for rest." He gives it to His followers. 'Tis not rest from toil and burden, but rest in the soul, which shall make every burden light. There is an old legend of Rabbi Judah and six wise men. They sat in the temple on a feast day disputing about rest. One said it was to have attained wealth [illegible]; the third said power; [illegible] said a happy home; the [illegible] old age, rich, powerful, [illegible] with children's children; [illegible] said all these are vain [illegible] man keep the law of Moses. [illegible] Judah said: "Ye have all [illegible] wisely, but one thing more [illegible] needed; we must observe the tradition of the elders." A little child sat with them, and, hearing the talk of the elders, looked up and said: "Nay, nay, fathers—he only hath rest that loves his broth[illegible] and God with his [illegible] such a man is greater [illegible] fame, and power; [illegible] home—happy [illegible] honored age. [illegible] to himself and above [illegible] The doctors were [illegible] said, 'When Christ [illegible] shall be greater [illegible]' [illegible] this of Christ is [illegible] Christ [illegible] Metropolitan [illegible]

The Use of the Cent in Trade in New Orleans.

Last week we called attention to the importance of introducing the Copper Cent into the trade of New Orleans. The following collection of facts and arguments on the matter, are from the Times, and prove conclusively that the introduction of the Cent among our circulating coin would not harm any one, and would be of great benefit to the poor.

Everybody who has been to New York knows how they enter into every transaction from the exact payment of the millionaire's check down to the purchase of a shirt button. In all the Eastern, Middle, and most of the Western States, these small coins are in general use. They have taken root at Louisville and St. Louis, and are moving steadily South. Three dollars now will buy as much as five dollars would buy seven years ago. A three cent coin therefore is needed to purchase what was bought then with a five cent piece. As prices have declined, the quantities formerly sold for five cents have correspondingly increased. Nothing is gained by retailers from the exclusion of minor coins. Their introduction would be not much a saving as a convenience, and neither the sales nor the profits of the retailers would be decreased, while the poor would be enabled to purchase a much greater variety with the same small pittance. They ought to insist upon their introduction.

FIVE CENTS IN THE MARKETS.

A reporter visited Poydras Market on Saturday for the purpose of sounding the feeling of retailers on the subject. He found that they had already been discussing it, and were opposed to it. They are unanimous in the opinion that it would reduce their sales, and that a large portion of their customers would only spend two and three cents where they now spend five. This one-sided view, however, was easily dispelled by a little plain common sense, when the reporter pointed out that people would not eat less potatoes because they could buy three instead of five cents worth at a time. The most ignorant potato peddler could see the point. Further reasoning in the same strain soon brought them to admit the advantage of the cents, but they invariably wound up with the observation: "Its no use; you can't get the people here to give up the picayune style of business."

Moving about among the stands and taking the exact quotations of various articles, the reporter found that five cents would buy of Irish potatoes from 2 to 19, according to size; of sweet potatoes from 2 to 18, of apples 5, or 5 small bananas, or 6 turnips, or 40 pods of okra, or 7 onions, or 2 eggs, or 15 persimmons, or 4 doughnuts, or 3 heads of cabbage lettuce, or 30 radishes, or 3 tomatoes, or 25 eschellotts, or two crabs, or a large bunch of salsify, or parsley or thyme, or a soup bunch, composed of pumpkin, carrot, pepper, celery, parsley, cabbage, leek and sorrel. This list could be continued indefinitely, and made to embrace thousands of articles in every line. But it is sufficient for the practical illustration of how the introduction of cents would increase the comforts of the poor without increasing their expenses or causing loss to anybody.

THE PICAYUNE SYSTEM.

Take a family of two grown persons and two children, and after their house rent, groceries, clothing and all miscellaneous expenses are paid, suppose that they have a half a dollar a day for marketing; with the tightest squeezing, bread will cost ten cents, milk five cents and meat twenty-five cents a day, leaving ten cents for vegetables, fruits, etc. Five cents can be spent for radishes and five cents for potatoes, or the ten cents can be spent for any other two articles. The point is, that however it may be invested it will only supply the table with two articles in addition to meat and bread. After these two are purchased, anything else may be dismissed. Perhaps only the husband eats radishes, and he only wants three each day for dinner; thus, in two days he eats one cent's worth, and has twenty-five, or four cents' worth to throw away as wilted. The vegetable dealers think the one cent system would deprive them of the sale of these four cents' worth which are not used. But here is where they err in not looking at the other side of the question. Where one rich man will throw away four cents in order to get one cent's worth of radishes, forty poor men will refuse to buy any radishes at all, and, consequently, they wilt on the hands of the dealers, or their consumption is decreased. The soup bunch even more forcibly illustrates the oppressive working of the picayune system. A poor man can go into a ten cent bar room and get a glass of whisky with a good lunch of soup thrown in for ten cents, and still the barkeeper makes money, but if he wants his wife or little ones to have a single plate of soup at home, the raw material necessary to make it cannot be had for less than ten cents any way he can fix it. He must pay five cents for a soup bone and five cents for a soup bunch—big enough to make soup for a boarding house.

THE CENT SYSTEM.

Were the cent system in vogue, two cents would buy as much of the soup bone as he would need, and one fifth of the present five cent soup bunch would be plenty. His materials would then cost three cents and ten poor families would have soup, the most nourishing of food, where one has it now. The ten cents for vegetables, instead of buying only two kinds, would at the same prices buy eight kinds in smaller quantities. The one cent for three potatoes, one cent for one apple, one cent for one banana, one cent for one onion, one cent for six radishes, two cents for one head of cabbage lettuce, two cents for one large tomato, and one cent for eight pounds of okra. Of course, this variety would be altered into various combinations according to taste and circumstances.

THE RETAIL GROCERS.

Some time ago a grocer in the vicinity of Magazine, another in the vicinity of Dryades and still another near Ninth Street Market, attempted to introduce cents, but failed because there was not a sufficient quantity in circulation. They did a thriving and paying trade, and their experience demonstrated that the move would be brilliantly successful, if united action on the part of all the grocers could be obtained. Both the dealers and the people would welcome the change. Down town, where picayune purchases of every day's articles are very common, it is a prevailing practice to overcome the absence of cents, by a grocer giving a customer a proportionate quantity of several small articles for five cents. Thus, a half picayune's worth of salt and a half picayune's worth of pepper are often purchased with a single five cent piece. An interview with several down town grocers revealed the fact that they only wait for some influential citizen to lead off in a public movement when they will lend it their hearty support.

WHO OPPOSE IT?

Besides the market dealers, the street railroads and banks are said to look upon the introduction of cents with disfavor. The railroads, because they fear that if it were possible to pay less than five cents fare, there would be a demand for a reduction to four cents; and the banks, because it would be a little more trouble to the clerks. If the officers of the banks, however, would take the matter into consideration, it is believed they could confer a vast benefit upon the poor by procuring the newly coined cents and introducing them. Concerted action on their part would soon effect the desired revolution. Mr. Benner, of the Citizens' Savings Bank, has already interested himself in the subject, and it is to be hoped that he will be supported in the good work.

THE LAW ABOUT CENTS.

The original minor coin of the United States was the large copper cent of our boyhood. Its issue was benefit upon the poor by procuring the newly coined cents and introducing them. Concerted action on their part would soon effect the desired revolution. Mr. Benner, of the Citizens' Savings Bank, has already interested himself in the subject, and it is to be hoped that he will be supported in the good work.

THE LAW ABOUT CENTS.

The original minor coin of the United States was the large copper cent of our boyhood. Its issue was discontinued in 1857, when a smaller cent, composed of nickel and copper, was issued down to 1864. From that date to 1873 bronze one and two cent pieces were coined, as well as three cent pieces of copper and nickel. At present only one and three cent pieces are coined. They consist wholly of alloy, three-fourths copper and one-fourth nickel for the three cent coin, and ninety-five per cent. of copper and five per cent. of tin and zinc for the one cent piece. The present five cent nickel is composed, like the three cent piece, of three-fourths copper and one-fourth nickel. The five cent nickel weighs seventy-seven and a fraction Troy grains, the three cent nickel weighs thirty grains and the one cent copper forty-eight grains.

They can be purchased in round lots of $20 to any amount at par for greenbacks, and the government pays the express charges on them from the Philadelphia mint. Mr. Flanders, the sub-treasurer here, will take pleasure in procuring all the minor coins the community may require.

A project is on foot in New York to lay mains for supplying the city with sea-water for fires and for sprinkling the streets. It is deemed better for sanitary reasons than the Croton water, and, besides, the supply of water from the Croton river and the connecting lakes is far from unlimited.

Georgia Conference.

The Methodist Advocate of Oct. 24th gives the following editorial on the late session of the Georgia Conference, which met October 11th, at Dalton, Ga., Bishop Harris presiding:

The session of the Georgia Conference, at Dalton, was unusually interesting. The weather was delightful and the entertainment splendid. Members of all of the Churches opened their doors to our ministers and entertained them not only hospitably but elegantly. On Sabbath the pulpits of other denominations were filled by visitors and members of the Conference.

Bishop Harris preached an able sermon in the Methodist Episcopal Church on Sabbath morning, and dedicated the house to divine worship, with the usual services. The building is a solid brick structure, costing three thousand and five hundred dollars, and is completed except the blinds, and is furnished in part. Through the enterprise and liberality of N. B. Harbin, who was a member of the General Conference in Baltimore, this house has been built and paid for, except a loan of $300 from the Board of Church Extension, he having expended upon it of his own means fifteen hundred dollars or over. The Church Extension Board has donated six hundred dollars. It is well located upon a desirable lot with clear title. The gratitude of the Church is due to brother Harbin for this result.

Rev. J. B. Ford preached in the afternoon, and four deacons and three elders were ordained. In the M. E. Church South, J. F. Spence preached in the morning and E. Q. Fuller at night; J. A. Hyden preached in the morning in the Presbyterian Church and E. A. Blanchard at night; Cumberland Presbyterian, James Mitchell and J. P. Bazemore; and in the Baptist Church, T. C. Carter and Daniel Baltin.

The anniversaries were interesting and profitable. On Thursday night the Sunday-school anniversary was held, addresses being made by the Sunday-school Agent, J. B. Ford, and J. A. Hyden. Friday night was devoted to the cause of Education; speakers, J. B. Ford, T. C. Carter, and J. F. Spence. On Saturday night, the Church Extension anniversary was held; speakers J. A. Hyden and J. E. Bryant. Sabbath night was given to the cause of missions, addresses being delivered by brothers Mitchell, Carter and Ford. There was preaching on Wednesday night by brother Blanchard; on Thursday at 3 o'clock by J. W. Talley; on Friday at 3 o'clock, the Conference Missionary Sermon; and on Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Savage addressed a full house on the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. She also spoke to the ladies on Monday afternoon.

The session has done much good and tended strongly to the cultivation of genuine and deep fraternal feeling among the Churches. Bishop Harris is winning golden opinions in this portion of territory where he has been almost a stranger till the present time. The Methodist Episcopal Church among the white people of Georgia is stronger to-day than at any time before since the re-organization in the South. The Savannah Conference (soon to meet) will doubtless show the same to be true of our colored work.

A Word of Caution.

BY C. C. M'CABE, D. D.

The great army of Methodism should be a disciplined army. No man has a right to leave his post and go about collecting money without authority from his conference or from his Bishop.

Every Methodist pastor, when appealed to for his pulpit by one of these self-appointed agents, should demand his authority before surrendering it. Our congregations are burdened enough with the regular connectional interests that come before them. Sometimes in an emergency there may be an exceptional case.

I have reasons for these remarks which I do not care to state here. Suffice it to say, that money has been collected sometimes for churches which ought not to be helped, whose applications for aid had been before the Board of Church Extension and had been rejected, because it was evident that Boards of Trustees were quite willing somebody should pay their debts for them. I have heard of the most singular contracts made with their agents. For instance, one in which the agent was to have 33 per cent. of his collections besides expenses. I can find you Boards of Trustees who will agree to give half of all the money contributed to the collector. Then Boards are often made up of unconverted men, who have little conscience to speak of.

Brethren, guard your pulpits from imposition. If any real emergency exist it is easy to get the requisite authority from the conference or presiding Bishop.

New Publications.

THE ORIGIN AND DESTINY OF MAN.

Dr. H. W. Thomas, of the Rock River Conference, has just closed a very successful pastorate of two years in Aurora, Ills. He has lately been appointed pastor of Centenary Church, Chicago. During his Aurora pastorate he delivered a series of sermons on topics relating to the Origin and Destiny of Man. The book before us contains these sermons. The publishers are Messrs. Pierce, Burton & Co., Aurora, Ills. Price $1.00.

Dr. Thomas is a man of liberal culture and philosophic turn of mind. He has no patience with that style of thought which accepts things simply because they are written or are placed in creeds. He wants to know the reason of things, and in searching out these he at times meets the unfavorable criticisms of not a few of the more severely orthodox classes. But with a heart and head loyal to the great fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith, and thoroughly imbued with the spirit of these doctrines as stated and practically applied in Methodism, Dr. Thomas has done much to awaken a more thoughtful study of these doctrines among the members of his different congregations.

The sermons discuss the following topics: God, or First Cause; Creator and Created; Origin and Antiquity of Man; the Problem of Evil; the Government of God; Salvation; the Change we call Death; the Immortality of the Soul; the Intermediate State; the Resurrection; the Judgment Day; the Question of Future Punishment, and the Heavenly World.

Dr. Thomas accepts the nebular hypothesis of creation and tries to harmonize Genesis with it. We think Dr. Slaughter, in his modern Genesis, has given a well nigh fatal blow to the nebular theory. Dr. T. thinks there was a pre-Adamic man and inclines to belief in a probation after death. Many of his passages are brilliant and all his lectures are instructive. We do not accept all he says but commend his frank and free discussion of difficult problems. It is a pleasure to know that the Church has ministers, (and their numbers are multiplying yearly) who need not sit dumb in the presence of the best scientific culture of the age, but can with ease and profit discuss all questions and distinguish the good from the bad.

BIOLOGY.

This book, published by J. R. Osgood & Co., Boston, and for sale at Eyrich's, 130 Canal street, contains thirteen of Joseph Cook's celebrated Boston lectures. We give the subjects of the several lectures. 1. Huxley and Tyndall on Evolution. 2 & 3. The Concessions of Evolutionists. 4. The Microscope and Materialism. 5. Lotz, Beale, and Huxley on Living Tissues. 6. Life or Mechanism—which? 7. Does Death end all? Involution and Evolution. 8. Does Death end all? The nerves and the soul. 9. Does death end all? Is instinct immortal? 10. Does death end all? Bain's Materialism. 11. Automatic and influential nerves. 12. Emerson's views on Immortality. 13. Ulrici on the Spiritual Body.

Preceding the several lectures are talks on important practical topics. Seven of these are given. 1. Gift Enterprises in politics. 2. Safe Popular Freedom. 3. Daniel Webster's Death. 4. Civil Service Reform. 5. Authorities on Biology. 6. Boston and Edinburgh. 7. The Gulf Stream in History. The book includes 325 pages and retails at $1.50 per copy.

Joseph Cook has suddenly come to the very front rank of American pulpit orators and theological writers and thinkers. His methods and success mark a new era in the religious movements of this country. His culture is broad, his travels have been extensive, his power of analysis is of the very first order, his familiarity with every form of philosophy bearing upon theological questions, is simply marvelous, and his power to interest and instruct a popular audience in the most abstruse questions of scientific research, is attested by the fact that Tremont Temple, Boston, will not contain the multitudes who flock to hear him once a week.

The purpose of these Boston lectures is to present the results of the freshest German, English and American scholarship on the more important and difficult topics concerning the relation of Religion and Science. They were begun in 1875, and have continued with increasing interest each winter. The audiences are made up from the most intelligent people of Boston, among them many ministers and teachers.

These lectures on Biology, or the Science of Life, oppose the materialistic but not the theistic theory of evolution. Evolution as a law of nature is admitted as proven in a certain sense, but is strongly, and we think successfully, opposed as in any sense to do away with the necessity of a creating and superintending Divinity. This is the position to which the great body of scholarly christians are rapidly coming. In his lecture, Living Tissues, Mr. Cook, page 111, states his position on evolution thus: "What is the case against that theory? (evolution.) It consists of the irreconcilable opposition of the attributes of matter and mind, of the unfathomed gulf between the living and the not living, of the fact that spontaneous generation has never been shown to be a possibility, and of the missing links between man and apes. Let these points be met fairly and the case is met. Not until the chasm between the not living and the living, is filled up by observation, not until that distant time when you shall have found some merely physical link between the inorganic and organic, can you say that the theory of evolution has been proven by induction. A theory of evolution has been proved, but not the theory. * * * I hold a theory of evolution, but not the theory. What do I mean by the theory of evolution? Precisely what Huxley means when he says in so many words that 'if the theory of evolution is true, the living must have arisen from the not living.'"

These lectures of Joseph Cook will be read by many with great profit. The book can be ordered either from Mr. Eyrich's or the publishers.

Uncle Billy and the President.

Gov. Hampton's faithful body guard, "Uncle" Billy Rose, accompanied him throughout his trip to Illinois. Billy left Columbia as Uncle Billy, but returned as "Mr. Rose." He was introduced to Mr. Hayes on the train, and had a short conversation with the President and his wife, in the course of which the President remarked that during the war his brigade captured Gen. Gordon's body servant, who remained with them some time, and was very much liked by the soldiers. "Yes," said Mr. Rose, "but you were not smart enough to capture me!" Billy had seen service. He was the body servant of Gen. Maxey Gregg, who was mortally wounded at Fredericksburg, and remained with his master until he died. Billy's reply caused a smile all round, and the conversation is now laid up in Billy's memory, among his chiefest treasures. He makes no secret of his own inmost political conviction that Mr. Hayes is "a mighty fine man."—Ex.

Almost.

Almost sweet is unsavory; almost hot is lukewarm. Almost a Christian is like Micah, who thought himself religious because he had gotten a priest into his house. Almost a Christian is like the Ephraimites who could not pronounce Shibboleth, but Sibboleth. Almost a Christian is like Ananias, who brought a part but left a part behind. Almost a Christian is like Eli's sons, who polluted the sacrifices; like the barren fig-tree which Christ rebuked; like the virgins, who carried lamps without oil; like the willing un-willing son, who said he would and would not.—Henry Smith.

The Sabbath Day, a Social and Intellectual Necessity.

Toil is the lot of man. No matter what the position, labor is universal. Accumulated fortune may in some sense mitigate this—still with all, this is a life of toil. All the week there is business to absorb and mental labor to fatigue. There is but little time for social culture of that higher and purer type suggested by a day hallowed by God. Especially is this true of the great mass of mankind who take little or no part in the so-called social pleasures enjoyed in more fashionable life. Sabbath morning comes. The work of the week with its perplexing cares is past. An air of happy leisure pervades the home. Parents and children meet in happy converse. Arrayed in clean garments, the dust and dirt of the week is forgotten, and friend meets friend to be blest and cheered with pleasant words and happy smiles. Then comes the assembled people to worship. They are together in the house of God. Each one is His invited guest. All upon an equality, how blest the social influence of the Sabbath assembly. Who can but see the effects of such an influence in elevating and blessing the race. Wherever the Sabbath is disregarded there socially the people are degraded. The Sabbath is a social necessity. It is needed in the cottage and in the mansion. It cannot be dispensed with in the congregation, and woe to American society socially—if this day is to be wholly disregarded.

Here a great danger must be guarded against. A danger which is increasing to an alarming extent in America, especially in large cities. That danger is in regarding the Sabbath as a day for all manner of frivolities and social license. The blue laws of the Puritans that would persecute a man for smiling on Sunday were foolish and absurd, but the other extreme that opens the theatre—which is bad enough at any time—on the Sabbath, and which sanctions the calling together of multitudes in the Sunday beer garden or upon the Base-ball ground, or looks with approval upon the Sabbath procession parading the streets—is much more foolish and absurd, because positively wicked and subversive of all morality. The Sabbath forms a most important part of the social problem of American society. It must not, it cannot be ignored. Liberty gives no license that would destroy the Sabbath any more than it would give license to destroy any other social necessity. And as the perpetuity of the Sabbath demands that it be observed in accordance with the spirit of its design, it follows that the people of a nation has a right to impose legal barriers to prevent the desecration of this holy day. This in no way interferes with liberty of conscience. It does not say how men shall observe the Sabbath, it only says how they shall not destroy it.

Not only is the Sabbath day a social necessity, but it is also an intellectual necessity. The intellect may be injured in either of two ways: by being over-worked or by not being worked enough. Probably more are injured in the latter than in the former way. Now the Sabbath comes as a divinely appointed blessing to guard men against both of these errors. The student who from early morn to evening, each day for a week, pours over his books needs a day of rest. His mind demands it. Most of our schools think that two days of each week should be regarded as days of intellectual rest. With some [illegible] ambitious youths this is disregarded. The result nearly always is over-worked brain, and premature mental imbecility. Clerks, bookkeepers and accountants who all the rest of the week are actively engaged in their work, pouring over figures, adding up column after column and making up bill after bill, need one day in the week when the books shall be closed, when the [illegible] questions will [illegible] they need a Sabbath [illegible] That need is absolute; [illegible] when the combina[illegible] and the improved [illegible] such as to [illegible] play the [illegible] ments, are yet moved and used by that will.

But those who over-work their brains are greatly in the minority. The Sabbath Day is an intellectual necessity, with the bulk of humanity for quite another reason. It is needed as a day for mental culture. A day in which to spend hours in reading, thought and meditation. The tendency of ceaseless toil is downward. Hence, the necessity that one day in seven shall be set apart to the lifting up of the mind, to the elevation of thought, and to the contemplation of truth. The great text book for Sabbath study, is the Bible. Coleridge used to say that, "the fairest flower he ever saw climbing round the poor man's window, was not so beautiful as the Bible he saw lying within." And again he says: "I feel as God had, by giving the Sabbath, given fifty-two Springs in the year."

What more beautiful sight than to see the man of toil upon the Sabbath, with his family around him, drinking in from the precious truths of Holy Writ? And then again, called by the Sabbath church bell to the house of God, how truly are the same minds blest and instructed by the worship and teachings of that sacred place. How many millions of minds, even in our land, would remain in ignorance, were it not for the Sabbath? How grand the themes for thought which that day, as a rule, inspires and suggests! How elevating their power! And then again, consider the amount of time the Sabbath gives for study. Every year nearly two months. At the age of twenty-one a person has had three years of Sabbaths: at the age of fifty nearly seven years of sacred time; and at the age of seventy, the Sabbath-keeper has enjoyed ten solid years of time set apart for Spiritual truth, during which he has habitually fixed his thoughts on the most genial, beautiful and sublime objects of study.

Another has well said, "Is it any wonder that the most highly intellectual and enlightened races on the globe, are those by whom the Sabbath has been most generally observed, and who have even guarded it by legal enactments? Why prate about Sabbath-laws as an infringement of liberty? They secure to us our liberties! They bring to us freedom from the slavery of toil and care, and give us leisure for mental and moral culture. They prevent the task-master from grinding us into dust. Let this busy age beware of its gigantic machinery! If we suffer our Sabbaths to be turned into holidays—we shall presently find that the time cannot even be spent in play. Selfish men will have their way, and we be made to work seven days in the week for the pay of six. These wheels that never weary and these engines that have no bowels of mercy will crush our hearts and grind our souls."

Obelisks.

Just now London is rejoicing over the fact that she has secured one of Cleopatra's needles from Alexandria. The "needle" is one of the famous obelisks of Egypt. New York has caught the fever, and availing itself of an offer from the Egyptian Government, proposes to have the mate to the one London has secured. The expense will be one hundred thousand dollars, and the money has been raised.

These two obelisks are among the most famous of ancient Egypt. They were erected first seventeen years before Christ, at Helipolis, the city of Temples in ancient Egypt. In the first century of the Christian era, they were transported by the Roman Emperor, and put at the entrance of the temple of Cæsar in Alexandria. The one New York expects to get still stands. These two then are nearly thirty-six hundred years old, having outlived all the temples of Heliopolis and Alexandria. These obelisks are ninety-two feet high, and measure eight feet at the base. Like all obelisks, they are a single square block of red granite, tapering slightly toward the top. These weigh over four hundred tons.

All the obelisks of Egypt were erected from two thousand to five hundred years before Christ. Their object was to preserve the precepts of philosophy, the conquests of the reigning kings, and anything else of sufficient importance to command the great expense of their erection. These monuments were [illegible] "Pharaoh's Needles" by the [illegible], and the two above referred to, were called Cleopatra's needles by Tiberius, the Roman Emperor, who had them removed from Heliopolis. The philosophical precepts, or historical events, were inscribed on the shaft.

But the most wonderful thing about these obelisks is, the way in which they were quarried and transported, in some cases eight hundred miles. They were all cut from the ancient and celebrated red granite quaries, at Syene, in Southern Egypt. Three sides of the immense shaft were cut and polished, and then a large number of iron wedges were at the same moment driven along the under edge, which broke the mass from its bed. This feat accomplished, then came the greater work of taking it from one to eight hundred miles, as the case might be, to the city, where it was to be erected. As the mines were near the river Nile, when the obelisks were small they were slid on huge rafts and floated down the river. If they were large they were slid on rollers, inch by inch and foot by foot, the whole distance. Several years would sometimes be required to take one from the quarry to its city. They were erected by being gradually lifted by building mounds of dirt under them. The greatest care was taken to have them kept perfect and placed in exactly perpendicular positions. In one case it is said the king had his own son bound to the obelisk while it was being erected to insure its careful handling and perfect adjustment. Before being erected the necessary figures and hieroglyphics were inscribed on them by the sculptor.

But few of these ancient Egyptian monuments remain standing where they were placed. The Persian conqueror Cambyses destroyed many, and under the Ptolemian kings many were taken to Alexandria. The Romans, in becoming conquerers of Egypt, took several by sea to Rome as memorials of their conquests. There are now eleven obelisks of different sizes in Rome, the finest one is standing in front of the Vatican. Constantinople has several, Paris has one, and several European cities have have each one or more. Should New York get the other of Cleopatra's needle it will be a rare monument with which to adorn one of its public squares. It will be worth a trip of a thousand miles to look upon a marble shaft three thousand six hundred years old.

Boston Letter.

The east winds have come, bringing chill and fog and gloominess; and while you of the Sunny South are just entering upon the most delightful time of the year, we have "a certain fearful looking for" of dreary days and drizzling rains and somber skies. But with the unpleasant weather, we have much to entertain and profit withall, for the current of literary and social life is at its highest tide, and the opportunities for seeing and "smelling of great men" are almost unlimited. The Lowell Institute has opened its annual series of free lectures by a course on German literature by Bayard Taylor. While the Redpath, and Old Bay State Lyceums have each announced a course of musical and literary entertainments of the finest cast and at prices which bring them within the reach of all.

Mr. Cook, if we may judge from the three lectures already delivered, promises to out do himself in the coming months. His return to the platform was greeted with a crowded and most enthusiastic house and his popularity increases with every succeeding lecture. His guns are not only of immense calliber, but rifled, and so scientifically pointed that every shot hits the target, and hits it hard. His wealth of illustration seems unmeasured and unfathomable and the dramatic enthusiasm and self-abandon of his delivery, with a rich flow of the choicest and most exact language make him one of the most engaging speakers of the age. But the best factors of the man are his scholarly acquaintance with the great topics of the times and his thoroughly devout and evangelical spirit. Insisting upon clearness of thought, and fairness of method he goes to the bottom of his themes and by a purely scientific process forges the most fearful thunder-bolts that have ever been hurled at the opposers of evangelical faith. Personally Mr. Cook is a very striking man—breadth and solidity without heaviness—a powerful physique with a Websterian head and an eye that is terrible in the fire of its gleam—these are his make-up. Somebody in England [illegible] "the Demosthenes of the nineteenth century," certainly he stands at the head of American orators, carrying a breadth of canvass that is attracting the eyes of the world and having, as we believe, ballast enough to keep him steady.

Yesterday Mr. G. Muller, founder of the renowned faith asylums of England—a man who has achieved the most stupendous results through simple prayer—preached in the Tabernacle, at 9 o'clock A. M. He is 73 years old, of thoughtful and earnest mien and modest in all his appearings. His address, however, is faulty and very many of those who heard him were much disappointed, in great part, perhaps from their inability to understand him. Dr. Dale, of Birmingham, Eng., now delivering the Lyman Beecher course of lectures before the divinity students of Yale College, was also in the city yesterday and preached to a large audience in the Old Park street Church. He is a most thorough Englishman—quick and deeply earnest in manner and keen-edged in thought. His lectures promise to be the finest ever delivered on that topic in this country. They are published by the Independent and we wish they might be placed in the hands of every young preacher of our connection and especially those of the South.

Boston Methodism is looking up. The School of Theology has entered upon a most promising year, and an unusually earnest spirit of consecration, and desire to come into the possession of the richer experiences of faith, seems to pervade all its students. The chapel room of a new edifice, to be known as "The Peoples' Church," located in the heart of the city, was formally dedicated yesterday. Bishops Simpson and Foster officiating in the morning and evening services, and Dr. J. A. Chapman, of Brooklyn, preaching a grand sermon, full of the thrilling power of the Holy Ghost in the afternoon. The structure when finished will be a very valuable one and will, no doubt, fulfill a glorious mission in the future.

Bishop Simpson made a telling address before the preachers meeting this a. m., on the polity of the church, putting in a cuttingly true and most unenviable light those pastors and trustees who care only for selfish interests and who are strangers in their lives to the exalted and self-sacrificing spirit of Methodism.

Dr. McCarty drops into Boston occasionally, is looking well and reports progress in his mission. He recently addressed the preachers meeting in terms of high appreciation of his reception among Southern people, and advised the cessation of bitter recriminations by all parties, and the cultivation of the practical spirit of fraternity and mutual concession through the bond of love.

Dr. Taylor has also been visiting Boston of late, looking up workers for his Indian and South American fields. As a preacher he gives great satisfaction, but many were disappointed in his practical talks on the mission work. He is likely to secure several men from the School of Theology. Whatever may be said of these unique movements outside of the church lines of work, Dr. Taylor is unquestionably making a success of it, and men who are fitted for such a field will undoubtedly find grand opportunities to labor among the English speaking populations of foreign countries. The idea which he is following out, of making these English speaking classes a key to aggressive work among the heathen nations with which they come in daily contact, is certainly a very sensible one, and the results in India are so satisfactory that we doubt not the attention of the church will be directed to the subject in an increased measure in the future. Boston, October 22, 1877.

Rev. Dr. W. E. Munsey, of the M. E. Church, South, died suddenly at Jonesboro, Tenn., on the morning of October 23. He was pastor of the St. Charles Avenue Church in this city until last Spring when on account of broken health he was compelled to seek a more bracing climate. The N. O. Christian Advocate in announcing his death says: "Dr. Munsey's constitution was broken when he left New Orleans last Spring. His nervous system especially was shattered, and we are not greatly surprised to hear of his death. He was one of the most remarkable and gifted men of this century."

Death of Dr. Wm. Hunter.

The death of Rev. Dr. Wm. Hunter, at Cleveland, Ohio, October 18, removes from the church one of its purest and best men. He began his editorial career as editor of the Pittsburgh Conference Journal from 1836. From 1844 to 1852, he was editor of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate. He was an editor sixteen years; a Professor in Allegheny College for sixteen years, and nearly thirteen years pastor and Presiding Elder.

Dr. Hunter was best known as a hymn and song writer. He published "Select Melodies," and "The Minstrels of Zion." Fifty thousand of the former were sold, and the book is still popular. In 1848, he published "Poems on Methodism," and afteward "Songs of Devotion." Many of his songs are world-wide in fame. He was the author of "Joyfully, Joyfully, Onward I Move," "Hold the Light up Higher," "A House in Heaven," "My Heavenly Home is Bright and Fair," and many other hymns. The Western closes a sketch of his life with these words:

Dr. Hunter's stalwart form was known to hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of our readers. He was tall and portly, of dignified mien, with a genial countenance, sunny eyes, and though naturally quiet and retiring in his manners, he was companionable, and the life of a circle in the socialities of life. He was honored and beloved wherever he was known. He would never indulge in harsh criticisms, either in conversation or in his papers. He was one of the purest, gentlest, and sweetest spirits that have found rest on high. He leaves a widow and several children, and two honored brothers—Rev. Andrew Hunter, D. D., of the Little Rock Conference, of the Church South, and John Hunter, of Alliance, Ohio—and one sister, and hosts of friends.

Rev. Charles B. Galloway, Pastor of the M. E. Church, South, Jackson, Miss., delivered an address at the Crystal Springs Camp Meeting, in August last, on the subject of Methodism. The address, which was delivered on invitation of the Camp Meeting Association, and on their anniversary, was a very excellent one, and has been published in pamphlet form. The speaker, taking for his theme "Methodism a Child of Providence," discoursed eloquently of its origin and subsequent development—of the necessity first for such religious reformation, and then of the labors of the Wesleys and their coadjutors in the great work to which God had called them. We give a few of the closing sentences:

The rigid, self-denying life demanded of the early Methodists which made them singular, also made them powerful. Free from pampered ease and self indulgence, they were inured to service and bore the brunt of battle without fear. Mr. Wesley, at the good old age of 87, in a letter to Alexander Mather, uses this thrilling language: "Give me one hundred preachers, who fear nothing but sin and desire nothing but God, and I care not a straw whether they be clergymen or laymen, such alone will shake the gates of hell, and set up the kingdom of heaven upon earth." Grand words these from the old battle scarred veteran whose sword which flashed in the fore-front of conflict, now hung feebly by his side. They remind one of the brave Swiss patriot who fell at Preston Pans. Though mortally wounded, fearing that his fall might discourage his comrads, he raised himself on his elbow and said, "I am looking my children to see you do your duty." Happy for Methodism if she will heed the parting counsel of her aged leader and cling to the purity of faith and simplicity of life that made her early days heroic. As we grow in numbers, wealth and influence, our dangers are increased, and we have the greater need of entire consecration. We cannot afford either compromise or parley with sin. Ours must be a spiritual church. We have no splendid and imposing ritual to fascinate the taste, no proscriptive dogma around which to rally our prejudices, nor hoary traditions to command our tender veneration. It is ours to preach and practice spiritual religion. Should the day come when Methodism shall forget this her only mission, her downfall is secured. She will have finished her course. But such, I trust, may never be.

I believe that we have yet a mission in the world. Methodism has not fulfilled the divine purpose of her creation. God has still a work for us to do.

"Our flag on every height unfurled,
And morning drums beat round the world."

is prophecy for yet richer blessings and grander conquests. The past has been glorious, but thrice glorious will be the future if true to the heritage of our fathers. Let us emulate their virtues and imitate their zeal. Brethren of the ministry, let not the apostolic fervor of the Wesleys, Coke and Asbury, grow cold in your hearts. May the grand motto of our founder, "The world is my parish," be emblazoned upon our shields and stimulate our activities. And you, mothers and sisters of modern Methodism, remember the sublime endurance and lofty courage, and unwearied labors of Susannah Wesley, Mrs. Fletcher, Hester Ann Rogers and other pure spirits who add their share of glory to our early history. May your lives be so consecrated to God, and your prayers cheer on the brave column. Upon all, of every class and station, may they dwell a perpetual Pentecost, and "the Lord God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are and bless you as he has promised you."

The election in France gives the republicans in the Chambers 320, and the conservatives 210. This is a great gain for the cause of republicanism. The election gives a crushing blow to the monarchists. France has spoken, and she says by her votes, that she has had enough of personal government. She wants a republic. The election has sent dismay into the ranks of the three monarchial parties; the legitimist, the monarchist and the Bonapartist. The only bond of union between these is hatred to the Republic, but now that the Republic has the popular favor, each section is intent on looking after its own affairs. There seems to be a growing friendship between the republicans led by Gambetta, and the Monarchists. It is reported that sixteen of the latter senators are ready to unite with the republicans in opposing Marshal McMahon. If this is so, the crisis may be considered past, as the republicans will have enough votes to control the situation in spite of the opposition of McMahon and his Cabinet. In the mean time several papers are demanding that McMahon and his cabinet should resign, or that at least his cabinet should resign, and he should form a cabinet favorable to the republic.

Doings in Congress.

Nothing of importance has transpired in Congress the past week. Several bills have been introduced, but none passed. The chief interest centers in the Louisiana Senatorial contest. Messrs. Kellogg and Spofford are presenting their cases to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The Senate instructed the committee to go into a thorough investigation of the claims of each candidate. This means weeks of delay.

On Monday eight hundred and forty-five bills were introduced in the House.

They might be classified into some half dozen prominent subjects: The repeal of the resumption act; the remonetization of silver; the repeal of the bankruptcy law; the abolition of taxes on sales of tobacco by producers; the extension of pension laws to the South; the repeal of the test oath, and appropriations for works of internal improvements. Among the latter were bills appropriating $3,000,000 for the Mississippi levees and $1,000,000 for the Missouri river.

The committee is already at work and to-day (Tuesday) $1000 were forwarded.

The creoles and not a few colored people in the lower parts of the city are organising an American Party, as they call it. It is claimed not to be a resurrection of the old Know Nothing Party which was against all foreigners. Neither is it, they say, a branch of the American Alliance which is an anti-catholic association. Its purpose is declared to be to organize the American element in politics, so that it can secure its full representation in offices and party management. The principles of this new organization have not been promulgated. It claims to number already between three and four thousand.

Dr. Talmage's lay college, in Brooklyn, has already sent out eleven hundred students who have become city missionaries and lay evangelists.

The old Bible which Luther filled with foot-notes and comments, was sold recently, among other things belonging to the estate of the late Dr. Kutze, of Kothen, for the sum of $2,000. The Berlin Museum was the purchaser. It was published in 1540.

The Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., has issued bonds, which are offered for sale as follows: One hundred of the denomination of $1,000, bearing eight per cent interest; fifty of $500, bearing seven per cent interest; fifty of $300, bearing seven per cent interest; and four hundred and twenty of $100, bearing seven per cent interest—all with coupons attached, and interest paid semi-annually.

The Tennessee Conference of the Church South held its session at Edgefield, October 3d to 11th. Seven were admitted on trial, eleven into full connection, thirteen were ordained deacons, and twelve elders. There were reported: White members, 44,256; colored, 5; local preachers, 353; infants baptized, 816; adults, 2,571; Sunday-schools, 384; teachers, 2,879; scholars, 21,250; necessary for claimants, $3,000; collected, $2,144; foreign missions, $4,691; domestic, $2,751—total, $7,443.38.

According to Dr. J. P. Newman's book, Jerusalem has 36,000 inhabitants—15,000 Mohammedans, 13,000 Jews and 8,000 Christians. The Arabic is the popular language. The Jews speak Hebrew, and most of them German; Sephardim speak Spanish. There is hardly any commerce in the city.

From 200 to 300 delegates attended the recent triennial Congregational Council at Detroit, over which ex-Governor W. B. Washburn, of Massachusetts, presided. From the statistics reported we learn that there are in the Union 3325 Congregational Churches, (of which 1485 are in New England,) with a membership of 350,658; 2713 pastors in charge, and 405,092 Sabbath-school scholars. The gain since 1874 is 184 churches and 26,976 members. The annual church expenses amount to $4,000,000.

Seances Exposed in a Court.

A correspondent of the New York Sun, under date of Sept. 29th, gives the following account of some of the tricks of Spiritualists:

James A. Bliss and his wife gave seances at 1,027 Ogden street, Philadelphia, for about a year, charging an admission fee of $1. They are on trial for conspiracy for the purpose of swindling. To make the deception practicable, Bliss and a confederate, Ogden Harrison, constructed in the cellar a room in which the personators of spirits might hide and don the requisite costumes. From that apartment a stairway and a cleverly hidden trap door enabled them to enter the cabinet in the parlor in the main story, and in which Bliss was securely tied as a medium.

The principal witness for the prosecution was Harrision, the confederate, and his account of the swindle was exceedingly interesting. According to his testimony, the plan was matured about a year ago. Bliss had previously given seances on a small scale, with his wife as personator of an Indian princess; but, because of her foreign accent—she is Spanish—she was compelled to confine her talk to some kind of broken English. The Ogden street house was hired, and the mechanism for the seances put in. The opening night in this establishment was on Oct. 20th, 1876. Harrison then personated Capt. Davis, a privateer of the war of 1812. Mrs. Bliss represented Blue Flower, an Indian maiden, and a Persian dancing girl. Music was used to drown any noise that might be made in getting into and out of the cabinet, the lights were kept so low that the spectators could not see distinctly, and the performances were financially successful. In subsequent seances, the number and repertory of the company was increased. A Mrs. Evans and her daughter were engaged as personators.

"Miss Evans appeared as Billy the Bootblack," Harrison testified, "and used such expressions as 'Cheese it,' and 'Shine 'em up.' Mr. Lloyd P. Smith, of the Philadelphia Library, recognized Billy the Bootblack as the spirit of the boy he had known, and who was a great favorite of his. Mr. Bliss professed to be under control of Billy, Capt. Hodges, and Pat McCarthy, who spoke through him. Mrs. Evans was a princess. Three spirits came out at a time, sometimes four, represented by myself, Mrs. Bliss, Mrs. Evans, and Miss Evans. The spectators were generally kept away ten or twelve feet. As a Turk, I wore a black sack over my head, a black shawl, and a black muslin skirt. Mr. Bliss would tell the audience who the spirits were. We were informed inside what people were outside and what spirits were wanted. Mrs. Bliss appeared as Capt. Hodges, in black moustache and black side whiskers. He was the leader and the great chemist of the spirit world, and allowed only such spirits to appear as he wished. Capt. Hodges was a tall spirit, and Mrs. Bliss, in order to appear tall, stood on a piece of joist."

The depletion of the company by the withdrawl of the Evans family made the engagement of new partners necessary. Miss May Evans, a bright young woman who had been a performer in a small way in variety shows, was soon secured. She made her first appearance in a seance as Sister Agatha, a nun, and as a Quakeress. In the former character she recited a short Latin prayer, and in the latter she talked a little, using "thee" and "thou" judiciously. The words were written out for her by Evans. She was even trained to appear as the Virgin Mary.

The most successful of all the seances was one in which a believer's baby was christened by the supposed spirits. "It was a great time," said Harrison. Miss Snyder, dressed as the spirit Clara Wolf, held the child, and Mrs. Bliss, as an Indian, performed the ceremony.

Miss Snyder always went to and from the house slyly, so as not to be seen by the dupes, one of whom was a brother of the dead Clara whom she personated. In this character she talked often with Wolf, put her arms around him and kissed him with simulated sisterly affection; yet he did not discover the fraud. Nor was he suspicious when she asked him to lend money to one of the conspirators. Even after the fraud was exposed, he long refused to believe that he had been humbugged, but he was convinced at last when Miss Snyder showed him how she had enacted the part of his sister's spirit. He is a resident of Mount Union, Pa., but he spent much time and money in attendance at these seances in Philadelphia. So thoroughly had he become engrossed with the subject that his relatives in order to undeceive him had to get up a mock seance, in which Miss Snyder—who seems to have repented a little of her wickedness—illustrated the ways in which she had misled him. He was a witness in the trial.

One man was cured of his belief [illegible] more easily than Mr. Wolf. Mrs. Bliss, as the Indian maiden, [illegible] came out of the cabinet and talked to him. One night she put her face close to his and he [illegible] brandy on her breath. He [illegible] that spirits do [illegible]. As to the profits, [illegible] was fifty cents at the [illegible] and was soon raised to a [illegible] private seances were given [illegible] dollars each. There was quarrelling over the money, Bliss being accused by the others of taking more than his share.

The nature of the defense has not even been conjectured. Bliss is defiant in demeanor, and he will fight his "persecutors" to the end. He came from Boston, where he was a performer in seances and a lecturer on Spiritualism. The costumes and machiney used in the seances were exhibited in court.

Sunday School.

Nov. 11, 1877.—PAUL BEFORE AGRIPPA.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts 26: 6-20.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision."—19.

TOPIC.—A New Man in Christ Jesus.

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

The promise (6-8).—And now. So faultlessly have I lived according to their own standard, they can bring nothing against my life—only a mere charge against my faith. I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise, etc. The main accusation against Paul, that which excited their unrelenting hate and rage, was his assertion that Jesus had risen from the dead. The concealed reason of their antipathy to the assertion of his resurrection was, of course, that the fact proved that they had guiltily crucified the hope of Israel.

The persecution (9-11).—The confession—for it amounts to that—which he makes concerning his persecution of the saints, puts us in possession of the reasons of his savage treatment of them. 1. I verily thought with myself that I ought. He was, in a measure, at least, conscientious about it. He was a type of those to whom the Savior referred, when he said: "Whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service." John 16: 2. By far the greater share of the cruelty that has made heaven weep, in the persecution carried on in the name of religion, has been inspired by rage rather than urged by conscience. And the rage of Paul was extreme. It took full possession of him. He breathed out threatenings and slaughter. He was not satisfied with what he could do against them in Jerusalem, but was seized with such violent desire to exterpate these followers of Jesus of Nazareth off from the face of the earth, that he followed them with tiger persistency and insatiety unto cities as remote as Damascus. All of this is stated to Agrippa in order that he may see that such an one as Paul would not finally embrace this very faith without having sufficient reason for it.

The prostration (13-14).—In speaking to Agrippa, Paul's object was not to give an account, full even to the minutest details, but to put him in possession of all the facts needed to give him a clear understanding of the reason why he became a believer in Jesus of Nazareth, and a preacher of the gospel. To do this, it was not essential that he should tell him the very manner of his reception of the message, but only what the message was, and the one by whom it was given.

There are spiritual truths in this portion of the lesson that we can only hint at. 1. The exceeding brightness of the light. That dazzling splendor was the glory of our Lord. "Thine eye shall see the King in his beauty." 2. No sinner can stand before the Son whom he has offended. "We were all fallen to the earth." 3. God speaks to every man in a way that he can understand. He spoke to Paul in his own tongue. 4. He spoke with great compassion as well as reproof. Mark the tender cadence that the repetition of his name gives to the rebuke. "Saul, Saul," etc. 5. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me. The question to Saul was, not: "Why persecutest thou my disciples?" but: "Why persecutest thou me?" How sensitively close must be his relations with his children, when he can say: "He that toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his eye." Zec. 2: 8.

The purpose. (15-20.—Jesus had a purpose in thus arresting Paul on his destructive career. And it was not only that he himself might be saved, and the disciples be relieved from persecution by him, but, also, and chiefly, that he might be made as great a means of salvation as he had been of destruction. 1. He was to be a "minister"—a servant of the very gospel that he had so intensely tried to destroy. 2. He was to be a witness, specially, "of these things which thou hast seen!" He was not to shrink from telling the story of that wonderful manifestation of the Son God to him by the roadside, no matter how incredulously it should be received. And this was not all. He was to be a witness of "those things in which I will appear unto thee." He had the comfort, at the very first, that this was not the only time when God should manifest himself to him. The moment of conversion is not the only one when the Savior appears to his disciples. 3. He, at the beginning, also, received the assurance that he should be protected, both from his own people and from the Gentiles. It was that promise, therefore, that, hitherto, had made him invulnerable. This pledge, he declares (22) to king Agrippa, has been fulfilled.

4. His mission is more definitely stated in verse 18. It was (1) "to turn men from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God." He was (2) to turn them that they might receive forgiveness for their sins and an inheritance among those that were sanctified by the same faith that was in him. There are two things which no philosophy or scientific theory of the formation of matter can do for man. They can not forgive his sins, nor promise him an inheritance among the saints. Without the religion of Christ, one must forever be out of comfort with his conscience and uncertain of his future. It is the only thing that gives unfathomed peace of mind here, and that imparts new life to the world-weary with the thought of a glorious inheritance hereafter. And those consolations are altogether too precious to be given up.

The beach at Galveston is the largest and broadest in the world, extending twenty-five miles, fronting the unbroken side of the Gulf of Mexico on the south and east.

Married.

At Yazoo City, Miss., on the evening of October 18, 1877, by Rev. J. W. Dunn, Rev. Andrew Lemons, Pastor of Benton Circuit, to Miss Henrietta White, of Yazoo City.

DIED.

The two following notices were sent us by Rev. Jesse P. Price, of Brownsville, Tennessee:

Rev. Williamson Hays, age 78 years, departed this life on the 10th day of June, 1877, in full faith. He was born in Hillsboro North Carolina, the exact date is not known. He moved to Tennessee when a boy. He professed faith in Christ when very young, and had been preaching the gospel when he died for fifty years. He was ordained Deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church by Bishop M. Simpson, at Hundington, West Tennessee, October 3, 1869, and was sent to this circuit. He was not able to go to the Conference. His last words: "I am GOING HOME."

Benjamin Howell, aged 79 years, died on the 25th day of August, 1877. He was a Trustee of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He professed faith in Christ at 14 years of age, and lived a devoted Christian, and was much beloved by all. His last words to his wife were, "Do not grieve after me, but try to meet me in Heaven, where parting will be no more."

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. novl-1m.

"ITCHING PILES"—Is one of the most annoying diseases in the world, and all can find prompt and certain relief by the use of "Swayne's Ointment." The symptoms are moisture, like persperation, intense itching, particularly at night. Wm. P. Grove, U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va., writes: I suffered twenty years from this terrible disease, consulted many physicians, but found no permanent relief until I used Swayne's Ointment. It also cures tetter, pimples, all crusty, scaly, itchy skin diseases, leaving the skin clear and smooth without a blemish. Sent by mail to any address, on receipt of price, 50 cents a box. The potato crop of England is a complete failure, the tubors having been suddenly attacked with a malignant rot, which in almost a single day converts sound and healthy ones into a mass of putridity. It is with difficulty that enough can be saved for seed.

At the great Paris Exposition there will be given, for agricultural and industrial products collectively, 1000 grand prizes, 1000 gold, 4000 silver and 8000 bronze medals, and 8000 "honorable mentions," to pay the expense of all which the sum of $300,000 has been appropriated.

The statistician of the New York Produce Exchange estimates that the wheat crop of the United States this year amounts to 325,000,000 bushels, and the corn crop to 1,280-000,000 bushels, a vast increase over the crops of any preceding year in the history of thecountry.

The subterranean telegraph wires in Germany have proved highly satisfactory. The conductibility of the buried wire, instead of decreasing, has, on the contrary, somewhat increased, and no fault in the insulation has made itself apparent. It is believed that in the long run the buried wires will prove the cheapest, posts and insulators, constantly demanding renewal, are thus dispensed with.

The grand jury of the Court of Queen's Bench, sitting in Montreal, has been discharged without finding any indictments against the participants in the Orange riots last July, in which two men were killed. The Protestants are much incensed, and declare they never again will yield the right to march on the 12th of July.

Of the 515 French deputies actually elected, 314 are Republican, and 201 "Conservatives" of different types. In the last Chamber there were 366 Republicans, and 167 "Conservatives." While the Republican majority is thus reduced from 199 to 120, the Conservative or Monarchist element is not strong enough to be dangerous.

Gov. Hubbard, at the Belton Fair, said Texas is getting rich at the rate of $100,000,000 per annum. The taxable property of the State is now $350,000,000, against $250,-000,000 in 1876. This is progress with a vim. In 1880 it will be $700,-000,000, three millions of people and some twenty odd members of congress.

The exports from New York to foreign ports during the first week in October reached the large quantity of 1,280,000 bushels of wheat, 741,800 bushels of corn and 10,241 bushels of corn and barley, besides 25,000 bushels of flour. This large quantity of grain went out in 62 vessels, including the ocean steamers, though most of it was taken out by sailing vessels.

The South has had the Speakership of the House of Representatives for forty-six years, in the forty-four Congresses that have been held. The incumbents have been Macon, of South Carolina; Clay, of Kentucky; Cheeve, of South Carolina; Barbour, of Virginia; Stephenson, of Virginia; Bell, of Tennessee; Polk, of Tennessee; Hunter, of Virginia; White, of Kentucky; Jones, of Virginia; Boyd, of Kentucky; Cobb, of Georgia and Orr, of South Carolina.

There are four rates for vessels in the navy. The first rate includes those of 3,000 tons and upward, commanded by commodores and named for States of the Union. The second rate includes those between 2,000 tons and 3,000 tons, commanded by captains and named for rivers of the United States. The third rate includes all between 800 tons and 2,000 tons, commanded by commanders and called after the principal cities of the country. The fourth embraces all below 800 tons, commanded by lieutenant commanders and are named as the President directs.

The New York aquarium has secured a valuable prize in the giant devil-fish which the steamer Cortes brought from Newfoundland. The monster was driven ashore at Catalina, on the north shore of Trinity Bay, and being helplessly stranded it was captured alive, but survived its desperate struggles only a few minutes. It is one of the largest, if not indeed the very largest "cuttle-fish" ever caught, some of its dimensions reaching out to forty feet. This monster will probably be preserved in alcohol. It was brought to this country in brine.

This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. For sale by all druggists and country stores.

FOR A START!

As Sunday-school teachers are already on the lookout for the best helps to use in 1878, a plan is offered by which THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES can be taken for three months on trial at a very small cost. The Times is a 16 page weekly paper. Among the regular lesson writers during the present year, in addition to the editors, H. Clay Trumbull and George A. Peltz, have been Prof. Tayler Lewis, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, Rev Newman Hall, of London, and "Faith Latimer." Special articles on the lessons have also been given by many distinguished Bible students. The plans for 1878 include writers not inferior to these.

HOW TO GET IT. If you will send your name and post-office address, together with twenty-five cents, to the address given below, you will receive The Times every week for three months. This offer is only for new subscribers (persons who have not taken the paper within the last six months), the regular price being $2.15 a year. For seven cents additional, a specimen copy of the Scholars' Quarterly will be sent. Specimens of the Weekly Lesson Leaf sent free.

THE SCHOLARS' QUARTERLY (issued every three months) is likely to be far more widely used during next year than ever before. Its circulation during the last quarter reached 115,000 copies. A large share of the best conducted Sunday-schools throughout the country are now using it in place of the ordinary question book. Its editors are determined that no effort or expense shall be spared to keep it in advance of all the lesson helps for scholars. Every superintendent and teacher in the country should examine it before deciding upon lesson helps for next year.

ITS COST is 25 cents a year, or $25 for a hundred copies a year. Sent by mail without cost of postage to subscribers. Subscriptions taken for three or six months at the yearly rate; under 10 copies, three months, seven cents each. To supply YOUR CLASS would cost:—For five scholars, one year, $1.25; three months, 35 cents; for ten scholars, one year, $2.50; three months, 68 cents. If ordered by the year, they will be sent each quarter in ample time for use. The issue for the fourth quarter of this year (October, November, December) is now ready. Send seven cents for a specimen copy. Postage stamps may be sent in place of currency, if more convenient. Address, derstand that religion is an internal experience, and not simply a belief, or a system of forms. But the blessing of God upon his Word is leading many into a just conception, and a practical experience of heart religion. This prepares them to suffer persecutions patiently, and to die triumphantly. As illustrations of this, allow me to give two incidents: Two weeks ago, this evening, a woman came with tearful eyes to tell me that her son, a boy of nine years, had been stolen from her the day before. The circumstances were these: Three months before, her husband had abandoned her and the boy because they attend the Protestant services, and could not be persuaded to desist. He had, however, occasionally given her a dollar toward her support. On the day indicated they went to see him in the Reduction Works where he was employed. On going out the boy was detained and the owner of the works shut the door between the mother and the child, telling her to come the next day. She went but he refused her audience, saying that her boy was not there. They were not married by the civil law, only by the Catholic Church, and in such cases the law gives the mother the right to her children. So the day following we began legal action to recover the boy, but soon found we were fighting with the "power behind the throne," which in this country is the priesthood. Legal proceedings, slow everywhere, are terribly dilatory here. The result of the first three days was a fine imposed upon ourselves by a slight mistake of ours, and a fraudulent trick of the defence. A liberal lawyer volunteered his services and yesterday after nearly two weeks we secured an order for the delivery of the child to his mother. It had been a terrible trial to her, and she was almost insane from grief and anxiety, but it has proved a valuable lesson to her in faith. Day before yesterday she thought that all hope was about gone, as effort after effort had proved abortive. She said she went home almost wild with anguish, and a terrible burden on her breast. She began to pray for help to bear it, and suddenly she seemed to feel a blow on her breast, the burden was gone, light and peace shone in, and she felt sure that she would again have her child. She arose, came to see me, and then went to the lawyer, and gave some new information she had received, and the result was the restoration of her boy yesterday afternoon. Last night full of joy they came to give thanks for the part I had taken in his rescue.

The story of boy is no less interesting. The day that he was stolen, he had learned a promise to recite at the Promise Meeting of that week. Strange to say, the promise was this: "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2:10. He is a very timid child, and never had been separated from his mother. The next morning he was taken to the asylum, a Catholic institution for insubordination, a rosary put on his neck by the Curate, and the work of transformation into a Catholic begun. He says he cried a great deal at times; and then he would repeat his promise, and sing one of the hymns he had learned here and pray, and the Lord gave him peace in his heart. He prayed for patience, he says, because he [illegible] would get out in some [illegible] although he did not know [illegible]. But through it all, his promise was his great support. Shall [illegible] not say that the selection of [illegible] passage was Providential? [illegible] is not an argument in favor [illegible] teaching children in Bible [illegible]! A happier mother and child [illegible] sure I never saw. So much [illegible] grace to suffer persecution.

Now let us see dying grace exem[illegible]. This is one of the greatest [illegible] of the genuineness of a con[illegible] for many here who have [illegible] with the church, and op[illegible] it bitterly, not having found [illegible] religion in the hour of death, [illegible] the priest, and confess. We [illegible] value a true Christian [illegible]. A good sister of twenty-[illegible] years was struck down with [illegible]. She had lingered [illegible] growing worse and [illegible]. In our frequent visits she [illegible] of her hope of soon [illegible] until the week before [illegible] she [illegible] had no fear of death [illegible] to go [illegible] that she [illegible] to suffer the [illegible] evening [illegible] with her [illegible] reply, but he insisted on seeing her. Fortunately, soon after he entered, one of our good sisters dropped in much to the confusion of the priest. She told him to talk on, for she was of the same belief as the sick woman. But after directing her to confide only in the Most Holy Virgin, who would soon come to receive her, he left, not to return. The day of her death Mrs. C. was with her a large share of the day. When she went the dying woman was unconscious. Mrs. C. spoke to her and she rallied somewhat. "How are you to-day?" "A little better." "How is your spirit?" She opened her eyes, a bright light played over her countenance, and she answered buoyantly, "Well!" She soon fell again into unconsciousness, and talked rationally no more. But everything indicated a peaceful, happy death. It cannot but have its effect. The mother cheerfully consented to bury from our chapel, attended all the services and says she will come to church here. Upon some of the neighbors also, the effect is good, showing them that Protestants are not inhuman.

Thus the cause moves forward, gaining little by little in spite of persecution, and deepening all the while in vital force. We hope in God that the redemption of this people is not very far distant, and that by and by we shall meet a grand host of redeemed ones from Mexico on the other shore.

SAMUEL P. CRAVER.

GUANAJUATO, Oct. 11, 1877.

The Gospel in Heathendom.

BY REV. R. W. ALLEN.

The success of the Gospel in heathen lands is one of the most interesting facts before the American Church. Not a century since the leading missionary societies were organized; yet what achievements have they accomplished in the conversion of the heathen! Before the first century of the American Republic commenced the Church had done comparatively nothing in the missionary work. The oldest of the missionary societies, the English "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," originated in the Independent Parliament of 1648. The "Christian Knowledge Society" was organized in 1698; the principal object was to spread religious truth by means of books and tracts. The "Danish Society for sending Missionaries to India" was formed by Frederick IV., King of Denmark, in 1705. The "Moravian Missionary Society" was organized in 1732, which was the most efficient in the heathen world, but it had accomplished but little for its first fifty years—it had made a noble beginning. Up to nearly the commencement of the present century the true missionary spirit had scarcely been awakened in the Christian Church.

Rev. William Carey, of Northamptonshire, England, became divinely moved to labor for the conversion of the heathen, and was the founder of the "Baptist Missionary Society" in 1792. Three years later, in 1795, the "London Missionary Society" was organized; the "Church Missionary Society," of England, in 1800; the "Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews," in 1808; the "American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions," in 1810; the "Baptist Missionary Union," in 1814; the "Wesleyan Missionary Society," in 1817; the "Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church," in 1819; the "Missionary Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church," in 1820; the "American Presbyterian Board of Missions," in 1831; the "Southern Baptist Board," in 1845; the "Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," in 1846.

The first company that ever went to a foreign mission from this country sailed from Salem, Mass., July 19, 1812, consisting of Adoniram Judson, Samuel Newell, and their wives. On October 23, 1819, the first missionaries to the Sandwich Islands sailed from Boston—twenty-two in number—sent by the American Board. What has been wrought in the conversion of the heathen to Christ since 1812 and 1819! The results, as now spread before the Church, are wonderful, marvelous!

The modern missionary enterprise has been an extraordinary success. The heathen world is dotted all over with mission stations, from which Gospel light is radiating into the surrounding darkness; in it there are more than four thousand centers of Christian work, twenty-five hundred congregations, nearly three hundred thousand communicants of Christian Churches, and between one and two millions of nominal Christians. There are about sixteen thousand laborers, including foreign missionaries and native pastors and [illegible], acting under the various missionary boards in heathen lands. [illegible] the fields where these [illegible] are toiling for the Master! [illegible] more than three hundred islands [illegible] of the Pacific, in Northern and [illegible] Turkey, in Persia, in Hindostan, in Burmah, in China, in Madagascar, in South Africa, in Sierra Leone, and in South America, what multitudes have been brought to Christ?

The Sandwich Islands have become Christian, and have one of the largest Churches in the world, numbering 4500 members. The inhabitants of these islands were grossly savage fifty years ago. The Fiji Islands in 1835 were inhabited by a fierce, blood-thirsty race of cannibals. Now they are largely Christianized, and where their horrid rites were once performed 90,000 happy Christians meet every Sabbath to worship God. Greenland has been Christianized by the Moravians. In India and Burmah, where fifty years ago there was scarcely a representative of the Christian faith, there are now nearly 8000 missionaries and native teachers, 3500 mission stations, and a membership of 80,000 converts! What a work for Christ since Judson entered Burmah! The Friendly Islands, fifty years ago, were savage, and full of dark superstition and cruelty, but now number 30,000 Christians.

On the Western Coast of Africa, once the slave market of the world, there are 100 organized Churches, with a membership of 157,000. In South Africa, among the Kaffirs, under the labors of the Rev. William Taylor, a most wonderful work of grace has been experienced, in which some 7000 of these degraded heathen gave good evidence of having passed from death unto life. In Sierra Leone there are 50,000 Christians. China is opening wonderfully to the Gospel; more than forty of its walled cities and about 400 of its villages are now occupied as mission stations, and nearly 12,000 converts have been received into the Christian Church. Japan is yielding to religious influence in a most wonderful manner. It seems almost ready to embrace Christianity. In Madagascar there are nearly 500,000 Christians, including the queen and her prime minister, and about 700 Churches. There is a most extraordinary movement among the Jews in Northern Africa. At Oran, in Algeria, the Jews and Jewesses crowd a Christian temple, inquiring after the truth as it is in Jesus—a scene not witnessed before since they crucified the Lord of glory.

In Catholic countries Protestant Christianity is rapidly advancing. In Italy, Spain, Mexico, South America, and France, the prospects for Protestant missions are most encouraging. Within a few months a work has commenced in France that promises great results. Brahminism and Buddhism in the heathen world are declining; so is Mohammedanism. The world is thrown open to the Gospel, and throughout heathendom there is a general movement in favor of Christianity. Never before was there such an opportunity to take the world for Christ. What a prospect before the Christian Church! The world has been placed within her grasp. Will she take it? She must do it, or fail in her great mission. Now is her time. All of the great movements of the age and openings of Providence say, "Now is the time to gather the harvest of the world." The beseeching, earnest appeals for the Gospel throughout heathen lands say to her, "Delay not, but hasten to the work." The dark, wretched millions for whom Jesus died are perishing. O, hasten to their rescue!—N. Y. Advocate.

A World on Fire.

The solar system is in the mighty hand of its great Master; nevertheless the world of men are in frequent, serious alarms for its safety. Skilled science shares in this alarm. The idea of a permanent, stable system is abandoned by scientists. Indeed it is only from scientific sources that this alarm originates. Never were the heavens scanned so closely, and all changes therein so carefully noted as now. The penetrating eye of the telescope, and the searching power of the spectroscope are incessantly fastened on the stars. Away in the blue depths, stars are seen to vary, to come and go; anon new stars flash out with startling brilliancy, and then they mysteriously grow dim. Some that are just visible, suddenly blaze forth in an extraordinary manner, exhibiting every appearance of a fierce conflagration, and then presently resume their former dimness. Perhaps no changes in the wide firmament so puzzle and perturb science, as do these changeable and temporary stars. Of variable stars, there are said to be no less than one hundred and forty-six instances. From a speck in size, they will increase fifty and a hundred-fold; then diminish, or entirely go out; some of them very periodically and systematically, others seemingly without law. Astronomers look on them as huge bonfires,—funeral piles of dead worlds. All is mystery!

But the temporary stars—whence do they come from? What are they? The first ever catalogued was B. C. 134. Then in A. D. 389, in 945, 1264, 1572, 1604, 1670, 1848, 1866 others were seen. On November 24, 1876, the tenth of these strange stars was discovered. When first seen it was of the third magnitude, growing brighter every hour. In January, 1877, it was but a star of the eighth magnitude. The variable star of 1572 assumed such brilliancy that it could be seen by the naked eye in broad daylight. That of 1848 is now only one three-thousandth part as bright as in May of that year. That star of May 12, 1866, suddenly in two days flamed out from a star of the eighth magnitude to one of the second, having in that short time grown eight hundred fold brighter. It never changed its position; in a few weeks it took on its former dimness. What alarming and terrific changes must take place in these distant bodies! The spectroscope showed "white hot hydrogen" in the face of this last-mentioned star. Hence all such stars are proved to be burning worlds.

But the fuel for such a quick and awful bonfire—what is it? Here is one of the darkest mysteries of the starry gulf. Men know not even what fuel feeds the ceaseless fires of our sun. But it is conjectured to be meteoric and cometary matter flung violently into it. Enormous quantities of hydrogen would be required to cause a star on fire to blaze up six hundred fold in forty-eight hours. One theory of variable stars is that some huge wandering comet is drawn in upon a central sun and swallowed up, causing it to blaze in gigantic flames. The thought is tremendous. What if a comet should, with electric speed, some day flash into our sun! It never yet has occurred to our knowledge. But the monster comet of February, 1843, grazed the solar surface, so near did it come. Its haste was fearful, its brilliance great, its tail the longest on record. In a little less than two hours it went half way around the sun, moving at the awful velocity of 366 miles a second! Carbon, vapor and hydrogen are in the composition of comets, and the colliding of some of these "wandering stars" with a distant sun, is the most probable cause of such blazing stars as the ten we have mentioned. The tremendous collision of a comet and sun would wrap the latter all in intenser flame! Says Professor Lewis Swift in a recent letter: "May not the same fate befall our sun? Increase its heat and light but twofold and every creature on the earth would die; increase it eight hundred fold like the star of 1866, and a fulfillment of Peter's prophecy would be realized: "The elements shall melt with fervent heat." Thus do men's hearts fail them with fear, looking after these things sure to come on the earth. The predicted conflagration of our globe will come. Not to be in constant readiness is madness. In Christ only is there safety.—Dr. T. Taylor.

Enthusiasm.

"It would be a sad whim in the art of metallurgy if men should take up the notion that a white heat is not useful in annealing metals; and so it is a sad whim in social science when men think that the white heat we call a religious awakening is not useful in annealing society. Twice the nation has been annealed in the religious furnace just previously to being called on to perform majestic civil duties. You remember that the thirsty, seething, tumultuous, incalculably generative years from 1753 to 1783, or from the opening of the French war to the close of the Revolution, were preceded by what is known to history as the Great Awakening in New England in 1740 under Whitefield and Edwards. So, too, in 1857, when we were on the edge of our civil war, the whole land was moved religiously, and thus prepared to perform for itself and for mankind the sternest of all the political tasks that have been imposed in this century upon any civilized people. But our short American story is no exception to the universal experiences of social annealing.

"Discussing the subtler meaning of the Reformation, Carlyle says: 'Once risen into this divine white heat of temper, were it only for a season and not again, a nation is thenceforth considerable through all its remaining history. What immensities of dross and crypto-poisonous matter will it not burn out of itself in that high temperature in the course of a few years? Witness Cromwell and his Puritans, making England habitable even under the Charles Second terms for a couple of centuries more. Nations are benefited, I believe, for ages by being thrown once into divine white heat in this manner.' —Carlyle, History of Frederick, vol. i., book iii., chap. viii.

"That is the historical law for nations, for cities, for individuals. Do not be afraid of a white heat; it is God's method of burning out dross.

"Standing where Whitefield stood on the banks of the Charles, a somewhat unlettered but celebrated evangelist years ago, face to face with the culture of Harvard, was accused of leading audiences into excitement. 'I have heard,' said he, in reply, 'of a traveler, who saw at the side of the way a woman weeping and beating her breast. He ran to her and asked, "What can I do for you? What is the cause of your anguish?" "My child is in the well! My child is in the well!" With swiftest dispatch assistance was given, and the child rescued. Further on this same traveler met another woman, wailing also and beating her breast. He came swiftly to her, and with great earnestness asked, "What is your trouble?" "My pitcher is in the well!" Our great social and political excitements are all about pitchers in wells, and our religious excitements are about children in wells.' A rude metaphor, you say, to be used face to face with Harvard; but a distinguished American professor, repeating that anecdote in Halle, on the Saale, in Germany yonder, Julius Muller heard it and repeated it in his university, and it has been used among devout scholars all over Germany. Starting here on the banks of the Charles, and listened to, I presume, very haughtily by Cambridge and Boston, it has taken root in a deep portion of German literature as one of the classical illustrations of the value of a white heat.—Joseph Cook.

Thanksgiving.

By the President of the United States of America, a proclamation:

The completed circle of summer and winter, seed time and harvest, has brought us to the accustomed season at which religious people celebrate with praise and thanksgiving the enduring mercy of Almighty God. This devout and public confession of the constant dependence of man upon the Divine Father for all the good gifts of life, and health and peace and happiness, so early in our history made the habit of our people, finds in a survey of the past year new grounds for its joyful and grateful manifestation. In all blessings which depend upon benignant seasons, this has indeed been a memorable year. Over the wide territory of our country, with all its diversity of soil and climate and products of the earth, has yielded a bountiful return to the labor of the husbandman. The health of the people has been blighted by no prevalent or widespread diseases; no great disasters of shipwreck upon our coasts or to our commerce on the seas have brought loss and hardship to merchants and mariners and clouded the happiness of the community with sympathetic sorrow. In all that concerns our strength and peace and greatness as a nation; in all that touches the permanence and security of our government and the beneficent institutions on which it rests; in all that affects the character and disposition of our people and tests our capacity to enjoy and uphold the equal and free condition of society, now permanent and universal throughout the land, the experience of the last year is conspicuously marked by the protecting providence of God, and is full of promise and hope for the coming generations.

Under a sense of these infinite obligations to the Great Ruler of times and seasons and events, let us humbly ascribe it to our own faults and frailties if, in any degree, that perfect concord and happiness, peace and justice, which such great mercies should diffuse through the hearts and lives of our people, do not altogether and always and everywhere prevail. Let us with one spirit and with one voice lift up our praise and thanksgiving to God for His manifold goodness to the land, and his manifest care of our nation.

Now, therefore, I, Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, do appoint Thursday, the 29th day of November next, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly recommend that, withdrawing themselves from secular cares and labors, the people of the United States do meet together on that day in their respective places of worship, there to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for His mercies, and to devoutly beseech their continuance.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

R. B. HAYES.

We have no right, for the sake of mere display, and often a vulgar display at that, to absorb the productive industry that ought to be employed in increasing the culture and conveniences of life. It is a trite remark, but as true and sad as trite, that women have utterly thrown away the advantages for leisure and culture which the invention of the sewing machine offered them. For every stitch it saved, fashion has added ten to the family sewing.—J. B. Narsh.

I don't like to talk much with people who agree with me. It is amusing to coquette with an echo a little while, but one soon tires of it. —Carlyle.

The Alabama Conference.

The Alabama Conference met, on the 18th of October, at Andrews Institute, DeKalb county, Bishop Harris presiding; J. T. Blakemore, secretary. The year has been marked by considerable prosperity, showing an encouraging increase in membership. The fraternal spirit has greatly advanced in that section during the past year or two. The brothers Roberts and Col. Newman, prominent members of the Southern Church, laid the Bishop and the Conference under obligations for favors cheerfully and cordially bestowed. The "visiting" brethren are also indebted to Mr. Collins, of Collinsville, for entertainment in going to and returning from the Conference, a special favor to them, as the trains reached there late at night and left before day in the morning. If our brethren in this Conference will come up to the support of the ministers and the institutions of the Church, financially, the work will move forward with increased rapidity.

Andrews Institute is doing more than could be expected without buildings. Preparations are being made for the erection of a suitable structure, and we trust that the time is not distant when ample accommodations will be provided for this school. It is of great importance to the work, and having been started on a self-supporting basis it is easy to keep it out of debt for current expenses and improvements from time to time, and in a few years make this one of the strong points in our educational system of the South. The doings of the body have not yet come to hand, but may be looked for next week.

The following are the appointments for the coming year:—

Lebanon District, J. J. Brasher, P. E.

Scottsboro, T. S. Rains.
Maynor's Cove, J. B. Loveless.
Sand Mountain, J. B. Miller.
Marshall, L. Bowers.
Lebanon, J. E. M'Cain.
Galesville, Peter Groover.
Edwardsville, J. M. Bowman.
Wedowee, to be supplied.
Ashland, J. N. Gibbs.
Terrapin, J. P. M'Gee.
Coosa and Barnesville, H. W. Lawley.

J. T. Blakemore, Principal of Andrews Institute and member of Lebanon quarterly conference.

W. P. Miller, Colporteur of the American Bible Society and member of the Lebanon quarterly conference.

West Ala. Dist., J. L. Freeman, P. E.

Murphree's Valley, T. R. Parker.
Irondale and Village Springs, J. B. Parrott, J. Cole.
Rocky Mount, J. W. Jones.
Hurricane Creek, J. C. Powell.
North River, C. C. Burson.
Ballard and Cedar Creek, J. A. Johnson.
Lipsey, James M. Morton.
Winston, D. S. Lowrey.
Sulphur Springs, J. R. Johnston.

South Ala. Dist., N. Baggett, P. E.

Gravella, T. Ansley.
Rose Hill, J. B. Ausley.
New Tabernacle, J. G. Johnson.
Yellow River, R. M. Kinsey.
Molino, H. S. Cleghorn.

The benevolent collections were as follows: Missionary $34,05; Church Extension $29 80; Episcopal Fund $3 70.

Thy Duty Done.

A Presbyterian minister tells the following: He was at one time pastor of a church in a town where the richest and every way most prominent man was notoriously a neglecter of religion, and openly hostile to the ministers. Seeing the old man in his carriage before a store in the place one day, he felt a strange impulse to go near and join himself to the chariot, and ask the liberty of visiting him that he might preach the Savior. Fearing a scene, be refrained, and was conscience-smitten. Six weeks latter he met the carriage on the street again, and the impulse was renewed, and the same words suggested. He immediately consulted one of his judicious deacons, who advised him not to visit him. He would be driven from the door—there would be a scandal, and he would become an object of derision. But he could not rest. He felt it was God calling him "to go near and join" the godless old man, and in disobedience to advice, the next day he approached the stately mansion trembling. He saw the old man, and was seen by him. The door was opened. He expected insult. Instead, two trembling hands were extended in welcome, and the strange words uttered: "I have been looking for a visit from you for six weeks. I have been longing to know more about the Lord I have so long rejected." The wife and daughter were called in, and there he "preached unto them Jesus," and all three soon afterward believed, and "went on their way rejoicing." When one is prompted by the Spirit to speak, it is safe to hope and believe that the Spirit is prompting to hear.

Southwestern.

39 Natchez St., New Orleans, La.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1877.

TWO MONTHS FREE.

Now is the time for all our preachers to begin the canvass for subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN for 1878. We make this liberal proposition: for two dollars CASH we will send the SOUTHWESTERN from November 1, 1877, to January 1, 1879, we paying the postage. This gives the paper two months free.

Will all our pastors please read this to their congregations, and begin the canvass at once? Who will send us the first cash list for 1878? Address Nelson & Phillips, Lock Box B, New Orleans.

New Subscribers.

We are already receiving some good lists of new subscribers for 1878, and the indications are favorable that the canvass the next few weeks will be vigorous and successful.

We ask that all the preachers will go to work at once and push the canvass. Two dollars pays for the SOUTHWESTERN for a year and all who subscribe now, get the paper free the remainder of 1877 and during all of 1878. Our terms are cash in advance. Address

NELSON & PHILLIPS,
Lock Box B, New Orleans.

To the Texas Preachers.

The four Texas Conferences meet within a month at Dallas, Waco, Houston and Jefferson. The editor of the Southwestern expects to be at these Conferences, and will have the accounts of all the preachers, and the agents expect every preacher to be ready to settle his account. We trust there will be no failures in this matter. By resolution of the [illegible] Conference, when preachers allow their accounts to go beyond Conference without settlement, [illegible] no more credit.

If you do not send lists of new subscribers before, do not fail to bring them with you to Conferences.

The Texas lead off grandly in the [illegible].

Post office address of Rev. Wm. [illegible] is changed from Lebanon, [illegible], to Mobile, Alabama.

The Sabbath Day a Moral and Religious Necessity.

Remarking upon the Sabbath, we have already shown that it is a physical, social and intellectual necessity. We now remark that the Sabbath is a moral and religious necessity.

To the church which is the organized means for the promotion of truth this necessity is manifest. It gives a fixed day on which the interests of Christ's kingdom demand supreme attention. Without this fixed day, nothing that would be systematic or aggressive for Christ could be effected. That which may be done at any time never is done at all. So if men were left to set apart time as holy to the service of God the result would be that no time would be set apart. Business, pleasure, or the demands of friends would interfere, and there would be no Sabbath. If some did set apart certain days in the week, or certain hours in day for God's service, they could not use that time as desired, because of the liability to constant annoyance from those who had set apart for a like purpose, other hours or days, or more probably, those who could find no time at all for God. At best, without a fixed day, there could be no uniformity, which in the end means no Sabbath.

Another point. The very fact of the same day being observed by all nations, and in all time, by God's people, gives to the Sabbath a dignity and grandeur, that it could in no other way have. Man is a social being, not simply in the sense of desiring society for daily intercourse, but in a broader and grander sense. Every man feels that in some way he is a part of the universal race, and that whatever interests the race, interests him; and that whatever the race assents to commands his respect. Hence, the power that the Sabbath as a day of rest and spiritual profit holds over even wicked and depraved men.

Beyond the fact that it affords a definite and uniform time in which the Church can labor for Christ, and in which the world is called to give heed to duty, the Sabbath is a moral and religious necessity, in a broader sense. In its very nature it is a friend to virtue and a foe to sin. Irrespective of a definite professing of Christ, which it is intended to help to effect, a man who conscientiously observes the Sabbath, by abstaining from all work and giving his thoughts to the study of moral topics, will be a better man: while to persist in breaking the Sabbath tends to make men worse. Sabbath-breaking goes hand in hand with every form of vice, and most frequently is the first step taken toward moral ruin.

It is said that a certain merchant long accustomed to observe human nature used to say: "When I see one of my clerks riding out for pleasure on the Sabbath—on Monday I dismiss him. Such a one cannot be trusted." The philosophy of this remark is that any man who will publicly violate a command of God, will be much more likely to do wrong privately.

Of the criminals in the Massachusetts State prison, 89 out of 100 are said to have been habitual Sabbath-breakers. Of 1335 who have been inmates of another prison, only 82 claimed to have been in the habit of observing the Sabbath. Dr. Edwards, a man who has had charge of more than 100,000 prisoners, and has taken pains to ascertain the cause of their crimes, says, "he does not recollect a single case of capital offense, where the party had not been a Sabbath-breaker, and generally this was the first step." With reference to prisoners of all classes, he affirms that "nineteen-twentieths have neglected the Sabbath."

Our large cities are proverbial for their wickedness in proportion as their Sabbaths are desecrated. Those dens of infamy, such as [illegible] and houses of prostitution [illegible] Sunday is [illegible] day and in proportion [illegible] Sunday [illegible] and if [illegible] by law, is crime [illegible]. We have proof in the [illegible] Sabbath Committee [illegible] began in [illegible] opposed by [illegible] Sabbath-breaking. Here are the results as given by the police reports. "The arrests for intoxication, disorder and crime on Sunday, during 18 months of the period preceding the agitation of the Sabbath question exceeded those of Tuesday (taken as the average of Wednesdays) by 25 per cent. During the 29 months following the Tuesday's arrests exceeded those of Sunday's by 40 per cent., or a relative change of 65 per cent. The comparison of the actual results with those which would have followed had Sabbath-desecration continued without restraint, will show a saving of 13,823 cases of vice and crime on the Sundays of 29 months as the fruits of this beneficent reform."

Sabbath-breaking and intemperance are closely allied. This is easily accounted for. There is a prevalent idea that alcoholic drinks aid in giving strength to the weary body, and as the time for rest is given to work, the demand for stimulants is considered imperative. Once begun, the habit is soon formed, and a drunkard's grave and hell are the result. To prove this, we have but to recall a fact or too. Railroad corporations are proverbial for their disregard of the Sabbath. So too, railroad men almost everywhere, as a rule, drink more or less. Go through this city on Sunday morning. Stop at the street railway stations, on the levee when work is being done; go where merchandise is offered for sale; enter the hundreds of business houses and offices where every Sabbath, employers and employees are found reading or writing letters, or posting their books, and as a rule those found in these places drink more or less. Their first sin was Sabbath-breaking, and this persisted in is leading them from bad to worse.

The Sabbath is a Moral and Religious Necessity—proved by its positive benefits in promulgating truth, and also by the fact that as it is violated, communities and men are wicked and depraved.

Oliver P. Morton.

United States Senator Morton died, after a lingering illness, at his residence in Indianapolis, November 1, at 5:30 P. M. His last moments are thus described in the telegraphic dispatches:

Before five o'clock it became evident that he had entered upon his last hours on earth. He had rested the greater portion of the day in a half lying and half sitting position; as he grew weaker the supporting pillows were withdrawn, so that he lay prone upon the bed.

The silence in the room was unbroken except by an occasional question to the dying man. Once when the Senator exclaimed: "I am dying," his sister-in-law, Mrs. Holloway, inquired: "You are not afraid to die, Oliver?" He indicated "No," by swaying his head. Soon after, a similar exclamation, question and answer passed between him and Dr. Thompson. At ten minutes past five o'clock he exclaimed: "I am dying, I am worn out," and these were his last words. From this on, it was difficult to discover that life remained.

On the doctor's announcement, "He is going," the gaze of his wife and son became fixed on the face of the husband and father, with now and then a piteous look of inquiry toward the doctor, until his further announcement, "It is over." The widow clasped her sons to her, exclaiming quietly but in tones never to be forgotten, "My darling boys." The friends withdrew, leaving them for a time, when they were tenderly led from the room.

The Senator was fifty-four years old. His body lay in state on the Sabbath, and many thousands filled the city, being brought by the special trains which ran on each of the several railroads centering in Indianapolis. All day a stream of humanity poured by the catafalque, on which lay the corpse, viewing for the last time the remains of Indiana's greatest son. The funeral services were held in Roberts Park M. E. Church, conducted by Rev. Prof. S. K. Hashour, the Senator's preceptor, and Mrs. Morton's former pastor, assisted by Revs. J. B. Cleaver, Henry Day and J. H. Bayliss. He was buried in Crown Hill Cemetery. The funeral was attended by committees from the Senate and House of Representatives, and a great concourse of people, among whom were many civil and military associations.

Senator Morton first came prominently before the nation as Governor of Indiana during the war. He was one of the men on whom Lincoln relied for advice and resources in the darkest hours of this Republic, and while the Republic lives the name of Morton will be gratefully perpetuated. While he had not the elements of a broad statesmanship, he was a man of marvelous energy and tact. The general opinion that he was a bitter partisan does him great injustice. Many of his most intimate personal friends were among his political opponents. His late expressions on the efforts of reconciliation toward the South by President Hayes indicate his freedom from feelings of resentment against the South. His course since the war in standing so firmly for the rights of the colored people and for the proper reconstruction of the South was prompted by convictions of duty. How well he labored may be judged from the fact that the whole South, now Democratic, is using every effort to make the nation understand that it accepts all the provisions of the reconstruction laws, and will guard scrupulously all the rights of the freedmen.

Senator Morton stood like a rock for what he believed to be right. Whatever his enemies said of him they never doubted his sincerity. He was an honest man. In all the vast transactions, involving the outlay of millions, he was never accused of dishonestly appropriating a cent. With sincerity of purpose, honesty as a habit, and with a diligence that knew no rest, and a tact and boldness that commanded resources and compelled obedience, it is not strange that Senator Morton's leadership in the great party which saved and reconstructed the Republic, should be so long acknowledged and followed. A great man has fallen. His wisdom, his logic, his leadership will be missed from the counsels of the nation.

President Hayes, on the second instant, issued a proclamation lamenting the death of the distinguished Senator, and closed by saying: "The several executive departments will be closed on the day of his funeral, and appropriate honors should be paid to the memory of the deceased statesman by the whole nation."

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Kentucky.

The following extract is taken from the Central Methodist, of Sept. 22, a paper published at Catlettsburg, Ky., in the interest of the M. E. Church, South:

"At the recent session of the Kentucky Conference, three ministers of the Northern Church, two from Kentucky, were applicants for admission, one of them a fine scholar, able preacher, successful educator, and of great personal popularity. While we do not seek to induce ministers of other churches to cast in their lot with us, yet those who are moved by a sincere, honest desire to labor where they can accomplish the largest amount of good, and are in hearty accord with our doctrines and discipline, are always welcome, and will find a hearty reception. Excepting on the border, Northern Methodism in Kentucky is so manifestly a failure, that all further efforts to maintain its organization is next to criminal, since the means and labor expended are not only sacrificed, but by fostering and keeping alive sectional animosities, personal piques are engendered, and the cause of Christ suffers damage. Such are our honest convictions."

We have but a word to say concerning the two ministers from Kentucky, who sought admission to the conference of the M. E. Church, South. If they believed that they could be more useful in that church than in the M. E. Church, we cannot see that they committed any serious offence, in presenting themselves for admission. The time may come when these transfers between these two great denominations shall be much more frequent than at the present time.

But we call special attention to that portion of the extract which we have printed in italics, and also to what follows. It is not correct to speak of the M. E. Church, as the Northern Church. It is limited in its field of operations, by no real or imaginary geographical lines. Its mission is a godly one; it proposes to carry the Gospel to as many as can be brought within the reach of its influence.

But let us notice what the M. E. Church has done in Kentucky, during the last ten years, as that State is specially referred to, in the above extract. In 1866 we had 5,795 members, 1,001 probationers, raised for benevolent purposes $675.22, and had church property valued at $76,450. Ten years later, in 1876, we had 16,512 members, 3,928 probationers, church property valued at $445,514, and raised for benevolent collections, $5,675.76. According to our mathematics, the M. E. Church is not "manifestly a failure," either on the border or in the interior.

In addition to the above figures, we have in the Lexington Conference of the M. E. Church, in Kentucky, over 8,000 members and probationers, church property worth $85,000, and raised for benevolent purposes, $500.00. We also have a large number of German members throughout the State, who are counted in the Central German M. E. Conference. And yet, in the face of these facts and figures, with marked evidences of growth in every direction, the Central Methodist announces to its readers that "it is next to criminal to maintain the M. E. Church in Kentucky." To us this is very strange logic.

We do not ask the M. E. Church, South, to withdraw from Indiana, Illinois, Colorado, California, simply because it may be weaker in these places than our own church. Why should the editor of the Central Methodist raise this question of territory, at this late day, when it is generally known that the action of the distinguished commissioners from both churches, did not contemplate the withdrawal of our church from Kentucky, any more than it called for the abandonment of California by the M. E. Church, South? Neither church as a body should be held responsible for the erratic performance of one or two of its ministers or members. The ministers in the Kentucky Conference of the M. E. Church, are as faithful, earnest and devoted a set of men as can be found in any conference. The statement, therefore, is certainly very unkind, that our church is responsible for "the personal piques that are engendered," we are laboring in the spirit of the Master for the salvation of the people, and desire no controversy with our brethren of the Church, South, concerning old questions, which we believe should not be raised in this day of good feeling between us.

We are happy to believe that very few of our brethren of the M. E. Church, South, in Kentucky, are in sympathy with the sentiments expressed in the above extract.

A Voice From China.

Last May there was a General Conference of Protestant Missionaries in Shanghai, China. Among other things discussed were the topics of opium and the division of fields of labor.

Opium smoking was condemned as a vice highly injurious, physically, morally and socially. The opium trade injures China, Great Britain and all the countries engaged in it, and is the most formidable obstacle to the cause of Christianity. The Conference prays for the suppression of the trade except when necessary for medicinal purposes. The Conference recognized the great difficulties in the way of suppressing the trade, but believed that in this as in all cases, nothing could be politically right that was morally wrong.

As to the division of fields of labor in China, the Conference took the truly christian and fraternal ground, that in the great work of christianizing China the work should be considered as one by all denominations, and that where churches have missions side by side they should help one another, and where new fields are to be occupied, the matter should be arranged by mutual consultation.

This voice from China to the Christian world has an exceedingly rich melody. It speaks of organized christian forces in that far off land, and tells us that sectarianism is lost in the great desire to save the heathen.

The Holston Conference at its late session appointed a committee on conference relations, consisting of J. J. Manker, N. G. Taylor, J. M. Durham, B. Christ and J. F. Spence. To this committee all cases of members of the conference on the Supernumerary or Superannuated lists are to be referred. Inquiry is to be made whether these relations to conference have been abused, in any case or not. The discipline says: "A supernumerary preacher is one who, because of impaired health, is temporarily unable to perform effective work. He may receive an appointment, or be left without one, according to the judgment of the Annual Conference." This relation has been abused in many conferences, and men are often assigned to it for other reasons than those of "impaired health." This action of the Holston Conference is wise and will relieve the presiding elders of a delicate and difficult duty, and enable the Conference to have all the facts in each case so as to act understandingly.

Goliad, Texas, District Conference.

Our District Conference commenced at Goliad, October 16th. It was one of the most interesting sessions I have ever attended. Nearly all of the ministers were present and in good spirits. Their reports indicated that they were doing good and faithful service in their respective fields of labor. Rev. P. Johnson preached the opening sermon, followed by myself. Presiding Elder Gregory gave the Conference a most excellent and fatherly address upon the subject of the prompt and faithful discharge of duty. Discussions upon various questions, arising in the transaction of business, proved very interesting. Especially was this the case in matters pertaining to church government, showing a most commendable desire on the part of the brethren to acquire a proper knowledge of the administration of discipline. The Sabbath was a day of joy and blessing to us. In the morning we attended first the Sunday school, which we found to be a very interesting and flourishing one—Chas. Whidby, superintendent and J. Johnson, assistant. At the eleven o'clock service Rev. H. Swan preached, and at three in the afternoon Rev. Mack Henderson. At night a missionary sermon was preached by Elder Gregory, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to near one hundred communicants. Before the close of the service penitents were invited to the altar, and a number having come forward our brethren spent with them a closing season of prayer, preparatory to their separation on next morning for their different fields of labor. We are grateful to our friends of Goliad for their hospitable entertainment of the members of Conference.

B. F. SMITH.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Frank Golden, Martinsville, Miss., says: "At our camp meeting there were thirteen conversions and eight accessions to the church. My work is spiritually in good condition."

Rev. J. Cannon, Carthage, Miss., says: "We have just closed a meeting in which there were eight conversions and thirteen accessions to the church. Pray for us."

Rev. C. Regester, Houma, La., reports an increase in membership during last quarter of fifteen, and some substantial improvements made in the church building.

Rev. L. L. Shumport, Winona, Mississippi, says: "At a meeting just closed, there have been fifteen conversions and twenty-one accessions to the church. Our church members are greatly encouraged and strengthened."

Rev. R. W. Overton reports that Plum Street Church, Carrollton, Louisiana, is doing well. On Sunday, October 28, he administered the communion to about sixty, and baptised six by immersion. Eight were received in full connection. Several Baptist people partook of the Lord's Supper with their Methodist brethren.

Rev. W. N. G. Lipscomb, Liberty, Mississippi, writes: "In a recent protracted meeting there were two conversions and twenty-five accessions to the church. Our Sunday-school numbers forty scholars, and nearly all of them are members of the church. The membership has increased since we have been on this work from thirty to one hundred and twenty-five, and they are nearly free from debt. The Lord has been very gracious to us."

Rev. Perry Hall, China Grove circuit, La., says: "We have no church building on this work, hold services in private houses, or at one appointment in a brush arbor. At the latter place a lot has been donated to us, and our people have undertaken the work of building a church. Although we labor under many disadvantages the Lord blesses us, and a number of souls have been converted.

Rev. M. Adams, Presiding Elder of the Meridan District, Mississippi Conference reports that the past four months have been filled with revival services throughout the District. He reports the following accessions by the different pastors during the second and part of the third round: H. L. Hessday 17; L. Clayton 45; M. Brown 48; H. Wyatt 35; A. Peebles 12; P. Jamison 75; S. Doby 85; H. Davenport 21; O. Galespie 25; A. R. Sanders 14; W. McDonald 22; N. Cannon 34; J. Cannon 10; W. D. Simms 30; D. W. Maddox 125; L. Been 40; S. Williams 26; R. Williams 20; J. Mosby 60; P. C. Clemens 25; J. W. Johnson 55; H. Caruthers 81; D. Moore 28; J. Eames 10; D. D. Goodwin 4; W. Frank 8; G. W. Barney 23. Three churches have been built and dedicated this year. Rev. G. W. Barney and his congregation and friends at Macon have succeeded in buying ten acres of ground for a cemetery. The ground cost $160 cash, and is deeded to our trustees, in Macon.

Rev. A. M. Gregory, Waco, Texas, writes: "On this work during the year there have been sixty-five conversions and eight accessions to the church. At one of my appointments there have been ten accessions in past few days. Our Sunday schools are well attended. At a point five miles south of this our brethren have just completed a very nice little church 24 by 32 feet, called New Zion. It cost $250 in addition to the labor contributed. One of the stewards, Bro. Kyle Webster, was particularly active in the erection of this church, aiding by a liberal cash donation, and then by hauling lumber, and in other ways pushing forward the good work. It is out of debt. A Sunday school will be organized in it soon."

The City.

Buy coal of B. D. Wood & Co., corner of Camp and Common.

B. T. Walshe's, 110 Canal St., has for many years been one of the very best places in New Orleans to buy gentlemen's furnishing goods, and boys and children's clothing. His fall stock just received is one of the best. Go and call on him.

Rev. M. C. Cole, of the M. E. Church, is supplying the pulpit of the First Baptist. On the evening of the 31st ult. the members of that Church and congregation gave Mr. Cole and his family a delightful surprise, by calling on them and spending the evening, and leaving many substantial tokens of appreciation and kindness, in the shape of provisions and money.

We elsewhere publish the card of Messrs. Stamps, Vance and Dejoie, grocers, 140 Baronne street. These gentlemen have a very fine stock of family groceries, and are prompt and attentive in waiting on their customers. We trust our friends will extend a generous patronage to this new firm.

Col. Wm. M. Burwell has been appointed by President Hayes to be Register of the U. S. Land Office for this State. This is a good appointment.

We have received from Rev. Halsey Werlein, pastor of the M. E. Church South in Algiers, complimentary tickets to a grand concert to be given in Odd Fellows' Hall, next Tuesday evening, for the benefit of his church. The concert will be under the direction of Prof. Jul's Cartier, and no pains will be spared to make the entertainment in every way pleasant. After the concert, refreshments will be served by the ladies at reasonable prices. Remember the time, next Tuesday evening, Nov. 13. Tickets of admission are 50 cents.

A brother writing from Mississippi presents the following case, and asks our opinion: "December 1876, nine persons were appointed trustees for our church at Edwards. In February, 1877, these nine persons were approved by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Edwards Circuit. In July the Quarterly Conference elected three persons for the same church. Which is its legal Board of Trustees?"

If the first nine were regularly elected they undoubtedly constitute the legal board, unless they have been ejected from their offices according to law. When once full no more can be added to this board until there is a vacancy, or until the next fourth quarterly conference.

A late work entitled "All for Christ" is receiving high praises, from high quarters, such as the following: "W[illegible] in beautiful style" says the Quarterly Review, "Winning the reader all the way to the end."—"We read this book at a sitting and read it with profit," Dr. Summers of Nashville.—"A most precious volume," Christian Standard.—"I wish every one would read it." "Its illustrations, narrations of a perfect consecration captivate the heart."—Dr. E. O. Haven, Chancellor of Syracuse University.

It is published by Nelson & Phillips, 805 Broadway, New York. Price 75 cts.

Given Away.

In another column Mr. M. T. Richardson offers a pretty nickel-plated Pencil Case to every three months subscriber to his story paper "Idle Hours." We have examined these pencil cases and our readers need not hesitate to send for them and his paper for fear of being disappointed.

Bishop Scott has just celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday. A large number of his friends had gathered at his residence at Odessa, Deleware—and known as "Itinerant's Lodge"—on the happy occasion, and after an elegant supper spent the evening in social chat, sacred song and grateful prayer. The venerable man of God said, "In the past there has been labor, strength and sorrow; but in all I find nothing to complain of; God has been very good to me." May Bishop Scott have yet many years to serve and adorn the Church.

Rev. B. Wright, of Prescott M. E. charge, Arizona, sends a very cheering report of a new mission work just now developing in Salt River Valley—the garden spot of Arizona. He had just held a camp-meeting there in connection with the Southern Methodist brethren—the first genuine revival meeting ever witnessed in the territory. A dozen conversions, two of them a middle-aged man and wife, the heads of a large family, and the good work [illegible] in progress. He [illegible] full connection, [illegible] will join on probation. He also appointed a class-leader and licensed a local preacher to hold services among the people. Nov. 18, 1877.—ALMOST PERSUADED SCRIPTURE.—Acts. 26: 21-29.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

TOPIC.—"Choose ye this day whom ye shall serve."—Josh. 24: 15.

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

A Faithful Witness (21-23).—For these causes. The causes are succintly stated in the two preceding verses. From them we glean what was Paul's opinion of the reasons why he was hated and persecuted by the Jews. The first one is, that he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision. That glorious appearance at noonday, near Damascus, excited their resentment. It stirred up their anger, not because such a revelation was improbable, but for the reason that it proved the Messiahship of Christ, and, hence, made them guilty of the awful crime of crucifying the Savior of Israel. This they would not believe, choosing, instead, to brand all testimony as false, rather than themselves as his murderers. His second offence was that he, not only had been obedient, but had been so industriously obedient. He had published the matter far and wide. He had not been content to do as many Christians are satisfied with doing—simply to hold their belief in quiet, or say but little about it. Just so soon as he became a convert, his tongue was unloosened. He witnessed, first, to them of Damascus where he was converted, next to the people in Jerusalem, then throughout all the coasts of Judea, his zeal all the while increasing with the extent of his work (as it always does) until he was ready to go out into the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Oh for some active witnesses for the Master!

A mistaken Governor (24, 25).—And, just here, Festus interrupts the apostle with the cry that he must be mad! He assigns Paul's great learning as the reason for thinking so. Perhaps he had been impressed with this in the familiar knowledge with the (to him) mysterious writings of Moses and the prophets. But that was not the real occasion for the exclamation. The real cause of it was Paul's earnest belief in the resurrection of the Savior. It passed comprehension how one so learned, as Paul evidently was, could believe in a thing that seemed to him so absurd. To him he seemed to be a religious fanatic. And how many they are, who, like Festus, think that a man is crazy the moment he shows himself to be thoroughly in earnest in his profession of religion! Either Paul or Festus was supremely foolish. Festus was living for time—Paul for eternity. Festus was living wholly for himself—Paul wholly for others. Festus had no hope beyond the grave—Paul was certain of a glorious immortality. Festus was a stranger to God—Paul had him with him, a constant, abiding, comforting presence. There is no comparison to be instituted between the two men that does not throw infinite discredit on Festus, and just as immeasurably exalt Paul.

An Undecided King (26 29).—For the truth and soberness of the words he had just spoken, Paul [illegible] the king [illegible] these things, but [illegible] could not be hid, "for [illegible] a [illegible] even [illegible] were [illegible] to have [illegible] Agrippa vouched for the truth of Paul's words, and, so, for sanity of the apostle.

King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? This question was as skillful as it was sudden. For the king could not answer that in the affirmative without admitting the reasonableness of the resurrection of Christ, since that had been predicted by the prophets. I know that thou believest. It is another [illegible] stroke that does not wait for Agrippa to reply, but assumes that he could not but believe in them. [illegible] the apostle saw in [illegible] the king's tendency to believe not only the prophets but in him of whom the [illegible] I would to God. [illegible] for his converts, not [illegible] but also all that [illegible] and how dignified, how noble, how fervent his [illegible] He utters a wish that is [illegible] as it is Christian. [illegible] I am. There was one [illegible] which the prisoner was [illegible] his judges. He was [illegible] and they still were [illegible] He was the real free [illegible] they were the prisoners [illegible] How well the [illegible] in this exception. [illegible] defeats him, too, it [illegible] adjustment of his own [illegible] examination. [illegible] immediately ad[illegible]

Jewish law. And now we are puzzled to see how this helped Festus in formulating those charges, for which he had instituted these proceedings!

This is one of the longest addresses of Paul that is recorded. Not only is the address a defence of himself, but of Christianity as well. And it was not merely defensive. It exposed his enemies as well as vindicated himself. Note the difference between this and the one given in the 22d chapter. Here he speaks to a king, and there to to his fellow men. This was his last speech on the soil of Palestine. The land that crucified the Master would not listen to the servant. He was banished from his own country that he might fulfill his mission, and bear the name of Christ "before Gentiles and kings."

The Little Wren.

The following story of a little wren in connection with the battle of the Boyne, which was fought in Ireland many years ago, will bring to mind the words of Jesus, that not a sparrow shall fall on the ground without our Heavenly Father. Little things often bring about great consequences.

It was in the month of July, a hot summer's day. Just before the battle, the sentinels of King William's army felt uncommonly tired and sleepy, and very much inclined to take a nap, notwithstanding the near neighborhood of the enemy. Of course, if grown-up soldiers fell asleep, a little drummer boy could not be expected to keep awake. While he slept, his companions nodding around him, a little wren spied some crumbs upon his drum-head, and straightway hopped upon it to pick them up. The noise of her little feet and her beak tapping on the parchment woke the lad, who spied the enemy advancing, and instantly gave the alarm. But for this little bird the sleepers might have been surprised, and the events of the day altered. As it was, the skill of William won him the victory, and James fled beaten from the field.

DIED:

At Lebanon, Tenn., Oct. 24th, 1877, Sarah Ellen, daughter of Rev. E. Provine, of Tenn. Conference, aged 14 years.

She made a profession of religion last March, united with the church, and lived a faithful member. A short while before her death she spoke of her joyful anticipations of meeting her mother, who had gone before, and died in peace.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. novl-1m.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Tribune says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bells.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

POPPING CORN.

Look [illegible] grandma's kitchen;
Can you find a prettier sight—
The [illegible], and Fred, and Kitty,
Popping their corn to-night?

Outside, it is dark and dreary,
And [illegible] falls the rain,
While the wind in fitful dashes,
Drives it against the pane.

Within [illegible] is shining,
[illegible] dance on the wall;
[illegible] by the hearthstone,
[illegible] ball.

[illegible] are roasting,
[illegible] and gold;
[illegible] corn in the corner,
[illegible] untold.

Fred [illegible] shakes the popper
[illegible] and fall;
[illegible] faces,
[illegible] all.

[illegible]
[illegible] pictures,
[illegible] the coals have made.

And they build for themselves bright
[illegible]
[illegible] a shadow shall fall!
Ah! [illegible], that the dear All Father

But some time (with delight at the picture,
When the long, long years have flown),
[illegible] to the dear old kitchen
Where they merrily popped their corn.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles had [illegible] prescriptions and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my hand, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well-merited commendation to so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, WM. F. GROVE.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the itching piles.

From 17,000 to 20,000 alligator skins are tanned yearly for boot and shoe manufactures.

Victor Emmanuel, King of Italy, has bestowed a gold medal upon Henry M. Stanley.

The Chinese authorities have officially taken possession of the railway between Woosung and Shanghai, and stopped all traffic thereon.

The steamer J. B. Walker, with $2,000,000 worth of arms and munitions of war for Turkey, sailed for Constantinople from New Haven, October 23.

The steamship Mosel, which recently sailed for Europe, carried out 300,000 California salmon eggs. They are put up in lots, and will be distributed in England, France and the Netherlands.

Official reports received at the Treasury Department estimate the yield of the precious metals in Nevada and California, during the present calendar year, at $33,000,000 in gold, and $27,000,000 in silver.

The entire country in the British Possessions west of the one hundred and tenth meridian of Greenwich, to the Rocky Mountains, bounded north by the fifty-second parallel, and south by the forty-ninth, has been ceded to the Dominion of Canada by the Blackfeet and kindred Indians. The area is one of the finest of the Canadian Northwest, and the treaty, it is supposed, will forever prevent any Indian outbreak.

One of the convicts in the prison at Frankfort, Kentucky, who attributes his downfall to whisky, has sent out three appointments to lecture on the subject of temperance. His term of confinement will be reached on the 14th of November, and his first appointment is set for the 16th of the same month.

During the past four weeks more than five thousand head of cattle have been killed and shipped to Europe from the New York abattoirs, an increase of two thousand over the previous four weeks, and double the number killed during the same time last year.

The Government of India offers a prize of £5,000 for the best, and £1,000 for the second best, machine or process for preparing the rheea or ramie fiber. American inventors are invited to compete. What is required is a machine or process capable of producing by animal, water or steam power, a ton of dressed fiber at a total cost of not more than £15 laid down at any port in India, and at a cost of not more than £30 in England. The trial of machines will take place at Sehaumpoor, North-wester Provinces, in August and September, 1879. The machine must be on the ground and ready for work on August 15, in that year.

It is believed that the Cuban insurrection has at last received its death-blow. The President of the Republic, the Secretary of the Cuban Chamber of Representatives, and several other prominent leaders of the Cuban party, have been captured by the Spanish troops under Mazoviejo. A royal decree has been published, authorizing the Minister of the Colonies to grant certain changes in the penalties imposed by civil tribunals and courts martial on those guilty of treason and rebellion. Property confiscated to the State on account of such treason will be restored on an appeal in due form to the Government, if the recusants submit within the term of four months. The returned property will not be permitted to be sold or mortgaged until two years after the entire pacification of the island. The products of said property, until it is returned, are to be applied to the war funds, and no reclamation will be allowed for indemnification for total or partial destruction.

The following ethnological classification of immigrants during the last five years is very interesting and suggestive:

Secretary Schurz says that it is a mistake to consider that the Sitting Bull Commission was not successful. He says that it has, on the contrary, been eminently successful, and that the result is what the Administration wanted. It was never desired that Sitting Bull should return to the United States, but it was courteous to the Dominion that steps should be taken to secure his return as a fugative. From the later report from General Terry it appears that subsequent to his interview with Sitting Bull the British officers present consulted with him; that the latter told Sitting Bull that, if he considered himself a subject of Queen Victoria, the white mother, he was very much mistaken; that he was a fugative from the United States; that if he wanted to remain in Canada he must behave himself; that he would not be permited to send expeditions of young men to trouble United States settlers; that if he did he would have to fight the soldiers of the white mother as well as those of the Great Father, and that he could only remain upon the condition that he behaved himself.

KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. For sale by all druggists and country stores.

FOR A START!

As Sunday-school teachers are already on the lookout for the best helps to use in 1878, a plan is offered by which THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES can be taken for three months on trial at a very small cost. The Times is a 16 page weekly paper. Among the regular lesson writers during the present year, in addition to the editors, H. Clay Trumbull and George A. Peltz, have been Prof. Tayler Lewis, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, Rev. Newman Hall, of London, and "Faith Latimer." Special articles on the lessons have also been given by many distinguished Bible students. The plans for 1878 include writers not inferior to these.

HOW TO GET IT. If you will send your name and post-office address, together with twenty-five cents, to the address given below, you will receive The Times every week for three months. This offer is only for new subscribers (persons who have not taken the paper within the last six months), the regular price being $2.15 a year. For seven cents additional, a specimen copy of the Scholars' Quarterly will be sent. Specimens of the Weekly Lesson Leaf sent free.

THE SCHOLARS' QUARTERLY (issued every three months) is likely to be far more widely used during next year than ever before. Its circulation during the last quarter reached 115,000 copies. A large share of the best conducted Sunday-schools throughout the country are now using it in place of the ordinary question book. Its editors are determined that no effort or expense shall be spared to keep it in advance of all the lesson helps for scholars. Every superintendent and teacher in the country should examine it before deciding upon lesson helps for next year.

ITS COST is 25 cents a year, or $25 for a hundred copies a year. Sent by mail without cost of postage to subscribers. Subscriptions taken for three or six months at the yearly rate; under 10 copies, three months, seven cents each. To supply YOUR CLASS would cost:—For five scholars, one year, $1.25; three months, 35 cents; for ten scholars, one year, $2.50; three months, 65 cents. If ordered by the year, they will be sent each quarter in ample time for use. The issue for the fourth quarter of this year (October, November, December) is now ready. Send seven cents for a specimen copy. Postage stamps may be sent in place of currency, if more convenient. IN MEMORY OF JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY.

Sleep, Motley, with the great of ancient days,
Who wrote for all the years that yet shall be.
Sleep with Herodotus, whose name and praise
Have reached the isles of earth's remotest sea.
Sleep, while, defiant of the slow decays
Of Time, thy glorious writings speak for thee
And in the answering heart of millions raise
The generous zeal for Right and Liberty.
And should the days o'ertake us, when, at last,
The silence that—ere yet a human pen
Had traced the slenderest record of the past—
Hushed the primeval languages of men
Upon our English tongue its spell shall cast,
Thy memory shall perish only then.

[illegible] sionary societies of Great Britain are now following up Livingstone to Lakes Tanganyika and Nyanza. Three individuals in the fat land which we recognize as our mother isle, and which we never have equaled in opulence of gifts toward religious ends, gave each $25,000 for the purpose of pushing missions in Africa. We have forty millions of people, and Great Britain forty millions. All our missionary societies together collected $1,800,000 in 1875. Those of Great Britain received $3,100,000. In 1875 the American Board collected $468,000; the Baptist Missionary Union, $241,000; the Methodist Episcopal Board, $800,000; the Presbyterian Board, $456,000. But in the same year the Gospel Propagation Society in Great Britain received $400,000; the London Missionary Society, $517,000; the Wesleyan Missionary Society, $500,000; and the Church Missionary Society, $879,000. Our own Stanley is following on the track of Livingstone, and we can not long consider the interior of Africa as wholly unknown. It is already well enough explored to allow missions to be planted on the lakes discovered by Livingstone. When Stanley shall come back and show us what Livingstone never saw, will it not be fitting for our different missionary societies to lock bands with each other as those of Great Britain have done; and then lock hands with hers, and see to it that a flash of light is shot through this last dungeon on our planet?

Long shadows fall from the western mountains of China, and from the Himalayas northward, upon a population that has hardly yet been reached by Christianity. More than nine tenths of the population of the Chinese empire have never heard the central truths of Christian civilization. But Japan is filling with a dawn that will be a Day, and is rapidly crystallizing in the habits demanded by Christian custom. Six thousand towns between the Himalayas and Cape Cormorin are Christian. The darkest places are the interior of Africa, the islands between Australia and Asia, and the center of the Asiatic continent.

How large is the field of the world? Start in the morning at San Francisco by railway, embark eight days later on a steamer at New York or Boston, land at some French port, take the railway to Brindisi, cross the Mediterranean to the Pyramids and you have traveled 8,000 miles. That is the distance through this little planet. Sometimes I sit in my study, and turn about my globe, and remember that it is no voyage at all to pass from the Golden Gate to the Pyramids, and yet that that distance is as great as the whole vaunted thickness of the self-rolling ball on which we wake and sleep. When I look out from the summit of my housetop, and see the watery meridians of the Atlantic curving in and in until they hide the hulls of the vessels, and leave only thin top-gallants visible, I find it not difficult to bend these aqueous curves in and in around the little space of 8,000 miles, until they meet underneath my feet, and I feel the whole globe afloat in the bosom of omnipotence. This little ball is all home to us. We are to go hence; but while we are here, and looking off into the vast spaces which may be the homes of souls, it is our duty to see that no unexplored remainders are left on this small globe. The iron fingers of commerce are often made to reach around it, as a part of the sport of some merely mercantile enterprises. Why, Lord Bacon shames us, for he says, "Truly, merchants themselves shall rise in judgment against the princes and the nobles of Europe; for the merchants have made a great path in the seas, unto the ends of the world, and sent forth ships and fleets of Spanish, English, and Dutch, enough to make China tremble; and all this for pearl, and stone, and spices. But for the pearl of the kingdom of heaven, or the stones of the heavenly Jerusalem, or the spices of the Spouse's Garden, not a mast has been set up." God is making commerce his missionary; and in this audience, this city, are men whose fleets are in all the seas. It is well known to the closest observers that it is quite within the power of Christianity to make itself audible by the voice or visible in the printed page before the end of this century to every living man.

In the United States in 1776 we had one evangelical minister to every 2,400 of the population; now we have one for every 700. In no other country has Christianity made such outward advance, and to no other land, therefore, are the words more emphatically uttered than to ours: "Preach the Gospel to every creature." Our great cities are [illegible] to tabernacles and to [illegible] laboring Churches. I suppose there has been as much ac[illegible] put forth in America to reach [illegible] at home as in any other [illegible] they who work most [illegible] willing to work [illegible] re-echo! Those [illegible] the world [illegible] that [illegible] be aggressive on the Bosphorus, and under the shadows of the Himalayas, and along the rivers of China, who would put up Mount Holyokes and Wellesleys in the south of Africa, and would brave the fevers of the Gold Coast, and carry through the centers of darkness a light, such as commerce alone has never diffused, such as only the Bible has shed upon heathendom—a light that diffuses conscientiousness, and therefore allows property at last to be safely diffused. [Applause.]

It, from a visible throne in the heavens, He whom we dare not name were to send a troop of angels to the center of Africa, and another to the center of Asia, and another to Japan, and another to the isles of the Pacific, and if by the activity of these visitants there should be broken a way for commerce in Japan, a way for missions in China, a way for religious truth in the center of Africa, we should all bow down and adore before such a revelation of the purposes of Providence. But a power not of man has sent visitants to Japan, and to the isles of the sea, and to the center of Asia and the heart of Africa. Treaties with once rusty hinges, whose turning once grated sounds of war, now move as if all their joints were oiled. Bulwarks of ages have fallen down. The interiors of continents not long ago largely unknown to geography are open at this hour to missions. These events are just as surely the result of divine Providence as if they had been brought about by bands of heavenly visitants. It does not become us to exhibit elation because we have treated Providence penuriously, and at last have paid the debts into which we fell by lagging behind Almighty God. We are not to be ashamed of missions, for God evidently is not ashamed of them. [Applause.]

The Secret of Power.

Who has wondered at the mighty power that is exerted by a few individuals in the Christian world. The question comes why are there so few who possess this power? Is there not a bountiful supply in God's storehouse for all the laborers in His vineyard? A supply adequate for every need. Yet, we go on from year to year, souls dying at the very doors of the sanctuary, without the power to lead them to Christ. There is a cause for this; let us look into our hearts, and find what it is. Are we having a perfect oneness, a perfect unity with Christ; if so, we would with Him have the requisite power. "We are to be one with Him, even as He and the Father are one." To attain this there must be a complete separation from the world. The command is positive, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." Again, Paul says, "I beseech you therefore brethren by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." What are the promises in connection with the commands, "By these we might be partakers of the Divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world." "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit perfecting Holiness in the fear of God." We want a perfect consecration, not merely for service, but also for heart purity. If we fail in this we fall short of God's requirements and limit the Holy one of Israel, in a form which does peril not only to our immortal interests, but cripples us in our usefulness. We have been too well satisfied, like Peter, to follow "afar off," not willing to bear reproach. This is undoubtedly our heavy loss. All along we have had a few men and women earnest and zealous for the salvation of the world, having learned the fact that merely human instrumentality is unavailing in the work of saving souls, having placed themselves in the hands of God to be used as His instruments in His own way. We must recognize the fact that God must do the work, and to Him belongs the glory, by our own "power or Holiness" we are unable to accomplish anything. When the Christian world gets ready to let God work in His own way, and are willing to ascribe to Him the glory, a mighty work will be accomplished. What power of resistance does the world possess, if the Church would but come up to her privilege and call to her aid the strong arm of omnipotence, verily, she would succeed and Satan's kingdom would tumble and fall before the mighty power. We find in God's work nothing is of any value but that which is wrought by the power of the Holy Ghost. A man may speak, but if his lips be not anointed by the Holy Ghost, his words will not take permanent root. What we need is thorough self emptiness so there may be room left for the Spirit to act by us. It is impossible that a man full of himself can be the vessel of the Holy Ghost. When we contemplate the person and ministry of the Lord Jesus we see how in every scene and circumstance in life He acted by the direct power of the Holy Ghost. Oh that in this as in everything else we would more closely and more faithfully follow in His steps.

There are large stores in the kingdom of grace, more than hath entered into the heart of man to conceive of. Jesus chided his disciples for their limited asking and their limited realization. Let us not longer limit Him, but open our hearts to receive all, having our lives in conformity with His word, and our hearts cleansed in the precious blood of Jesus.

One has said all the promises in the Bible are so many bills of exchange, drawn by God the Father in heaven upon His Son, Jesus Christ, and payable to every pious hearer. Let us make large drafts, and hide so completely behind the cross that Jesus alone shall be seen, not catering to the world, not trying to please the ears of the ungodly with smooth words, but let us have the pure unadulterated Gospel of the Son of God.

Let all hindrances be gotten out of the way, so that the Holy Ghost can work in the hearts of men. The sword of the avenger is coming and the people are in danger. But there is yet salvation in Jesus Christ. We need the baptism of the "Holy Ghost and of Fire" just as much now as the Disciples did, let us get where God can give it to us.

The Word Ought.

Take the single syllable ought and weigh it, my surprising skeptical friends, and do so according to the sternest rules of the scientific method. How are we to ascertain what this word weighs unless it be by experiment? What experiment shall we try with it, if it be not that of weighing over against it something very heavy? What shall we weigh against the one word ought? Here is a soldier with an empty sleeve. There was a day when the question arose whether he ought to go to the front in the war. He had to maintain father and mother; and the word home is supposed to be a very weighty one. Heavier than the word father and mother is the word wife. He weighed that word and the others with it against the word ought; and father, and mother, and wife went up in the scale and ought went down, and he went to the front. Is ought scientifically known to weigh anything? Here is another soldier who has father, mother, wife, child and children to weight against that insignificant syllable; and he weighed them, in the morning, and the noon—in both the sacred twilights, as they say in India—and in the midnights. Father, mother, wife and children were words to which he allowed their full weight. He was the only support of his family, but the one word ought again and again carried up the weight of these weightiest contradicting syllables. What if this soldier and that could have put in the left-hand scale all that men value in wealth, and honor, or reputation? I will not suppose the word honor to have any other meaning than reputation, for I cannot weigh ought against ought; and a man ought to maintain his honor. We must not be so unscientific as to weigh a thing against itself. But we put in here, outward standing among men, and wealth and lite. If you please, sum up the globes as so much silver and the suns as so much gold, and cast the hosts of heaven, as diamonds on a necklace, into one scale, and if there is not in it any part of the word ought—if ought is absent in the one scale and present in the other—up will go your scale laden with the universe, as a crackling paper scroll is carried aloft in a conflagration ascending towards the stars. Is it not a curious and appaling fact, this weight of the word ought—and yet a fact absolutely undeniable? Where is the materialist or pantheist who dares assert that I am making this syllable too heavy? You may weigh against the word everything but God, and it will outweigh all but Himself. I cannot imagine God weighed against ought. Precisely here is the explanation of a mystery. God is in that word ought, and therefore it outweighs all but God.—Joseph Cook.

Central Alabama Conference.

The Methodist Advocate says this conference met at Dadeville on the 25th ult. Bishop Harris was on time as usual, though somewhat fatigued, not having recovered his usual vigor since his late illness. A. S. Lakin was chosen secretary. By Saturday noon the business of the Conference had been transacted and the Conference adjourned to meet on Sabbath afternoon to hear the appointments after which the Conference stood adjourned without motion. Numerous revivals have occurred during the year, and a considerable increase in membership is reported. The conference has made decided improvement during the two years of its existence, a number of efficient ministers being added to its ranks during this year. The class of deacons ordained by Bishop Harris would do credit to any conference of ministers in our Church or any other.

The session was a pleasant one, the anniversaries and other public services being participated in by visitors and members of the body. On Sunday morning Rev. J. B. Ford preached an able sermon on systematic beneficence. He also spoke at various times with marked effect. His Sunday-school and missionary speeches were very fine. Rev. E. A. Blanchard of Troy Conference was present and spoke on the Bible cause and on Sunday-schools in a manner that not only impressed but captivated his hearers.

The visitors were very kindly entertained by white friends. The editor was favored with a pleasant home with Col. Vaughn, whose hospitality was enjoyed, while brother Ford was elegantly provided for by Mr. Steiner, the leading merchant of the place, and brothers Blanchard and Jones were in equally desirable quarters with Col. Burns, a prominent lawyer of Dadeville, and the Bishop was domiciled with Parson Lakin. All have the thanks of the visiting brethren, whose only regret is that they did not have more time for cultivating acquaintance with the white friends. The session was so short that all were occupied with the matters of the Conference.

The school at Dadeville, under the care of brother. Franklin, is doing nicely, and general prosperity attends the work of the Church throughout the conference. The collections for the support of the ministry and for benevolent purposes are small, but a beginning has been made and improvement will be rapid. In support of our paper and Depository at Atlanta this new and feeble conference stands third in rank—only Holston and Georgia being ahead of it, and we have no doubt it will do much more for us next year than it has in the past. We are greatly pleased with the position and progress of the Central Alabama Conference.

The Government of India offers a prize of £5000, for the best, and £1,000 for the second best, machine or process for preparing the rhea or ramie fiber. American inventors are invited to compete. What is required is a machine or process capable of producing by animal, water or steam power, a ton of dressed fiber at a total cost of not more than £15 laid down at any port in India, and at a cost of not more than £30 in England. The trial of machines will take place at Sehampoor, North-western Provinces, in August and September, 1879. The machines must be on the ground and ready for work on August 15, in that year.

Answering a Fool According to His Folly.

Let me tell a Dutch story right here because it comes from a Dutchman in the eastern part of Pennsylvania and must be a true story. The Dutchman was never ashamed of his religion. In his neighborhood there was a skeptic who said, "You can't believe anything you can't understand," and so some of the better class of people asked the Dutchman if he would not have a conversation with him. He said, "Yes, if you tink best."

"Have you any objections to the neighbors coming in?"

"No, shust as you tink best."

So they made the appointment and every one was there. The old gentleman came in and laid by his hat and was introduced to the skeptic, and he began suddenly by saying: "Vell, now look here. I pleefs the Bible—what you pleefs?"

Said he: "I don't believe anything I can't understand."

"Oh, you must be one very smart man. I vas mighty glad I meet you. I ask you some questions. The odder day I vas riding along the road and I meet von dog, and that dog he had von of his ears stand up in this way and the odder one he stand down so. Now, vy vas dat?"

Now, that was very unhandy just then, very unhandy. He either had to prove that the dog did not have one ear standing up and the other standing down, or else say he did not believe it. So he said, "I don't know."

"Oh, then you are not so very smart after all. I ask you anoder question. I saw in John Smith's clover patch, the clover come up so nice, and I looked over into the fields and dere was John Smith's pigs; and dere come out hair on dere packs; and in the very same clover patch vas his sheep, and dere come out wool on deir packs. Now vy vos dat?"

Now, that was as bad as the other, because the same perplexity arose. He had to prove there was wool on the back of the pig or hair on the back of the sheep; and he couldn't tell why, and, therefore, he had no business to believe it. Finally he said, "I don't know."

"Vell," he said, "you are not half so smart as you tink you are. Now I asks you anoder question. Do you pleeve dere is a God?"

"No, I don't believe any such nonsense."

"Oh, yes, I hear about you long ago. I know all about you. My Bible knows about you, for in my Bible he says: 'The fool says in his heart there is no God,' but you big fool, you blab it right out."—President G. P. Hayes.

The Central Cross.

In the Palace of Justice, at Rome, they take you sometimes into a chamber with strangely painted frescoes on the ceiling and around the walls and upon the floor, in all kinds of grotesque forms. You can not reduce them to harmony, you cannot make out the perspective, it is all a bewildering maze of confusion. But there is one spot upon the floor of that room, and one only, standing upon which every line falls into harmony; the perspective is perfect, the picture flashes out upon you, instinct with meaning in every line of panel. You can see at that point, and that only, the design of the artist that painted it.

I believe that this world is just as bewildering a maze, looked at from every point except one. I look back upon the records of history; I look upon the speculations of science; I endeavor to gaze into the future of this world's career; wherever I turn I am opposed by the mysteries that hem me in and crush me down, until I take my stand at the foot of the cross. Then darkness and discord become light and harmony; the mystery is solved; the night that shut me in becomes radiant with the divine light and glory. At the foot of the cross art, science, literature and history become at once to me a divine, glorious and a blessed thing. And so I claim for my Lord his rightful dominion over all the works of his hand! We will gather all the beauties of art, and all the treasures of music, all that is brightest, and best in this world, and will lay them down at his feet; for "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive might, and majesty, and riches, and power, and honor, and glory." His is the scepter, his is the right, his this universal world.—Dr. Manning.

Will the Pillars Stand.

Some years ago, an insane man, in one of our New England towns, rose from his seat in the midst of a large assembly, and seizing with a great deal of energy one of the pillars that sustained the gallery of the church, declared aloud that he was going to pull it down. Had another "Samson Agonistes" suddenly appeared, and declared himself just ready to bow between the pillars of another of Dagon's temples, there could hardly have been a greater consternation. If the people had but stopped to consider, their good sense, as well as their confidence in the architect of the edifice, would have assured them of the man's utter impotence to execute his threat. But amid the outcries, and faintings, and general confusion, they yielded to the most foolish fears. Nor did they recover their self-possession, and quietly resume their seats, until another man, significantly pointing to the large and strong pillar which had been threatened calmly said: Let him try—Let him try.

This proposition restored order and confidence at once; the house did not fall, and the services went on.

And so, "to compare great things with small," when men insanely threaten to pull down the pillars that the skill of the Divine Architect has reared and holds up, we are too easily moved with alarm, and too slow to consider the strength of the structure. When God pleases, He can indeed make "the pillars of Heaven to tremble, and to be astonished at His reproof." But so long as it is a feeble mortal who undertakes to shake them, our confidence in the Omnipotent Ruler would do well quietly to "let him try." This seems to be the very object of that assurance of God to the trembling inhabitants of the earth in a time of great fear: "The earth, and all the inhabitants thereof, are dissolved," that is, melted with fear, trembling with dark foreboding; but "I bear up the pillars of it."—Selected.

Description of Christ.

The following is a correct translation of an epistle sent by Publius Lentulus to the Roman Senate: "There appeared in these days a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who is yet among us; of the Gentiles accepted as for a prophet of truth; but his disciples call him the Son of God. He raiseth the dead, and cureth all manner of disease. A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholder must both love and fear. His hair the color of a chestnut full ripe, plain to the ears, whence, downward, it is more orient, curling and waving about his shoulders. In the midst of his forehead is a stream or partition of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites; forehead plain and very delicate; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautiful with a lovely red; his mouth and nose so formed as nothing can be represented; his beard thick, in color like his hair, not over long; his look innocent and mature; his eyes gray, quick and clear. In reproving, he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous and fair-spoken; pleasant in conversation, mixed with gravity. It cannot be remembered that any have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep; in proportion of body, most excellent; his hands and arms delectable to behold; in speaking, very temperate, modest and wise; a man of singular beauty, surpassing the children men."—Foster' Cyclopedia of Illustrations.

Take Care of Your Habits.

Horace B. Claflin, a prominent merchant of New York, is as quaint and humorous as he is keen-witted and rich. They tell the following good story about him.

On the 15th of February, about five o'clock, Claflin was sitting alone in his private office, when a young man, pale and worn, timidly knocked and entered.

"Mr. Claflin," said he, "I have been unable to meet certain payments, because certain parties have not done as they agreed by me, and I would like to have $10,000. I come to you because you were a friend of my father, and might be a friend to me."

"Come in," said Claflin, "come in and have a glass of wine."

"No," said the young man, "I don't drink."

"Have a cigar, then?"

"No, I never smoke."

"Well," said the joker, "I would like to accommodate you, but I don't think I can."

"Very well," said the young man, as he was about to leave the room. "I thought perhaps you might. Good day, sir."

"Hold on," said Mr. Claflin; "you don't drink?"

"No."

"Nor smoke, nor gamble, nor anything of the kind?"

"No, sir! I am superintendent of the —— Sunday school."

"Well," said Claflin, with tears in his voice and his eyes too, "you shall have it, and three times the amount, if you wish. Your father let me have $5000 once, and asked me the same questions. No thanks. I owe it to you for your father's trust."

Southwestern.

39 Natchez St., New Orleans, La.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1877.

TWO MONTHS FREE.

Now is the time for all our preachers to begin the canvass for subscribers to the SOUTHWESTERN for 1878. We make this liberal proposition: for two dollars CASH we will send the SOUTHWESTERN from November 1, 1877, to January 1, 1879, we paying the postage. This gives the paper two months free.

Will all our pastors please read this to their congregations, and begin the canvass at once? Who will send us the first cash list for 1878? Address Nelson & Phillips, Lock Box B, New Orleans.

New Subscribers.

We are already receiving some good lists of new subscribers for 1878, and the indications are favorable that the canvass the next few weeks will be vigorous and successful.

We ask that all the preachers will go to work at once and push the canvass. Two dollars pays for the SOUTHWESTERN for a year and all who subscribe now, get the paper from the remainder of 1877 and during all of 1878. Our terms are cash in advance. Address

NELSON & PHILLIPS,
Lock Box B, New Orleans.

To the Texas Preachers.

The four Texas Conferences meet within a month at Dallas, Waco, Houston and Jefferson. The editor of the Southwestern expects to be at these Conferences, and will have the accounts of all the preachers, and the agents expect every preacher to be ready to settle his account. We trust there will be no failures in this matter. By resolution of the General Conference, when preachers allow their accounts to go beyond [illegible] without settlement, they can have no more credit.

If you do not send lists of new subscribers before, do not fail to bring them with you to Conferences. [illegible] Texas lead off grandly in the [illegible]

Works.

"Whose end shall be according to their works"—was the scathing denunciation of Paul for the false apostles who sought to destroy his influence, and lead astray the Galatian Christians. The works which men do are the real tests of their characters, and in so far as they are moral or immoral give a sure index to their hearts, and a certain prophecy of their end. Men of bad deeds are morally bad in their hearts, and unless changed will in the end receive the reward of the wicked. Men of good deeds are morally good, and if they do not fall out by the way will in the end have the reward of the righteous. This law is absolute, "For of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they grapes."

Works are of three kinds—wicked, dead and good. The Scriptures classify them as "the works of the flesh," "dead works" and the "fruits of the spirit." The works of the flesh are "adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like." Dead works are such as have a fair outward appearance, but are not the outgrowth of a really good heart. Judaism, in the time of Christ was little else than a system of "dead works." Although Christ was in their very midst, the fountain of all truth, still they clung to their old traditions, and by them "made the commandments of God of none effect." To "purge the conscience from dead works," is the salvation wrought by "the blood of Christ, who through the Eternal Spirit offered himself." The fruits of the spirit are "love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." Thus we have a complete classification of works: wicked works, the outgrowth of a wicked nature; dead works, having a fair appearance, but really put on as a blind to the nature within; and good works, such as are prompted by a good and pure heart.

It is not to be said that good men never do wrong, for they "do err at times, through imperfect judgment, a limited knowledge or momentary weakness. Neither must it be said that wicked men never do any good deeds from sincere motives. The best of men have erred. Human infallibility is too great an absurdity for even a Pope to claim without outraging common sense. And some of the noblest deeds on record have been done by men otherwise wicked and impure. The exceptions but more clearly reveal the rule. A man's moral character is not to be judged by any single act. Character, whether moral or immoral, is to be judged by the continued and persistent purpose of the life as shown in actions. If there be a continued regard for duty, and an evident conscientious following up of its requirements, we have sure evidence of a godly heart. On the other hand, if there is a continued disregard of duty, and direct following of evil, we may truly say the heart back of that life is wicked.

In judging of their condition morally some are satisfied if their belief is correct. They say "for as a man thinketh so is he." A correct belief is of prime importance. There can be no intelligent religion without a more or less perfectly formulated creed. But belief is no test of moral character, only as it is lived out in the life. Agrippa believed in the presence of Paul's eloquent defence, but his correct belief did not change his character. Neither is a full acceptance of the truth in Christ, and an open profession before the world, an infallible test of moral character. The professed life within becomes real to the world only as it crystalizes in an active, holy life without. It matters not how pure the intentions may be to [illegible] a holy life, we must live such a life before those about us can be [illegible] asked to believe we are [illegible]. Many very wicked men have [illegible] of intentions. Sometime [illegible] believe and intend [illegible] their mode of life, but [illegible]. Their belief and in[illegible] excellent but they are [illegible] the life, and are [illegible] of their moral [illegible] judge men [illegible] profess [illegible] what they [illegible] the intention is correct, if properly understood and carefully guarded. A good intention must not be allowed to permit an act known to be wicked. A man may say, "I only intend to care for my wife and children, but to do that I must appropriate my neighbor's goods; my intentions are good, and so I do not sin." The error lies in the failure to remember that actions themselves have moral qualities, and that no sort of good intention can make a wicked act good. No evil is hurting the church more, or doing more to corrupt society, than this terrible heresy, which pleads good intention as an excuse for doing wrong. It is the excuse and fortification for every persecution, and gave the world the Inquisition and its kindred hellish appliances for the gratification of religious fanaticism and hate. It corrupts politics and gave birth to the monstrous doctrine that "the end justifies the means," by which every sort of intrigue and robbery and murder has been practiced in all ages, in the name of patriotism and humanity. It poisons the channels of commerce, and brings forth a fiendish brood known as the tricks of trade, by which stealing and every species of fraud are made respectable in the eyes of men. This heresy lowers the standard of morality in the church, hushes the voice of conscience and seals the lip of the minister, and as truly as did the "traditions" of the corrupt Jewish church, does it "make the commandments of God of none effect." Men must not only intend to be good but they must be good, or else lay no claim to morality. "Whose end shall be according to their works." The hypocrite shall have the end of the hypocrite, and so of the thief and the drunkard and the slanderer, and envier, no matter what their beliefs or professions or intentions. "God is not mocked, whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." The fruit tree may have a splendid trunk, its leaves may be luxuriant, and its blossoms exquisite and fragrant, but what are these if there be no fruit? Our beliefs are the trunk of of our moral lives, the leaves our professions, the blossoms our intentions, but what are all these if they bear not the fruit of the Spirit?"

The French Republic.

Republicanism appears to have rooted itself in the affections of the people of France. The fickle changes which have hitherto characterized the political revolutions of that country, gave rise to many fears as to the stability of the new system of rule. The martial spirit, smarting under the defeat of the Napoleanic usurpation, by the superior onset of the German arms; the intrigues of the ultramontanists, who desired to retrieve the temporal defeats of the detroned Pope, through the aggressive tendency of Catholic France as against Protestant Germany; the educational poverty of the masses who wielded the suffrage—each and all—were viewed as formidable obstacles to the permanency of the Republic. It was noted, too, that these adverse influences confided in President MacMahon, as their agent, to give them supremacy and power. It will not be questioned that this Marshal, a loyal son of the Roman Church, and a lukewarm Republican (if one at all), devoted all his energies and the power of his administration, to obstruct the free canvass of the voters. Meetings were broken up, speakers arrested, fined and imprisoned, the press placed under a rigid censorship, the mails searched for documents, officials directed to support the measures of the government, and its declared candidate, on the peril of their official tenure, and on refusal were dismissed by hundreds; but, despite the machinations of their enemies, and unaided, save by their earnest convictions of right, the Republicans carried the elections, and in the Chamber of Deputies will have one hundred majority.

Wherever political and religious liberty is known and valued, the result of the French elections will be hailed with intense satisfaction. They mean not simply the retention of France in the galaxy of Republics, in the vanguard of civilization, but also the defeat of the Roman hierarchy in the endeavor to hoist the battle-flag of the Church in Western Europe. Behind the treacherous Marshal stood the young Napoleon, and the Orleanist heir to the throne, ready to bear the standard of the cross to the gates of Rome, or invade Germany at the bidding of the priesthood. By one hundred majority, France rebukes these schemers, and indicates her fidelity to liberty and law.

The Republican success, though grand and complete, was not so overwhelming, that it may prove good policy for the victorious party to arrogantly dominate the vanquished. The ultramontanists are respectable in talent and numbers. They will make the victors moderate and vigilant, and hence, by a freedom from extremes, we may expect statesmanlike legislation, so much needed in the new Republic.

The Contemplated Colored Exodus to Africa.

Editor Southwestern:

A great deal is being said for and against the emigration to Africa. Societies are being formed, meetings held, circulars with glowing descriptions of this far-off land are being extensively circulated, and the colored people are subscribing their means as well as their names, to this nefarious project without duly considering the inevitable failure and disappointment that must befall all who thus foolishly deposit their means in this Sinking Fund.

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 17, the "Ministerial Institute" of the city of New Orleans, convoked a meeting at the Old Baptist Church, when the folly of this emigration scheme was elaborately discussed, and the the disadvantages under which all who embark must labor, were accurately set forth. The leaders of this movement, however, are zealously putting forth efforts to further their plans, by sowing discontent in the minds of our people, by appealing to their passions and prejudices, by magnifying evils, real or imaginary, and by firing with animosity the hearts of the colored people against the white race.

Now all such characters are the most subtle and invidious enemies of our race. We lift up the voice of warning against them, and beg to call the attention of our people to the following considerations:

1. Africa is not the place for the American colored people.

It is quite a mistake to imagine that because we are of African descent, we can, without inconvenience, live in that region like the native African. Any colored man that leaves America to land on those shores, must expect a terrible physical testing of his nerves by that very unfavorable climate, and if he escapes with his life, to remain for years, at least, shorn of his strength, and a miserable wreck; and by the time that he gets acclimatized, his days will have passed, and he will find that it is "time to die." I offer an illustration:

In 1865, a colored trickster, S. Arthurs by name, succeeded in making three hundred colored persons dissatisfied with their homes in Barbadoes, one of the islands of West Indies, and to favor his emigration scheme to British Honduras, where, as he said, they were to grow rich, educate their children, form townships, become merchants and die full of gold. But they had not landed in Belize, before they found out that they were in a snare. This man Arthurs had agreed with a Mr. Hodge, now dead, to bring from Barbadoes a cargo of negro laborers, for about $5000. So they were not their own when they got there. They had to submit to indignity and abuse—they had to hire or starve. Some of them never saw the city. They were taken from the ship in schooners and flats and conveyed by the Belize rivers to the plantations, where two hundred of them died from the effects of the climate in less time than three months. Very shortly after that there was a Chinese emigration to the same place, and they sickened and died like sheep that had the plague. Very few survived. They that could, returned, and they that could not, were left to spend the remnant of their days in tearful regrets and longings after the land of their nativity.

Even so will it be with the American negro who goes to Africa as an emigrant. Too late, and to his cost, he will learn that it is easier to grow rich in a native than in a foreign land—that in every country below the skies to accumulate wealth we must work—must have strength—that money does not grow on trees, and that the glowing descriptions of Africa, as set forth in the emigration scheme was nought but a snare, a sham, a humbug and a lie!

2. America is the best place for the American colored people.

What people on the face of the globe has made such progress as has the American negro since the emancipation? What people more healthy? Look at one of our colored girls! How industrious and intelligent! She sits at her spinning wheel or loom, and weaves; or at her sewing machine, and makes her robes; or at her desk, and writes or teaches her pupils; or in her gallery of art, producing scenes and tablets, and pictures, which, true to nature, seemed charged with animation and life; or she sits at her piano, and with the delicious music of her fingers delights the rapt ear of the passer-by, as she sings to the tune of "America:"

"My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing."

Can they be found more intelligent in Africa—a land where civilization is unknown, whose inhabitants are barbarians, without law or gospel, without railroads or commerce—where torrid suns, sickening miasmas, disease and death combine in formidable array against the stranger and desolate? No; and having traveled considerably, we are prepared to say, that there is no country in the world more adapted to the advancement and improvement of American colored people than America—their own native soil. Their interests are here. They have made the wilderness to bud and blossom like the rose. In labor, and stripes, and tears, and blood, they have held their own; and now that the worst is passed, and peace is declared, and "the era of good feeling has come," and the Southern white people are our friends, and are making good their pledges every day, shall we ever betray the inexcusable folly of emigrating to Africa? God forbid! But we will stay here, and denounce as tricksters and enemies of the commonwealth every such malcontent, who would thus betray our interests, rob us of our birthright, and land us into "a vast howling wilderness."

The Elections.

In reviewing the elections held in a large number of the States, on Tuesday the 6th instant, for the purpose of reading clearly the lesson which they may be supposed to convey, we are struck with the evidence of the existence of a strong apathy on the part of thousands of voters, who failed to make any appearance at the polls whatever. As always happens in these popularly termed "off-years" in politics, or the campaigns succeeding exciting Presidential contests, all calculations of the political prophets fell either above or below the mark. The men who worked night and day, and who, in the Presidential contest would never have reconciled themselves to any lukewarm state, appear to have rested from their labors, and to have given the ascendancy to the professional politicians and their followers. In consequence, the Democrats have elected candidates in Republican strongholds, and Democratic precincts have fallen off wonderfully from party estimates.

New York elected the Democratic State ticket, but allowed the Republicans to retain the Legislature. The door is still open for Roscoe Conkling to be his own successor in the United States Senate.

Pennsylvania gave over 10,000 majority to the Democratic candidates for Supreme Judge, Treasurer, etc., but since the present Legislature has elected Don Cameron, United States Senator, for a full term, the Republican loss is not beyond repair at some future date.

In Connecticut, which gave her vote to Tilden, and was Democratic for several previous campaigns, the Republicans came out ahead, though on a reduced aggregate vote.

New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia, were Democratic, and Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Kansas, and Minnesota, Republican as usual.

The Chairman of the State Executive Committee at Jackson, Mississippi, telegraphed that Mississippi was for Democracy and the solid South by a majority of 100,000. There was only one ticket in the field, in many other States there were seven and eight of them. There is reason to believe the majority in Mississippi was entirely too "solid" to be palatable to Democracy at large. It will certainly provoke inquiries and explanations, and possibly, re-act with telling effect upon the political autocracy so apparent in that State.

The national parties are approaching an even balance of power. There is a sense of depression among Republicans, and of confidence in final triumph in Democratic circles. But who can tell what a day may bring forth? Does not the gloom precede the twilight? Our hope is, that justice and right will triumph, and in the beneficent order of Providence, the instruments will be at hand to give them the victory. This reliance transcends all partizan feeling, and is founded upon faith in American patriotism.

Columbus, Texas, Letter.

On last Sabbath, Nov. 4, according to previous appointment, our new and beautiful M. E. church, St. Paul, was dedicated to the service of Almighty God, with the usual impressive dedicatory services of our church. These were conducted by our Presiding Elder, Rev. D. Gregory, assisted by Rev. S. Gates, P. E. of Waco District, and Revs. P. Johnson, C. King and others.

The Elder took as his text the one hundred and thirty-second psalm. It was one of his happiest efforts, and delivered with power and pathos. Notwithstanding the very inclement weather, there was a large congregation of deeply interested and attentive worshippers present. A collection was lifted, amounting to fifty-two dollars. The church is a frame structure 36x56 feet, weather boarded, ceiled, seated and painted, with a beautiful pulpit and altar, finished in modern style —probable value $3,000. The efficient and energetic Board of Trustees deserve great credit, and have the thanks of the people for their untiring efforts to have the church erected amid so many discouragements, and so much opposition, brought on by troubles with their former pastor. They are: Edwin Eason, J. Yancy, G. Norman, J. Zumwalt, and A. F. Kennison.

A Sad Bereavement.

The following from the Central Christian Advocate announcing the death of the wife of our beloved friend, Mr. W. E. Barns, will be read with sadness and sorrow by many in this city. Mr. Barns was for sometime assistant editor of the SOUTHWESTERN, and made many warm and personal friends here, who rejoiced with him in his happy marriage, two years ago, to Miss Rowe, of Bloomington, Ills. Thus soon are they called to mourn with him. His grief is to us a personal bereavement. We can only commend him to the blessed Savior, from whom alone a soul satisfying sympathy can come:

Mrs. Mattie Rowe Barns, wife of W. E. Barns, assistant editor of the Central Christian Advocate, after an illness of three weeks, died on last Thursday evening, November 1. Almost from the beginning of the fever that consumed her life she apprehended a fatal result, and had no fears of the future. Mrs. Barns had not yet formed a large circle of friends in St. Louis, but wherever known her intelligence, fine womanly qualities and Christian spirit were at once recognized. On the eve of the second anniversary of his marriage our dear young friend found the shadow and silence of death in his household that had been full of light and love. To those who know him this sad announcement will produce the sense of personal bereavement, and beget the deepest sympathy.

Rev. Emperor Williams, Presiding Elder of the North New Orleans District, Louisiana Conference, reports a successful tour over a large part of his District, holding his Fourth Quarterly Conferences. He visited Centerville, Franklin, Le Teche, Cypremort, Jeancrettes and New Iberia. At all these points the pastors and people are heartily at work, and indications are, that at most of the points there will be an increase in benevolent collections over last year. At Morgan City, a new bell has been purchased, and the church is being finished. At Franklin a parsonage has been built.

Remarkable Offer.

Of all the peculiar gifts which this "Age of Premiums" has brought out the offer of Mr. Milton T. Richardro to give a Corset to Every Lady subscriber to his weekly story paper "Idle Hours" is perhaps the most striking—as he is giving Dr. Warner's Celebrated Health Corsets, no one need hesitate to send him not getting their money'sfor fear of worth. See advertisement.

We have received the circular of "The Freedmen's Normal and Theological Institute," which opened in Little Rock, Arkansas, on the 7th instant. Miss H. M. Perkins is the Principal, and Rev. J. G. Pollard, Chairman of the Board of Trustees. Miss Perkins has, for several years, been a very efficient teacher in the Central Tennessee College, with Dr. Braden, and in the Wiley University, at Marshall, Texas. We hope success may attend this new school. The school will be under the patronage of the Arkansas Conference.

Rev. N. Webster, presiding elder of the Jacksonville district, Florida Conference, has been very sick, at Gainsville, but we are glad to know that he is now convalescent. We trust he will son be able to resume the duties of his office.

Secretary McCreary has ordered Major Bengaud, of the U. S. Engineer corps, to remove the raft in Red river, and keep the channel open. It may be done in two weeks, and the work will begin at once. This is cheerful news for New Orleans, and the Red river section.

Zion's Herald says: "Dr. J. M. Buckley, of Stanford, Conn., received into full membership, on a recent Sunday, seventy persons, having an average age of over twenty years. In some instances entire families entered together."

The palmetto of Florida is being converted into brushes, mattings and ropes. The wild orange makes essences, syrups and marmalades.

See splendid offer of Railway and United States Government Homestead lands, in another column.

The City.

An association of Spiritualists holds regular meetings, but has no regular lecturer.

Rev. Dr. N. W. Wilson, of the Coliseum Place Baptist Church, has returned from a visit to Virginia.

Mr. A. Schrieber has been appointed consul of the Netherlands at this port, and so recognized by the government.

R. H. Isabelle, late pension agent, charged with forgery of official bond, was released on furnishing securities for $5000, before Commissioner Adams.

The suggestion is made by the Louisianian that the colored teachers of the city should form associations for their mutual improvement. It is a good one.

Congressman E. John Ellis telegraphs from Washington that the Secretary of the Navy will place a vessel at the disposal of the Mayor, for service in improving the river at this city.

The different police stations were reported to be improperly supplied with blankets for the comfort of the prisoners. This shameful neglect will be discontinued by Administrator Diamond.

The conduct of the Mme. Rentz minstrel troupe was of such a character as to cause a spirited protest from the press, and the managers of St. Patrick's Hall prohibited a repetition of the performance.

Ursin Lallande has brought suit in the Sixth District Court against George H. Gardner, principal of the Fillmore School, for the ejection of his children because of their color. He applies for a mandamus to compel the reception and instruction of his children.

Only one newspaper in this city, the Democrat, ventured to openly exult over the death of Senator Morton, the rest made respectful allusion to the able and sincere man whom death had overtaken. The Critic and the Louisianian, organs of the colored people, inverted their column rules, to betoken their mourning.

State Superintendent Lusher tendered Mayor Pilsbury some lots on Erato street, in the Sixth District, for the erection of the McDonogh school. The Mayor, however, thinks the Sixth District is well supplied with school houses, while the Second District, which has never derived any benefit from the McDonough Fund, should have the next new building.

The Board of Health, last Tuesday night, appointed a committee of three physicians, Drs. Jones, Austin and Taney, to address a memorial to the Legislature, urging the necessity of compulsory vaccination. The Board considers it quite as much the duty of the government to protect its citizens from small pox by this regulation as to prevent the introduction of a foreign pestilence by quarantine.

Mr. Robert Diamond, Administrator of Police, is considering plans for the fitting up of the public parks, in an economical way. The Crescent City Park, on Metairie Ridge, and the Foucher property, (New Orleans Park) in the Sixth District, are fine properties, never converted to the uses originally intended. Keepers have made pocket-money for themselves by pasturing cattle. Volunteer boards of citizens, are suggested, to serve without compensation, and devote all sources of revenue available, to make the parks the ornaments they should be.

The emptiness of the municipal treasury occasions many inconveniences. Officials will be compelled to accept warrants or go without their salaries. Judge Smith threatens to retain his salary from the fines collected in his court, and Sheriff Houston has applied for an injunction restraining the paying out of monies until his just claims were paid. Among those who will suffer the most are the public school teachers, who will go into the market [illegible] depreciated warrants for their reduced amount of salaries. Wise [illegible], and perhaps additional [illegible] will be required, to remedy the financial condition of the city. So says the New Era.

Nov. 25, 1877.—PAUL IN THE STORM.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts 27: 14-26.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"What time I am afraid I will trust in thee"

TOPIC.—Trust in the Lord.

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

Hope Dead (14:20).—They were tempted out of their harbor by a fair south wind, which "blew softly." How many a soul has been tempted out of safe anchorage by just such seductive influences! The south wind blows softly only to let destruction leap out upon it from a quarter entirely unexpected. The ship rounded Cape Matala, and, probably, when near the group of islands called Paximader was caught by the rush of the hurricane, which swept down upon it from the mountains of Crete, and was driven before its fury down toward Clauda, some twenty-three miles to the south-west. Nothing could withstand the force of such a wind, and so, as many fearful mariners have done before and since, they "let her drive." Once caught in the power of a temptation, how many there are that give right up to it!

All the expedients which they adopted were of no avail. Their situation was one well-calculated to drive away all hope. They had no compass, and "neither sun nor stars in many days appeared." They were, therefore, unable to tell the direction of their drifting. They could not judge what course to take to reach land, nor did they know but what they soon might be driven upon some rocky coast and perish in its breakers. They were cold and wet from long exposure. They were faint from long watching, from continued labor, and from lack of food. The ship was leaking, and, at any moment, might founder. And overhead was the dark and pitiless sky, and still the hurricane drove them on with unabated fury. How vividly their condition was described by the psalmist! "For he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof. They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths; their soul is melted because of trouble. They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wit's end." Ps. 107: 25-27.

Faith Living (21-26).—But when hope departed, faith winged her way to take her place! In the very hour of their despair, unseen by any except the man of God, an angel stood on board of the ship. When they thought there was no hope, they had the greatest reason to be encouraged! Let us note the points of interest in connection with Paul's address.

1. His Abstinence. That was enforced. It was not a fast of a religious nature. Although there was a plenty of on board, yet, under such circumstances, no food would be cooked, and, in such anxiety, no one would feel like eating. 2. His Reproof. He tells them: "Ye should have hearkened unto me and not have loosed from Crete." He did not administer this rebuke to harrow up their feelings with the thought of what might have been had they only listened to his advice. It was not one of those exasperating "I told you so's!" but, on the contrary, he reminded them of that so that they might give the more heed to what he had to say now. 3. His Vision. Says Matthew Henry: "Paul knows not where to find himself, but God's angel knows where to find him." It was after Christ's long fast and trial in the wilderness that "angels came and ministered unto him." Matt. 4: 11. Though unseen, is there not still just ministry for the children of God? "Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1: 14 4. The Injunction. "Fear not, Paul!" Paul had been fearful, then. For a while the storm had beaten him down and wrenched his faith away from him. Like Peter, for a time he had looked at the waves instead of toward his Savior. Seeing how mighty they were, and how helpless the ship was in the grasp of the storm, what wonder that, for a little while, Paul gave up all hopes of beholding Rome! It would have been a faith more than humanly marvelous not to have been shaken by that hurricane. 5. The Promises. There were two of them. The first was, "Thou must be brought before Cæsar." That promise was that which buoyed up the ship during those fourteen days of storm! It could not sink so long as it had on board one who had the divine guaranty that he should visit Rome. When the gale [illegible] raging round the little boat on [illegible], the disciples had no reason [illegible] fear; for the Master was [illegible] in the hinder part of the [illegible] so long as they had the [illegible] God on board the ship could [illegible] down. Neither could one [illegible] had a promise of his to [illegible] the land! The second was [illegible] on board should perish. [illegible] hath given thee all them [illegible] with thee." Paul must [illegible] them, then I [illegible] darkness, he had [illegible] with God. Men are [illegible] for losing their [illegible] stress of circum[illegible] for making [illegible]. Many a [illegible] turn to [illegible] the Lord [illegible] his old [illegible] [illegible] the Holy [illegible]

the safety of all that were in the ship. 6. His Testimony. What a time and place it was to give it! In the midst of the roaring of the tempest, the onward rush of the mountain waves, and the groaning and creaking of the laboring ship what a time it was then to pledge the faith of his God that not a few only, or the most, but that every one should be saved! In an hour like that, it was something to stand forth with such a message. He was in the midst of worshippers of other gods, but none but himself had a word of comfort to say. It was a comforting thing, then, to be able to say: "Whose I am, and whom I serve." Whose I am. Consecration of one's self to God as property. Whom I serve. Consecration of one's powers to him in active service. The first does not mean much without the last.

"Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer; for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me." Belief like that compelled in others. Henceforward faith dominated in that ship. Hope had departed, but a better than Hope had taken her place.

It is said that the obelisk ship Cleopatra (the cassion containing the Egyptian obelisk,) will remain at Ferrol all the winter, pending the determination of the question of salvage in the Admiralty Court, the owners of the steamer Fitzmaurice, which recovered the caisson steamer Olga, and towed it into Ferrol having refused the contractor's offer for that service.

DIED:

In this city, Sept. 11th, in the 23d year of her age, Mrs. Rachel Taylor, wife of Mr. Gilbert Taylor.

She led an exemplary life in all the stations which God in His providence called her to fill. As a wife she was affectionate and faithful; as a mother tender and loving; and as a christian, she was exceptionally strict. Her aim was after purity of heart and life, and, as she often told us, her experience was better felt than told.

As the hour of dissolution approached, she said to those about her: "The earthly house of this tabernacle is dissolving, but I have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." And thus she passed away, full of immortal hope, to enter into the rest that remains to the people of God. She was a member of Mt. Zion M. E. Church. H.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. nov1-1m.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. S. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Tribune says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

WE CAN MAKE HOME HAPPY.

Though we may not change the cottage
For mansions tall and grand,
Or change the little grass plot
For a boundless stretch of land—
Yet there is something brighter, clearer,
Than the wealth we'd thus command.

Though we have no means to purchase
Costly pictures rich and rare—
Though we have no silken hangings
For the walls so cold and bare—
We can hang them o'er with garlands,
For flowers bloom everywhere.

We can make home very cheerful
If the right course we begin;
We can make its inmates happy,
And their truest blessings win.
It will make a small room brighter
If we let the sunshine in.

We can gather round the fireside
When the evening hours are long;
We can blend our hearts and voices
In happy, social song;
We can guide some erring brother—
Lead him from the path of wrong.

We may fill our home with music,
And with sunshine brimming o'er,
If against all dark intruders
We will firmly close the door;
Yet should the evil shadow enter,
We must love each other more.

There are treasures for the lowly,
Which the grandest fail to find;
There's a chain of sweet affection
Bringing friends of kindred mind—
We may reap the choicest blessings
From the poorest lot assigned.

Writing a Letter.

"I wish I could write to Tommy," said a very little girl, whose brother was at school.

"Well," said a friend who was in the room, "I will lend you my hand and pen. What will you write to Tommy?"

"O, I can't write a letter. I don't know what to say," said the little girl.

"Not know what to say?" said the gentleman. "Come, let me begin: 'Last night the house was burned from top to bottom.'"

"O no, please don't say that."

"Why not?"

"'Cause it isn't true."

"Well, that is something. You know that you mustn't put into a letter things that are not true. Now, let us try again. 'The kitten has been playing with its tail for five minutes.'"

"O, no," said Betsy laughing, "don't say that."

"Why, that is true; I saw the kitten do it."

"But Tommy don't want to [illegible]."

"[illegible], my dear, that is another thing, you know. When you write a letter, you should say something that your friends will care to [illegible] I write 'Jem was [illegible] would not learn his les-[illegible]

"[illegible] is true, isn't it?"

"[illegible] needn't tell Tommy. That would be telling tales."

"[illegible] right, my dear. I see [illegible] something else about [illegible] we should not put [illegible] in them. Shall I write: [illegible] is much better, and will [illegible] to play to-morrow?"

"[illegible] write that, 'cause Tom [illegible] to know Mary Anne [illegible] so fond of her."

The public debt statement shows a decrease during the month of October of $4,236,554.

It is estimated that the wheat crop of Texas will aggregate in value, $12,000,000.

The distance traveled by the United States troops in pursuit of Joseph and the Nez Perces was 1,750 miles.

Two thousand American firms are said to have already made arrangements to be represented in the Paris Exhibition of 1878.

It is estimated that turbine water wheels have, since their invention, saved the country over $300,000,000 in the one single item of fuel.

During the year just closed the United States sold 105,000,000 yards of cotton goods abroad, ten times more than was exported the year before.

One manufactory of silverware in this country has the credit of working up more silver than all similar manufactories in the United Kingdom of Great Britian.

Informal negotiations for a new treaty between this country and Mexico are said to be pending. The proposed treaty calls for additional security on the border line.

The imports into the Hawaiian Islands from the United States have increased from $947,260 44 in 1875 to $1,545,136 87 for the year ending Sept. 9, 1877.

At the present moment 4,000,000 Hindoo and 100,000 Mohammedan children are attending schools in India, and 50,000 to 60,000 of them are receiving instruction to the English universities' standard.

Twenty tons of alabaster have been imported from Italy by an organ company of Boston. It is to be sawn into blocks and manufactured into the recently discovered substance, "lithophane ivory," and used entirely for the keyboards of organs and pianos.

That sturdy old warrior, Emperor William of Germany, will celebrate his golden wedding next Spring. Great festivities will mark the occasion, and it is said that Queen Victoria and other European potentates will visit Berlin to participate in the ceremonies.

Gen Grant has been treated with great ceremony on his visit to Paris, a dinner being given on the evening of the 1st, the at Elysee, by Pres. MacMahon in his honor, at which many distinguished guests were present, including all the members of the cabinet and their ladies.

Not a bank failure in Holland for forty years, notes everywhere at par with gold, insurance one-half of one per cent., railroad fares a cent a mile, and dishonestly so rare that it is hardly known by sight to the bulk of the inhabitants, reports the United States Minister at The Hague,

During this year the consumption of cotton reached the highest point ever attained in this country. The value of our cotton fabrics exported has increased $7,000,000 within two years, or from $3,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1875, to $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1877.

A new invention—a torpedo balloon—is undergoing a test in Bridgeport, Conn. It is designed to convey torpedoes by means of a balloon above a hostile army or city, when by an automatic arrangement they are detached and exploded by a guage fuse. It has attracted much attention, and an agent of the Russian government is observing the experiment.

Different nations, in the early periods of their civilization, have used almost everything for money that had any commercial value. In ancient Syracuse and Britian tin was used, while Sparta used iron, and Rome and Germany used cattle. In Carthage a preparation of leather was employed: Russia used platinum from the Ural Mountains. Lead was used in Burmah, nails in Scotland, silk in China, cowry-shells in Africa, tobacco in Virginia, codfish in Newfoundland, bullets in Massachusetts, wampum among the Indians, logwood in Campeachy, sugar in the West Indies, soap in Mexico, and silver among the Hebrews (see Genesis xxiii., 16.) Thus every nation has commodities desired by the people as the medium of effecting exchanges.

The population of Richmond, Va., despite the war, has double since 1860. From a local census, instituted last year, the population was shown to have reached upward of 72,000. It has five railways outlets, James River and the canal running to the Alleghanies. Work on the James River, looking to the accommodation of vessels of heavy draft, is progressing rapidly. Richmond numbers 381 factories of all sorts. Everything is made there now, from a lucifier match to a stem engine. The sales of her factories in the year 1876 reached the sum of $22,424,680. Her wheat and corn mills produced to the value of $2,347,000; her forty-one tobacco factories $12,058,300; her iron works $2,032,780. These are examples of what has been accomplished in a town laid waste by fire and war from 1861 to 1865.

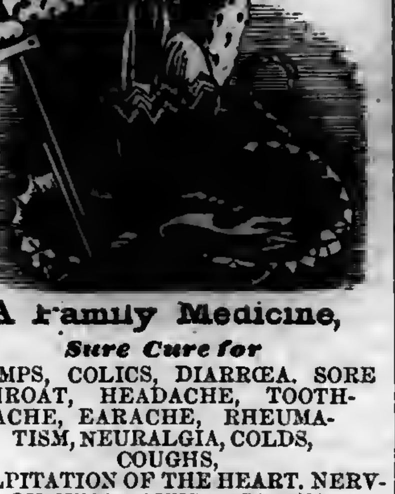
THE ORIGINAL
KING OF PAIN.



A Family Medicine,
Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTH-ACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. We have the best Imitation Gold Watch in the Market for Trading Purposes. The metal is a composition of other metals, so closely resembling gold that the best judges find it difficult to detect the difference, except by a chemical test, and it is the best substitute for gold known. AMERICAN MOVEMENT, EXPANSION BALANCE, BEAUTIFULLY ENGRAVED OR ENGINE TURNED HUNTING CASES, and equal in appearance to a GOLD WATCH THAT COSTS from $150 to $200. It sells and trades readily, for from $50 to $100, and if you wish a watch for your own use or to make money on, try this. Owing to our large sales, we are enabled to reduce the price of them to $12 each with an elegant Chain attached. They are used on Railroads, Steamers, and in Manufactories, and other places where accurate time is required, and gives general satisfaction. We send them by Mail or Express, on receipt of $12, to any part of the Country, or it will be sent C.O.D. when the customer desires and remits $3 on account. These Elegant CHAINS weigh about Fifty Pennyweights, and the same pattern in pure gold would cost $150. We sell these Chains at $3 each. But we sell the Watch and Chain for $12, sent by Mail in a Registered Package, post-paid, to any Post Office in the United States. We Sell the Watch without the Chain for $10.

FOR A START!

As Sunday-school teachers are already on the lookout for the best helps to use in 1878, a plan is offered by which THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES can be taken for three months on trial at a very small cost. The Times is a 16 page weekly paper. Among the regular lesson writers during the present year, in addition to the editors, H. Clay Trumbull and George A. Peltz, have been Prof. Tayler Lewis, Prof. A. C. Kendrick, Rev. Newman Hall, of London, and "Faith Latimer." Special articles on the lessons have also been given by many distinguished Bible students. The plans for 1878 include writers not inferior to these.

HOW TO GET IT. If you will send your name and post-office address, together with twenty-five cents, to the address given below, you will receive The Times every week for three months. This offer is only for new subscribers (persons who have not taken the paper within the last six months), the regular price being $2.15 a year. For seven cents additional, a specimen copy of the Scholars' Quarterly will be sent. Specimens of the Weekly Lesson Leaf sent free.

THE SCHOLARS' QUARTERLY (issued every three months) is likely to be far more widely used during next year than ever before. Its circulation during the last quarter reached 115,000 copies. A large share of the best conducted Sunday-schools throughout the country are now using it in place of the ordinary question book. Its editors are determined that no effort or expense shall be spared to keep it in advance of all the lesson helps for scholars. Every superintendent and teacher in the country should examine it before deciding upon lesson helps for next year.

ITS COST is 25 cents a year, or $25 for a hundred copies a year. Sent by mail without cost of postage to subscribers. Subscriptions taken for three or six months at the yearly rate; under 10 copies, three months, seven cents each. To supply YOUR CLASS would cost:—For five scholars, one year, $1.25; three months, 35 cents; for ten scholars, one year, $2.50; three months, 63 cents. If ordered by the year, they will be sent each quarter in ample time for use. The issue for the fourth quarter of this year (October, November, December) is now ready. Send seven cents for a specimen copy. Postage stamps may be sent in place of currency, if more convenient. Address, prevail, but owing to the want of roads leading into the interior, and the hostility of the native Kings who swarm in the jungle, the Liberians are compelled to remain and shake on the coast. Many travelers have told substantially the same story of Liberia, but they have been denounced as enemies of negro civilization, and as persons quite unworthy of belief. Now that the State Department shows that Liberia is only an African "Eden," perhaps it will be more difficult to lure colored men to leave their American homes to die in Africa. It is significant that no Liberian President has been exhibited here for some years, and the public will now suspect either that there is no one in Liberia sufficiently healthy to act as President, or that the Liberian President, if there is one, has not strength enough to leave his bed and escape from the plague-stricken Republic. While the similarity between Liberia and "Eden" is painfully apparent, it must not be forgotten that the original founders of the colonization scheme were among the noblest of men, and that the honesty and good faith of the Colonization Society are beyond suspicion. But these good men have permitted their faith in a theory to blind them to facts, and dreaming of an African Republic has shut their eyes to the realities of fever and idleness.

It seems scarcely credible at present that there was a time when American philanthropists seriously proposed to transport our entire colored population to Liberia, so that the white race could possess a monopoly of America. Some intelligent colored man ought now to propose a scheme for the colonization of white Americans in Greenland. The beauties of the bracing Greenland climate could be elegantly pictured. It might be admitted that at first the colonist would find it unusually cold, but as soon as he became acclimatized he would not mind the cold. The prospect of civilizing the Esquimaux and of establishing a vast Arctic republic, with an exclusively white government and a military academy into which no colored cadet could intrude, might awaken the enthusiasm of the American white men, and induce them to embark in the ships of the Greenland Colonization Society. Of course, the colonists would die of cold and hunger and scurvy, and would bitterly regret having left a comfortable home for the barren ice-fields of the polar region; but if they did not live long enough to return and tell their dismal story, and if every traveler who visited them and brought back a truthful report were to be denounced as a wicked enemy of the white race, the stream of emigration might be kept up. Colonizing Greenland with white men is at least as feasible and desirable as colonizing Africa with colored men, and of the two countries, the former is rather more healthy and attractive than the latter.

It is to be hoped the report published by the State Department will finally prick the Liberian bubble. The colonization scheme is a disastrous failure, and has wrought untold misery. Instead of subscribing money to send more colored people to die in Liberia, it would be more charitable to subscribe money to bring the sorrowing colonists back to a land where the whitewash brush is always in demand, and where no industrious man, whatever may be his color, need starve.

The American Missionary Association.

The American Missionary Association is the Missionary Society of the Congregational Church. It lately held its Anniversary in Syracuse, New York. From the report of the Executive Committee, the Northern gathers the following interesting facts:

"The educational work of the Association has been vigorously prosecuted during the year. Some schools have been overcrowded. The Normal school work is, for the present, of great and increasing importance. Of the 5500 students in its twenty-six schools under the care of one hundred and thirty-four teachers, more than one-fifth are now directly preparing to teach and probably three-fourths will teach as soon as they are competent.

The Association has three theological schools, at Nashville, Atlanta and New Orleans, all doing good work. The students number seventy-four. At Fisk University, ground has been broken for the Livingston Memorial Hall, intended to be a training school for missionaries for the African field, with a special course of instruction.

Four new churches have been organized—making fifty-nine under the care of the Association, with a membership of 4,048.

The African Mission was a year ago in great weakness. There have been found during the year, three men of negro race, a minister, a physician and a teacher, all born in slavery, all educated since the war, who, with their families, are on the sea sailing for Africa. This is the beginning under the Association of this foreign work by freedmen trained here for work in Africa. To reinforce them, and finally to establish schools and churches there, is the aim of the Association.

The work among the Chinese on the Western coast has been carried on in eleven schools, by seventeen teachers, with 1,155 pupils. A Christian association and home has been kept up by the Chinese converts, the Barnes school building erected, and despite the occasional hoodlum outbreaks, the work progresses.

Of its Indian Work, the report recognizes an improved administration of a bad policy. Six Indian agents are nominated by the Association and have done good and faithful service. Three missionaries have been sustained among the Indians, and seven teachers, two churches, with thirty-seven members, and five schools, with two hundred and eighty-seven pupils. The hindrances are many, the progress slow, but real and evident.

The total income from all sources for the year has been $209,695,26, expended and due, $179,279 17. A year ago the debt was reported at 93,232.99; it is now, $62,816,90; a reduction of $30,416.09.

The following statistics comprise a general summary of the work and workers of the Association:—

The Savannah Conference.

The Conference met at Savannah, Nov. 1st, Bishop Harris presiding. The session was an interesting one, and a good increase in membership and benevolent collections were reported. The Methodist Advocate says:

Sunday was Bishop Harris' sixtieth birthday. He attended the Conference love feast in the morning, preached with unusual liberty and great acceptability at ten and a half o'clock, and ordained the deacons. He also attended the service a three o'clock and ordained the elders, and spoke in Trinity M. E. Church, South, at night. This is one of the largest and finest churches in Savannah. It was crowded to hear the Bishop, quite a number of colored people in the gallery, and hundreds were turned away for want of room. The Bishop spoke clearly and forcibly, giving a brief sketch of his travels around the world, and dwelling upon the mission work in China. The congregation listened with close attention, and we have no doubt that lasting good was done, both in behalf of missions and of fraternity between the Churches.

Egypt.

ITS HIEROGLYPHICS.—The more the ancient hieroglyphics are deciphered and the Assyrian arrowhead inscriptions are understood, so much the more is the Bible story of the East corroborated. The greatest Egyptologist of the day, Professor Heinrich Brugsch, has just published a "History of Egypt under the Pharaohs," a work of profound interest and study, but written in a style so plain as to be attractive to those who are not especially Oriental scholars. The twelfth section of this work treats of the rule of Joseph in Egypt, which commands so large a share of Christian sympathy. In this he presents from his reading of the hieroglyphics, the most remarkable ratification of the Mosaic account. With joyful satisfaction Brugsch gives extracts which refer to Joseph and his lord during the period of the seven years of famine in Egypt. He finds these in the tomb of an ancient Egyptian bearing the name of Baba, who lived at that time. This Baba was kind of heart, and the gods had granted him abundance of wealth on earth. The story goes on to say: I gathered grain as were I a friend of the gods of harvests. I was careful at the period of seed-time. And when now a famine arose that lasted many years, then I distributed grain to the city in its distress. Now these "many years" could not have been a transient period of famine, but a determined historical period. Since the recurring famine of each consecutive year was a great exception, and perhaps happened only once in all Egyptian history, this is doubtless the period of seven years under the Pharoah of Joseph, and as Baba lived at the time of the shepherd kings, Brugsch infers that this famine alluded to could be no other than that related by Joseph. The simple words of the Bible story and the inscription in the tomb of Baba are too clear and convincing to leave a doubt as to their allusion. the narrative of the Sacred Book of the elevation of Joseph, under one of the shepherd kings. and of his life at the court, of the reception of his father and brothers, all coincide, in the mind of Brugsch, with the time and place given in in the tomb of Baba, Josephs Pharaoh reigned in Zoan, the subsequent city of Rameses, with a thoroughly Egyptian court. His Pharaoh lets the knee be bowed before him to express the feeling of reverence,—and this very expression is found in the vocabulary of the hieroglyphics. Pharaoh grants to him the high dignity of Cultivator of the Land, which expression is found in the old Egyptian script. The name of Joseph's wife is strictly Egyptian. The father of his wife, one of the priests, is a genuine Egyptian, whose name is found in the language of the land, and means a "gift of the sun." The chamberlain who bought the boy Joseph from his brothers, and whose wife tempted the virtue of the young servant, bore a strictly Egyptian name. Joseph rose to the highest power beside his king, and bore the name of Adon in the Egyptian language, and this Adon, now found on the monuments, indicates a ruler of high degree. Thus, from time to time, are recorded the historical testimonies to the truth of the Bible story.—National Repository for December.

A Wonderful Hymn-Book.

A Courier reporter, while conversing with Rev. H. M. Osbon, D. D., about the new style of hymn-book, elicted the following: "By-the-way," said the Doctor, "in my younger days, (and that is some time ago, for I've preached fifty years,) when I was a pastor of a church up the river, I had a zealous hard-working member who, for a great many years, had been a class-leader in the church. The great drawback to his usefulness was that he, being a German, spoke the English language very imperfectly and created many a hearty laugh in the class-room when it was not desired. One of his peculiarities consisted in carrying around his old-fashioned, brass-clasped hymn-book. "Now," says the dominie "the history of that hymn-book goes to prove the old adage that 'truth is stranger than fiction.' Brother Snyder came to this country when quite young, and received the hymn-book from his parents with the injunction to read it every day, and never to part with it under any consideration. While crossing the Atlantic he made it a daily practice to open and read his much beloved book. One morning while he was so engaged the ship gave a lurch, and the book quitely dropped overboard. The owner was inconsolable, and mourned its loss for five days. At the expiration of that time the sailors were successful in hauling a shark on board; after it was cut open, what should be seen glittering in the sun's rays, but the lost hymn-book of Brother Snyder. A few years later, while living in a tenement house in New York City, he had the misfortune to lose all his worldly goods, and, what he prized still more highly, his hymn-book, which had escaped watery grave in the ocean only to be devoured by the other element, fire. After the lapse of some time, workmen begun moving away the debris, and on lifting a heavy stone there lay exposed to view Brother Snyder's songs of the Fatherland. Strange to say, the book was almost uninjured, the edges being only slightly burned, and the pages somewhat soiled by the action of the water. In after years, when Brother Snyder wished to be very impressive on his everlasting theme, 'A good Providence,' he would rise, hold the book aloft and exclaim, 'Mine friends, dat ish de book dat swallowed de whale; dat ish de book dat wash burned up in Noo York.' After the old gentleman's death," continued Dr. Osbon, "I wrote the history of this wonderful book, and deposited it, with the book in the University at Middletown, Conn., where they can be seen at anytime.—Roundout Courier.

Heroism in Humble Life.

A common sewer, of great depth, had been opened at Noyon, for the qurpose of repair, and was carelessly left unprotected during the night. Four men, passing that way in the dark, fell in, and it was near midnight before their perilous situation became known. Among all who crowded to the opening, not one was found courageous enough to descend to the assistance of the unfortunate wretches, who appeared already in a state of suffocation from the poisonous vapor they were compelled to breathe. The wives and children of the men in vain besought the bystanders for aid, until Catherine Vasseur, the daughter of a French peasant, and at that time only seventeen years of age, appeared on the scene.—Moved by sympathy, and careless of the danger to herself, the young girl insisted on being lowered into the sewer, and, having taken a rope with her for the purpose, she succeeded in fastening it round two of the men, and, assisted by those above, she had the happiness of restoring them to their wives and families. Again she descended, and now her breath began to fail her. She succeeded, however, in fastening the rope round the body of a third man, and, in a fainting condition, had sufficient presence of mind to knot up the end with her own luxuriant tresses. We may imagine the astonishment of the dastardly fellows above when they drew the man to the surface, and found the all but inanimate body of Catherine swinging by her hair to the end of the rope. Fresh air and stimulants soon restored the brave girl, and the third man lived also; the fourth perished.

So great was the admiration excited by Catherine Vasseur's devotion, when the news spread through Noyon, that a solemn Te Deum was ordered by the bishop, and the members of the corporation marched in procession to the church. Nor was this all. The Duke of Orleans, the Bishop of Foyon, and the magistrates tendered her the public thanks of the town, and she was presented with a civic crown, and an emblamatic medal commemorative of her heroism and self-devotion.

The Noblest Life.

Higher still is be who is never so happy as when he is making other people happy, when he is relieving pain, and giving pleasure to two or three or more people about him. Higher yet is he whose chief joy it is to labor at great and eternal thoughts, in which lies bound up the happiness of a whole nation, and perhaps a whole world, at a future time when he will be mouldering in his grave. Any man who is capable of this joy, and at the same time of spreading comfort and pleasure among the few who live round about him, is the noblest human being we can conceive of, he is also the happiest. It is true that his capacity for pain is exercised and enlarged, as well as his power of feeling pleasure. But what pains such a man is the vice and folly and misery of his fellow-men; and he knows that these must melt away hereafter in the light of the great ideas which he perceives to be in store for them, while his pleasure, being in the faith of a better future, is as vivid and as sure as great thoughts are clear and eternal. For an illustration of this noblest means of happiness, we had better look to the highest instance of all, I have always thought that we are apt to dwell too much on the suffering and sorrow of the lot and mind of Christ. Our reverence and sympathy should be more with his abounding joy. I think those who read with clear eyes and an open mind will see evidences of an unutterable joy in his words, may almost think they hear it in his tones. when he promised heaven to the disinterested, and earth to the meek, and satisfaction to the earnest; when he welcomed the faith of the centurion, and the hope of the penitent, and the charity of the widow; when he foresaw the incoming of the Gentiles, and knew that heaven and earth should pass away sooner than his words of life and truth. The sufferings of the holy can never surely transcend their peace; and whose fullness of joy can compare with theirs?—Harriet Martineau.

Our Future.

[From a recent lecture by Rev. Joseph Cook]

With whatever telescope I sweep the horizon I, for one, stand in awe. I set no dates; I seek to establish approximately no definite numbers. I assert only that America can sustain a larger population than Europe, Asia, and Africa together; that since it can, probably it ultimately will; that we may expect as large an average population as Europe now possesses; that America is, therefore, yet in its infancy; that for these immense numbers of human family we stand in trust; and that the age, therefore, has not yet ceased to be a crisis.

It would have been worth something at Thermopylæ to have foreseen Salamis; and at Austerlitz, Sedan; and at Runnymede, America. It would have been worth something to Paul, when he went out of Ostian gate to die, to have foreseen Constantine, and Augustine, Luther, and Churches on which the sun never sets. It would be worth something at the parting from Delft Haven, or among the secreted graves on Plymouth Hill, to have forseen the savages shut up behind the Mississippi, and church bells mingling their murmurs with the Pacific seas. But, undoubtedly, God's plans for the future are as majestic as those for the past; and so it ought to be worth something now to foresee what can be in America, and therefore probably will be.

"The Action of Alcohol on the Body and on the Mind."

This is the title of a new pamphlet recently published by the National Temperance Society, containing two able and important lectures delivered by Benjamin W. Richardson, M. A., M. D., F. R. S., of England, recently delivered at Cambridge and at Oxford, and which were published by special request, and have had a very large circulation in the United Kingdom. They are the result of careful and extended researches as to the results of alcohol from a scientific standpoint, and are among the ablest contributions to this branch of the subject.

Dr. Richardson is well known as Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, and Author of the six celebrated Cantor Lectures, which have had a wide circulation both in England and America. These last new lectures are adapted for circulation among all classes, and should have a wide circulation. Bound together in one pamphlet, 12mo, 60 pages, price 20 cents, thick edition, with covers; $15 per hundred, thin paper, without covers. Send for it. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, New York.

Defending the Bible,

Never was a better answer made than a poor Irishman made to a Catholic priest while defending himself for reading the Bible.

"But," said the priest, "the Bible is for the priests, and not for the likes o' you."

"Ah! but, sir," he answered, "I was reading in my Bible, 'You shall read it to your children,' an' sure the priests have got no children."

"But, Michael," says the priest, "you cannot understand the Bible. It's not o' you to understand it, my man."

"Ah! very well, your riverence, if I cannot understand it, it will do me no harm, and what I can understand does me a heap o' good."

"Very well, Mike," said the priest, "you must go to church, and the church will teach you; the church will give you the milk of the Word."

"And where does the church get it from but out of the Bible? Ah! your riverence, I would rather keep the cow myself."

Apologies.

Do not engage in the objectionable practice in the pulpit of making apologies. If you have nothing worth saying the people will find it out soon enough without your telling them; if you have a really valuable thought, they will consider your apology a misstatement, or an act of unpardonable vanity. In either case it is better to speak out simply and plainly what you have to say. You need have no fears that the people will not know the value of your utterances. They know better than you know yourself, and [illegible] all your attempts to hide [illegible] defects under shallow [illegible] estimate your services for [illegible] what you are worth.—[illegible]

New Subscribers.

We are already receiving some good lists of new subscribers for 1878, and the indications are favorable that the canvass the next few weeks will be vigorous and successful.

We ask that all the preachers will go to work at once and push the canvass. Two dollars pays for the SOUTHWESTERN for a year and all who subscribe now, get the paper for the remainder of 1877 and during all of 1878. Our terms are cash in advance. Address:

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOUTHWESTERN:

We ask every one of you to read each line of the following address:

I. General Remarks.

1. The Southwestern Christian Advocate is an absolute necessity to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. That work is largely of a missionary type, needing the constant assistance and inspiration of a weekly newspaper.

2. The SOUTHWESTERN has been a success beyond the expectations of even its best friends. It lived and grew for three years as a private enterprise, and so important was it considered to our Southern work by the last General Conference that it was adopted as an official journal of the Church.

3. The course of the SOUTHWESTERN has been decided and consistent on all questions relating to our work in the South. While others have vacillated between seasons of excessive gush or bitter denunciation on "Fraternity" and kindred topics, this paper has always, in a dignified and positive way, demanded the proper recognition of our Church and ministers in the South, and commended those who in any way gave that recognition.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN has done, and is in a condition to do, more for the colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church than any other paper in the Church. This paper has from the first waged an unceasing war against the spirit of caste, both in State and Church, and has never once lowered its standard to the demands of the enemies of the colored people, or their friends who, from motives of policy, have aided to perpetuate the spirit and fact of caste in Church or State.

5. The location of the SOUTHWESTERN in the chief metropolis of the South, its independent and consistent course, give it an extended influence among all classes of people. This is proved by the fact that it has, in the city of New Orleans, a larger circulation than any other religious journal.

6. January first the SOUTHWESTERN will be Enlarged by the addition of four columns, and it is our purpose to make the paper better than ever.

II. To Our People.

1. A large number of you are Local Preachers, or Exhorters, or Trustees, or Stewards or Class Leaders, in the Church. How can you be good officers in the Lord's army without your Church paper, to tell you of your Church duties, and report the condition and movements of that army?

2. Many of you are Sunday School Officers and Teachers. The SOUTHWESTERN gives every week more than a column on the Sunday School lesson for the Sunday following.

3. As Christians you want to be intelligent and progressive. You want to know of the work of God throughout the world. You want to read how God's people die. You want to read about your conference and preachers. You want to read how God's work is going on in your own and other Churches. How can you know these things without you take your Church paper?

4. Fathers and Mothers want their children to grow up to be moral and respectable. If so, those children must be instructed by good reading. Every number of the SOUTHWESTERN contains something to instruct and inspire the young.

5. Our Young Men and Women beginning life want to begin it right. The ambition to be as good as the best is noble. But to be good and successful, young men and women must be intelligent and moral, and faithful. Nothing will help to these good qualities more than the reading every week of a good newspaper.

6. Two Dollars a Year pays for the SOUTHWESTERN. That is less than four cents a week. Think how much money you spend foolishly before you talk about the times being too hard to take your Church paper.

III. To Our Preachers.

1. Next to the Bible and Discipline you need your Church paper, For Your Own Good, and next to preaching, and doing pastoral work, you must put your Church paper among your people, For Their Good. The families who read their Church paper are your most intelligent hearers, pay you best and pay the most to the benevolent collections. If, therefore, you want an intelligent congregation, and want to get your salary, and want to make good reports to Conference, put your Church paper into every family in your congregation, whether they are members of the Church or not.

2. You want to be Successful Pastors. The SOUTHWESTERN will help you. It will instruct your church officers in their duty, and your Sunday School officers and teachers in their duties, and by your people reading about other churches and pastors they will know better how to take care of and appreciate you.

3. As Leaders Among Your People you will have influence for good only as your people see you are their real friend. If you try to keep the light from [illegible] they will soon distrust and forsake you.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN is your Conference Paper, and will contain the notices of your Quarterly Meetings and District Conferences, and the accounts of the Church work among the Churches of your Conference.

IV. Our Terms.

1. We [illegible] the Postage ourselves, so that subscribers have only to pay [illegible] two [illegible] and then get the paper every week from the Post [illegible] In New Orleans the paper is delivered at the door.
2. Our [illegible] is Cash in Advance. This is best for all.
3. We send the paper for one year—

The Cane-Sugar Industry.

Special Report, No. 1, of the Department of Agriculture is a "Statement showing the Condition and Prospects of the Cane-Sugar Industry in the United States," and a valuable public document. The new Commissioner of Agriculture, Wm. G. LeDuc, soon after his induction into office, directed his attention to the condition of the sugar interests of the country. Because of the superior fertility and productiveness of Louisiana lands, a circular letter was addressed to leading planters of this State, requesting their attention and valuable experience, in advising the Department how best to give encouragement to the industry.

The facts elicited were thought to be of sufficient importance to warrant publication, and are given in a 40 page pamphlet, entitled as above. We give an outline of the summary of deductions:

1. The country pays annually to foreign countries, for imported sugars, millions of dollars, which by due protection of the home industry would be saved. During the years from 1860 to 1876 statistics show that the United States produced less than 13 per cent of the cane-sugar, and little more than 21 per cent of molasses consumed, and from this statement Pacific coast importations or excepted because Treasury reports conform to fiscal and not calendar years. It is also claimed that importation is a necessity, and not to be regarded as a direct competition with our own product.

2. Louisiana, the chief source of domestic supply, produced in 1876–7 63 per cent per cent less than in 1861–2. A very insignificant part of cane-bearing lands were cultivated in the years of largest production.

3. Great losses have entailed from agricultural methods, and mechanical appliances used in extracating the saccharine matter; the loss through unscientific handling of the bagasse alone amounting to at least 40 per cent.

4. An improved system of labor, involving the cultivation of smaller tracts by individual owners, and a more scientific handling of the cane, would largely increase production.

5. The stock has greatly detriorated from successive plantings of the same seed-cane.

6. There are immense tracts of unoccupied and abandoned sugar lands purchaseable at low rates.

7. These lands will be open to small cultivators, after their protection by good levees, the establishment of central factories, and construction of transportation ways.

8. A large area, heretofore highly productive is unsafely worked, on account of inundations arising from defective levees.

9. The new system of ownership of small farms, now being encouraged, is conducive of individual independence, educational and refining influence, and will build up and energize thriving communities, such as exist wherever self-reliant and intelligent labor flourishes.

The sugar cultivators recommend to the Department a protection of lands from overflow by means of a levee system to be maintained by the general government; the cleaning up and draining of swamp and low-lands, somewhat after the Holland system; improvement of seed-cane through importations from other latitudes, to be distributed among planters; the appointment of practical chemists to study the operations of manufacture on the ground, analyze soils, provide means for converting trash-cane into a fertilizer, and to suggest means of recuperating exhausted soils; the establishment of our agricultural college, station or farm, for determining questions bearing upon the sugar industry, since individual tests lack thoroughness, and time and expense are required for results.

The commissioner publishes an epitome of the Louisiana letters received, twenty-seven in number, and all available statistics seem to be pertinent to the subject in hand. The sugar industry ought to receive more serious consideration, as a direct result of the important compendium of knowledge, bearing upon that branch of agriculture now given to the public by Commissioner LeDuc.

The enemies of the Southern Pacific Railroad seem to be increasing in Congress.

The Banner District.

The Murfreesboro District (now divided) of the Tennessee Conference of the M. E. Church lays claims to the above appellation. The Holston, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Central Alabama and Savannah Conferences have been held, and excepting the Holston and Savannah, the benevolent collections reported from the Murfreesboro District exceed the entire amount reported from any of the other conferences, and only fall ten dollars short of the Savannah Conference with its seventy-two appointments, the former reporting $5 90 and the latter $6 00. The District raised $112 for the Episcopal Fund or $46 07 more than the Savannah Conference, and raised $310 for missions, or $85 more than it was assessed. The Presiding Elder also reported $170 raised for periodicals, and received from his friends a superb family bible as a testimonial of their appreciation of his labor in the good cause. The District had twenty-two appointments each of which contributed $5 to the Episcopal Fund. Rev. Calvin Pickett, who was presiding Elder of the District, stands foremost among the successful financiers in our Southern work. He is a veteran soldier of pure christian character, Methodist to the core, and knows no such word as fail. We were a united conference when these grand results were realized, but now that we are divided we can form no predictions as to the future.

C. S. SMITH.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 16, '77.

The Late Dr. Wm. Hunter.

Dr. C. C. McCabe in the New York Advocate gives a beautiful tribute to the late Dr. Hunter by recalling a few of his many choice hymns. The hymn here referred to and quoted, we first heard sung by Rev. J. S. Cummings, of Central Illinois Conference, the dear pastor of our early christian life. Dr. McCabe says.

Of his hymns the most beautiful, and one most freighted with Gospel truth, is that one which is known in the Pittsburgh Conference as "Sansom's experience." Brother Sansom was himself a prince among preachers—a man of rarest eloquence, with a voice of wondrous melody, and a heart all surcharged with love divine. One Sabbath morning he arose in the conference love-feast to tell his experience. He described the spot where he found salvation; he told of the darkness, the struggle, the despair, and then of the mighty Redeemer coming swiftly to his rescue. It was a prose poem; it was the "old story," told with the eloquence of an Apollos.

The congregation was wrought up to a tempest of emotion. Hunter went home, sat down with his pen, and, without changing very much the phraseology of Sansom, threw that experience into a hymn which I am quite conscious will never, never die. Long as Christians live who are consciously saved, long as God has children on earth who can look back to the time and place when the surrender was made and the great transaction done, so long will this immortal hymn be sung to voice the praises of souls conscious of victory. Let me quote it entire:

There is a spot to me more dear
Than native vale or mountain;
A spot for which affection's tear
Springs grateful from its fountain;
'Tis not where kindred souls abound,
Though that were almost heaven;
But where I first my Savior found,
And felt my sins forgiven.

Hard was my toil to reach the shore,
Long tossed upon the ocean;
Above me was the thunder's roar,
Beneath the wave's commotion.
Darkly the fall of night was thrown.
Around me faint with terror;
In that dark hour how did my groan
Ascend for years of error!

Sinking and panting as for breath,
I knew not hope was near me;
I cried, O save me, Lord, from death!
Immortal Jesus, hear me!
Then quick as thought I felt him mine;
My Savior stood before me;
I saw his brightness around me shine,
And shouted glory! glory!

O sacred hour, O hallowed spot,
Where love divine first found me!
Wherever falls my distant lot,
My heart will linger round thee;
And when from earth I rise to soar
Up to my home in heaven,
Down will I cast my eyes once more
Where I was first forgiven.

Women of the Orient.

We have received from Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, an exceedingly interesting volume entitled "Women of the Orient," by the Rev. R. C. Houghton, A. M., who was one of the travelling companions of Bishop Harris in his tour around the world. It is a book of five hundred pages profusely illustrated, and gives in a most readable and attractive form, information as to the intellectual, moral and social condition of women in China, Japan and India. We will very soon give a full review of the work and give extracts. It is on sale at R. J. Harp's, 112 Camp. Price, $2 00.

Bishop Harris and Our Work in the Central South.

The Methodist Advocate gives a cheering account of the state of the Church in Georgia, Tennessee and Alabama, the conferences in these States having just been held. We quote the following:

Bishop Harris has done many very excellent things in his tour through the South. Though not able to preach at all of the conferences, he has talked much at each, greatly to the edification and profit of all. By most he will never be forgotten. While holding up a high standard of Christian and ministerial excellence as the ideal to be attained, and though positive and forcible in many utterances, sometimes not sparing rebuke, where it seemed imperatively needed, his kindness, infinite good humor and zeal for the Church won the confidence and affection of all, and for years, for all time to come, our work in the South will be the purer, more vigorous and progressive for his presidency over these conferences. The universal prayer for him is, May he live forever and come South often!

On the whole, our work in the Central South is in a better condition than ever before. Of this fact there is not room for doubt. Though opposed by some, misunderstood by many, and not unfrequently misrepresented in the North and South, the Methodist Episcopal Church advances steadily against wind and tide among all people, winning friends and supporters among men of all ranks and conditions. If it continues to follow the policy of peace and love, maintain a high standard of morality and prudently care for its interests among all the people, not forgetting the Lord's poor, as we believe it wil, it is certain to prevail in the South. Is there a doubt that our blessed Savior will continue to reign in heaven? No. Nor is there a doubt that the Methodist Episcopal Church has succeeded, does succeed and will continue to succeed in the South.

"The Women in Black."

The Picayune of the 11th inst, published a highly sensational ghost story under above caption. The startling headlines told of the mysterious appearance—how she held undisputed sway over a portion of the city, and how eight valliant policemen had succumbed to the apparition. The publication created quite an excitement among the ignorant and credulous—the believers in spiritualism and the worshippers of old horse-shoes, nu the Times of the 14th set the matter to rest as follows:

The story was originated by some hackman, just for a lark, and in a measure was not without grounds on which to base a yarn to frighten women, children, and weak-minded, superstitious, or semi-inebriated men. The ghost (!) is an unfortunate women, who has seen better days, but alas, reverse after reverse dragged her down, until she drained the bitter cup of povety to the dregs. Her soul revolted at an open life of shame, and as the only alternative she became a waiter girl in a down-town saloon. Her refined nature shrunk from the gross familiarites of intoxicated men, yet she had to act her part and practice all the fascinating wiles of her sex to earn her livelihood. Thus she has existed, wasting away, until now she is but a spectre of her former self.

At mid-night the discordant strains, ycelpt music which lure men into the saloon where she is employed ceases, and she is free to seek her home. Clad in her faded waterproof alone she winds her weary way up Rampart street, heedless of the insults of men who take advantage of her condition to insult her. She confessed to our reporter that she has been stopped many a night, but when she turned her white face towards her insulters, and in one look from her lustrus eyes flashed out the scorn she felt for them, the men have passed on with a muttered aplogy.

Despatches from Washington indicate a strong opposition to the confirmation of Mr. Lawrence as Collector of this port. With this report comes also the gratifying one that General Cyrus Bussey was spoken of as likely to be appointed if Mr. Lawrence was not confirmed. The New Orleans Times of Tuesday in speaking of the report respecting Gen. Bussey says:

It need involve no disparagement of Mr. Lawrence to say that General Bussey seems to possess the respect and confidence of the business community in a very marked degree, and, whether the demonstration signified much or little, this feeling was universally and openly manifested.

Robert H. Shannon, formerly United States Commissioner at New Orleans, was arrested in New York on the 14th inst., on charges connected with a cotton case. He was committed on a capias of removal and bailed in $1500.

Bishop Campbell, of the African M. E. Church, is in the city.

The tide of victory seems now fully turned in favor of the Russians in the Eastern war. Kars the great stronghold in Asiatic Turkey has fallen into the hands of the Russians with 10,000 prisoners and a vast amount of military stores.

Five thousand Turks were killed and wounded in the battle, and about three thousand Russians. This great victory gives all of Eastern Turkey into to the hands of Russia.

In European Turkey the interest centers at Plevna, which is still held by the Turks. But the Russians are on all sides and the fall of Plevna seems only a question of time.

Both Russia and Turkey still claim that they will accept no terms of mediation, but another victory or two by Russia, such as has been gained at Kars will end the war, and Russia can dictate her own terms, hindered only by what England and the other European powers may forbid.

The City.

Congressman Darrell was in town last week.

Ex-U. S. Marshal Pitkin has returned from the North. He is in excellent spirits and health.

Bishop Paine of the M. E. Church, South, passed through New Orleans last week on his way to Texas.

Major General Godfrey Weitzel is in the city on duty in the hydrographic survey of the river.

Hon. W. L. McMillen was confirmed by the Senate, on the 15th, as Pension Agent, vice R. H. Isabelle, at New Orleans.

Governor Nicholls will issue a proclamation fixing a Thanksgiveng day on the same date with the one appointed by President Hayes—the 29th inst.

Mayor Pillsbury reported to the Council on the 13th inst., that Recorder S. J. Smith had failed to pay into the city treasury the fines collected by him since November 1.

The comptroller of the currency, Treasury Department, Washington, has declared another dividend of ten per cent. for the creditors of the Crescent City National Bank.

The gas contract is about to expire, and Administrators Diamond, Brown and Edwards, are a committee to "determine the best and most economical means of lighting the city."

The New Orleans & Jackson Railroad desires to land passengers at or near Canal street. The sale or lease of the neutral ground on Claiborne is suggested, for a track and depot.

The House Committee on Private Land Claims is considering the petition of Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines, for the enforcement of the Supreme Court decree, granting her titles to properties in New Orleans.

Assistant United States Treasurer B. F. Flanders, has removed his office from the Mint building to the Customhouse. This change is gratifying to the government employes, who will receive and have cashed their checks within convenient distance.

R. B. Edgeworth, formerly of the Metropolitan Police, was arrested and imprisoned on the charge of breach of trust and embezzlement, preferred by Seth Trufant. He latterly by a card withdrew the charge, and declared that it was made in error.

Two boys, aged thirteen and fourteen years respectively, in a yard on Front Levee street, were playing with nails, which they heated and hammered in imitation of blacksmiths. After having a nice time a quarrel arose when one plunged a red-hot nail into the abdomen of the other, inflicting what will probably prove a mortal wound.

Captain Eads' jetty dredgeboat, called the G. W. R. Bayley, (after a late distinguished New Orleans engineer) arrived, and is now at South Pass. It is 200 feet long, with 32 feet depth of beam, and a 10 foot hold. It will not stir, but take on board, the mud and carry it away from the channel.

On the 13th inst., Judge John E. King, Collector of the Port, tendered his resignation to the President, and on the following day Col. Effingham Lawrence, was nominated as his successor. Mr. Lawrence is the partner of Ex-Governor H. C. Warmoth in a Plaquemines plantation, and was urged upon the President by the entire Congressional delegation from this State, with the exception of Mr. Darrall of the third district.

Ex-Speaker Mortimer Carr, having satisfied a bond of $2500 in one case, was about to leave the Superior Criminal Court room, when he was re-arrested on three indictments filed by District Attorney Finney, relative to transactions with the Citizen's Bank amounting to $40,000, and various forged bills of lading.

Messrs. M. L. Byrne & Co., of Canal street, created quite a sensation by introducing cents in their business transactions. Cents are also given and received by George Ellis, the newsdealer, opposite the Postoffice. The United States Assistant Treasurer will issue the coin on demand, and a city bank has given him a heavy order. The introduction of the too long excluded cent cannot fail to benefit the economical housekeeper, and increase the comforts of the poorer classes, who are a legion in this city.

Renovation, Not Prostration.

Did anyen feebled humen being ever become strong under the operation of powerful cathartics or selivants? It is sometimes necessary to regelate the bowels, but that cannot be done by active purgation, which exhausts the vital forces and serves no good purpose whatever. The only true way to promote health and vigor, which are essential to regularity of the organic functions, is to invigorate, discipline and purity the system at the same time. The extraordinary efficacy of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases of debility or irregularity of the organs of digestion, assimulation, secretion and discharge, is universally admitted. Appetite, good digestion, a reguler habit of body, active circulation of the blood, and purity of all the animal fluids are induced by this superb tonic and corrective. It has no equals, moreover, as a preventive of chills and fever, and other types of malarial disease. To emigrants and travelers it is particularly serviceable as a medicinal safeguard.

The Pianos and Organs manufactured and sold by Daniel F. Beatty, of Washington, N. J., have become so well and favorably known that anything we may add will only increase the testimonials of thousands by one. All know these instruments and all praise them, but all do not know the very low prices at which they can be bought compared with the prices charged for inferior makes. We advise all who contemplate buying a Piano or Organ to write to Mr. Beatty for his Illustrated Catalogues and prices.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy, for the speedy and permanent cure of consumption, brochitis, catarrh, asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive, and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send, free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. Sherar, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y. novl-1m.

A Fine Head of Hair is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty, that one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Color Restorer," the most delightful article ever introduced to the American people for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and at the same time a lovely hair dressing and beautifier. It is totally different from all others; not sticky and gummy, and free from all impure ingredients that render many articles obnoxious; in fact, it is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury. Sold by all dealers in fine toilet articles, at 75 cents a bottle, or six bottles for $4. E. Hart & Co., wholesale agents, New Orleans.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

"Durang's Rheumatic Remedy," the great Internal Medicine, will positively cure any case of rheumatism on the face of the earth. Sold by all Druggists. Send for circular to Helphenstein and Bently, Druggists, Washington, D. C. Sold by the wholesale in New Orleans. oct11-6m.

THE LIFE AND WORDS OF CHRIST.

By CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE, D. D.

With Twelve Engravings on Steel. In Two Volumes. Price, $8.00

"The distinctive features of this Life of Christ is the elaborate care with which the surroundings of our Lord's earthly history have been described. Dr. Geikie has not made the mistake of allowing the principal figure to be lost sight of in the multitudinous details which group themselves around it, but he has rightly judged that a thorough apprehension of those details must greatly help the reader to understand and appreciate Christ's teachings and the events of his career. * * * The result is, a book which every earnest student of the new Testament will be glad to place on his shelves, and frequently to consult. In wealth of information upon many of the facts and phenomena which gave to the world the aspect which it wore in the time of Christ, and its peculiar tone to the society in which he moved, Dr. Geikie's book, we believe, stands alone among the many lives of Christ which have been published in England during recent years—not excepting Dr. Farrar's remarkable and popular work."—London Literary World.

"The author has brought to his difficult and noble task the stores of an eloquent, well-informed, and devout mind. He has, in a very great degree, accomplished what he proposed, and brought before his readers the world in which Jesus moved; the country in which he lived; the people among whom he grew up and ministered; the religion in which he was trained; the temple services in which he took part; the ecclesiastical, civil, and social aspects of his time; the parties of the day, their opinions and their spirit; the customs that prevailed; the events social, religious and political, not mentioned in the Gospels, that formed the history of his lifetime, so far as they can be recovered. To have accomplished such a task as this in anything like completeness is no small achievement, and deserves no small praise; and to this Dr. Geikie may fairly lay claim."—London Standard.

1878. THE 1878.
International Review.

Between the Quarterlies and the Monthlies
SIX TIMES A YEAR.

I. The chief object of this Review is to supply the demand for a non-partisan and International literature. In politics and religion the Review will subserve the interest of no sect or party. The Review will aim to discuss, in a vigorous, interesting and impartial manner, both sides of many of the important literary, scientific, social, and political and religious questions of the day.

II. It brings to its pages the best talent of Europe and America, and seeks to be a medium of communication between representative thinkers of every nation.

III. The interests and union of the many foreign elements that constitute American society are a very important part of the work assumed by the International Review.

IV. Like the Quarterlies, it addresses scholars, and like the Monthlies, aims to be of value to the practical men in business and the professions, and of interest to members of the family.

V. Each number contains fresh and reliable notices of important new American and European books.

VI. The Art Department will be conducted by Mr. Phillip Gilbert Hamerton.

VII. Editorial comments upon the course of events at home and abroad, having special reference to the interests of the United States, are given in, and add strength and timeliness to every issue.

VIII. The success of the International Review is made to depend on a comprehensive plan, solid merit, and adeption in style and subject to the age in which we live.

ALL ARTICLES ARE ORIGINAL.

"Among American Reviews the International is always conspicuous.—Academy, London

"Will not suffer by comparison with the best foreign quarterlies."—Churchman, New York.

"Not equalled by any of its contemporaries, home or foreign, in spirit, style or ability."—Interior, Chicago.

"This is the leading Magazine of America."—Elgin Courant, England.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known [illegible] the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. [illegible]

REPROVED.

I sighed because I was weary,
Weary with all of my care,
Yet my home was full of sunshine,
No shadow had fallen there;
The children were full of frolic—
I heard their voices so sweet,
And a merry tune oft followed
The patter of little feet.

And yet I sighed and was weary;
The sunlight served only to show
[illegible] all things around me,
[illegible] I happen to go,
[illegible] troop of merry children

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty that no one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Restorer," the most effectual article for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and a delightful hair dresser and beautifier—being free from sticky and gummy properties—clear and richly perfumed. Recommends itself to every lady and gentleman using fine toilet articles.

Extracts from Letters.

A. A. GREGORY, BARRYTOWN, Duchess County, N. Y., writes: April 30, 1877, DR. SWAYNE & SON; Phila., Gents—I enclose postoffice order for eight dollars, please send me one dozen "LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER." It has stopped my hair from falling out and restored it to its natural color. It has proved satisfactory in every respect.

DR. ISAAC H. MILLER, WEST BRESKNOCK, Pa., writes: As a restorer of Gray hair and preventive of baldness, it is the best remedy I have ever sold, and gives entire satisfaction.

WILLIAM SCHELL, GERMANTOWN, Columbia Co. N. Y., writes: April, 1877—THE LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER was received. I am delighted with it. You will find inclosed four dollars for a half dozen bottles by express.

London Hair Color Restorer

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisburg, Va.

Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, Itching piles, had tried many physicians and tried numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks I found myself entirely cured, and for the four years that have elapsed not even a trifling symptom of the disease. Your Ointment is a spot of the purest balm on my head, which had annoyed me for years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. It is my duty to bear this well attested testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, WM. F. GROVE.

R. C. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for Itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

The valuation of property in North Carolina has increased near $30,000,000 since 1870, and that too in spite of the long panic and low prices. In 1870, as the Auditor's report shows, the property of the State was valued for taxation at $120,910,219. The returns this year show a valutation of $148,564,457.

It is said that North Carolina has lost its pre-eminence as the largest producer of pea-nuts. Virginia and Tennessee go far ahead of her. Her crop of last year was 125,000 bushels, and the growing crop is estimated at 75,000 bushels only, whilst Tennessee made last year 500,000 bushels and is estimated this year at 300,000, and Virginia 780,000 last year with and estimte of 468,000 this year. The estimated falling off this year in the three States is 552,000 bushels, or more than one-third.

The monthly report of the Bureau of Agriculture, Statistics and Mines for October, Tennessee, shows an increase of immigration from the North. One hundred and forty-one persons arrived from the following States during the month: Indiana, 18; Michigan, 11; Minnesota, 9; Iowa, 4; Maryland, 1; Ohio, 18; Pennsylvania, 9; Illinois, 5; New York, 2. Of this number 14 families settled in Davidson county, five in Williamson, two in Franklin, four in Giles, three in Hamilton, two in Knox, two in Fayette, and one in Lawrence.

Origin of Postage Stamps.

The origin of the stamp has a tingo of romance in it. It was thirty-seven years ago that Rowland Hill, while crossing a district in the North of England, arrived at the door of an inn where a postman had stopped to deliver a letter. A young girl came out to receive it; she turned it over and over in her hand and asked the price of postage. This was a large sum, and evidently the girl was poor, for the postman demanded a shilling. She sighed sadly, and said the letter was from her brother, but that she had no money; and so she returned the letter to the postman. Touched with pity, Mr. Hill paid the postage and gave the letter to the girl, who seemed very much embarrassed. Scarcely had the postman turned his back when the young innkeeper's daughter confessed that it was a trick between her and her brother. Some signs on the envelope told her all she wanted to know, but the letter contained no writing. "We are both so poor," she added, "that we invented this mode of corresponding without paying for our letters." The traveler, continuing his road, asked himself if a system giving place to such frauds was not a vicious one. Before sunset Rowland had planned to organize the postal service on a new basis—with what success is known to the world.

A little girl of five or six summers, stopping with her parents at one of the fashionable hotels at Saratoga Springs, was invited at dinner to take some wine as it was passed around. She declined. "Why do you not take wine with your dinner, Minnie?" asked a gentleman who sat near her. "Cause I doesn't like it." "But take a little, then, my child, for your stomach's sake," he urged. "I ain't got no tommik's ache," indignantly responded the little miss in the most emphatic manner.

KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle.

We have the best Imitation Gold Watch in the Market for Trading Purposes. The metal is a composition of other metals, so closely resembling gold that the best judges find it difficult to detect the difference, except by a close and long scrutiny, and it is the nearest approach to gold known. AMERICAN MOVEMENT, ELEGANTLY ENGRAVED HUNTING CASES, and equal in appearance to a SOLID GOLD WATCH THAT COSTS FROM $150 TO $200. It runs and keeps time as accurately as watches that cost from $100 to $200, and if you wish to watch for your own use or to make money on, by this. Owing to our large sales, we are enabled to reduce the price of them to $12 each with an elegant Chain to match, and to introduce them as a specimen of our goods. They are used as Regulators, Drivers, and in Manufactories, and other places where accurate time is required, and gives general satisfaction. We send them by Mail or Express, on receipt of $12, to any part of the Country, or it will be sent C.O.D. when the purchaser desires and remits $3 on account. These Elegant CHAINS which cost Four Dollars each, and the same pattern in pure gold would cost $10. We sell these Chains at $3 each. We sell the Watch without the Chain for $10. Address

GRAND EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

Owing to the financial depression in this country and Europe we are now able with the abundant resources at our command to manufacture and import goods at wonderfully low prices. We propose hereafter to deal direct with consumers selling to them at the same prices at we have heretofore charged the jobbers. Our goods are all warranted as represented. We offer a Hunting Case Geneva Watch, a correct time keeper (such as have been purchased in gold watches at a cost of $100 in years gone by) for the trifling sum of $10 for the present. The illustration of this is an exact representation of this watch and chain, except that the watch is larger than here shown, it being full Gents' size. We also offer a Ladies' Hunting Case Geneva Watch, same composition cases, in perfect running order, with a beautiful Motioso Opera chain attached, slide set with pearls, handsomely engraved, for $8 complete. We also have a quantity of cases without works, Gents' size, which we will fit up with a genuine American Waltham Elgin movement, Patent Lever, Full Jewelled, together with the elegant gold chain shown in the engraving, for $12. This is an opportunity to buy reliable goods at prices never before offered. Any of the above articles sent by mail in a registered package, postpaid, free of charge, upon receipt of price, to any part of the United States, free of charge, upon receipt of price.

on a rare piece of marble. His was, perhaps, the finest mind, save that of Saul of Tarsus, in the early church. There is an absurd notion that John was weak, effeminate. The early painters gave him a womanly look. Instead, there was a wonderful robustness and energy in his nature. It was John who asked the Lord to call fire down from heaven to burn up the ill-mannered village. It was he who dealt the Socinian heresy the severest blows; he who hurled the red-hot epithets of "liar," etc. His earnestness was magnificent. You often find it so, that the man who is warm in his sympathy for the right is warm against wrong. John was never neutral, never aimed to be on both sides of the line. He made no compromise, no concession, like some Christians of modern times. The Lord called him Boanerges, the son of thunder. The greatest, ruggedest nature we often find the most tender. So with Luther, with Knox. Even Cromwell could shed tears. John was the weeping disciple. He used the word love more than all the other disciples put together. I do not wonder that he lifted his head from the breast of the infinite God to write those three love letters to God's people.

Second.—Let us now look at some thoughts more practical to us.

1. If we cannot be mighty in intellect, we can be lovable Christians. The first duty of the Christian is to be conscientious, next lovable. Those two are not always found together. Some people have too much lemon juice in their religion. They are too censorious. You see people it is a duty, but not a delight, to love. There are Christians who go along scolding and praying all the way. There is much meat in them. So there is in the chestnut burr, but you prick your fingers endlessly getting at it. I do not like the sanctimonious kind of Christians. If I have business dealings with them, I am always on the lookout lest I will be cheated. Now, the Christian is not to be trifling, on the one hand, nor severe and repulsive, on the other. How the Savior drew all to him. Put the Lord Jesus in a Brooklyn Mission School, the ragged arabs from the streets would climb on his knee. When he would come into our houses sunshine would come with him. Christ is our model. First, be severe against wrong, but ever after that be lovable. By censorious habit we destroy our power for Christ. A soldier who wets his powder or dulls his sword is a traitor to his country. Do not imagine when I say take care of your influence, I mean the weak, contemptible spirit of compromise. Christ loved John all the more because he never struck his colors.

2. Like John, let us seek an intimacy with Christ. He was the planet that rolled nearest to the center. Christ loves to be courted. John had more conversation with Christ than all of the other disciples. It was not a mere accident that John's gospel contains more conversations than all the other gospels combined. It is a glorious thing to have Christ intimate with us, but we cannot have this save we shut out of our hearts his rivals. Do not sing Jesus loves me until you are sure you love Jesus. Who is the most loved of men? Not the most intellectual, the most wealthy, but the most unselfish. The accursed cancer, selfishness, devours the blood. The first step in conversion is self surrender; the first step in growth is self-denial. Christ gave all for men. Paul counted all things lost that he might win his fellows. The description of love is, it seeketh not its own. Grand was it in Phillip Sidney, wounded, to turn from his lips the cup of water, saying, "Give it to that soldier of the line who is thirsty as am I." Said the little hero of the coal mine, "I can hold on a little longer. Don't mind me; Joe Brown is nearly gone. He is a little lower down. Help him." There is always some Joe Brown a little lower down, a little more miserable than are we. May this be our crown, "The disciple whom Jesus loved." Let us covet that.—Metropolitan Pulpit

Elements of Ministerial Success.

T. EDWARD MADDEN.

Continued.

The commission Christ originally gave to the Apostles stands unrepealed on the statute book of Heaven. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Of all the authority men have received of their fellow-men for the proper execution of high and [illegible] trusts, none bears any [illegible] this commission. [illegible] none so [illegible] forth to preach [illegible] message from [illegible] men. [illegible] are other sources from which he gains knowledge, but nothing is authoritative that cannot be proved from the Bible. I knew a Sabbath-school superintendent who remarked on one occasion that "Truth found in a spelling book is just as good as truth found in the Bible." Not so. In the abstract it may be, but we must not forget it is only truth in the spelling book because it is abstracted from the Bible. There is only one authority. The Bible is that authority to which all men appeal as the standard of truth. There are a great many things hard to be understood in the Bible. The duty of the minister is to be an expositor of this standard. If he fails here he fails in a vital point. If he succeeds he must have as an element

KNEE-STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

The whole power of the minister is found in the fact that he proclaims God's truth. All truth is God's truth, but in a higher sense he is sent to proclaim a message the burden of which relates to men's souls. Other truth may be spoken by him but it does not have the same effect as the utterance of Divine truth. There is truth in political economy; but a minister has no business to be a politician in the ordinary acceptation of the word. There is truth in science; but a minister has no business to be a dabbler, meddling with everything in creation and not knowing perfectly what is to be found in the Bible. His first duty is to know what is in the Bible and to know as well, what is not in the Bible. We do not now plead for any narrowness of attainment but only for perfection in essentials first. The first of all necessary knowledge is the Word of God.

"The truth shall make you free." Such is the declaration of the Redeemer himself. It is reasonable to derive the best views of this truth. He is certainly wise who earnestly labors to know just what is the best interpretation of the Bible. A man's freedom depends on how he understands this truth. As the Bible was written by the Holy Ghost, so it needs the Holy Ghost to interpret it. There is nothing so illuminating as the Holy Spirit. If it required the power of the Holy Ghost to write the Bible it demands the same power to explain it. No one can give as clear an exposition of a statement as the author. In a higher sense, none can give as clear and powerful an explanation of the Scriptures as God. The Holy Spirit is the effective agent in the enlightenment of the understanding. Hence the prayer of Ezra: "Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." How appropriate this petition is when we contrast the paucity of our knowledge with the illimitable wisdom of the Almighty. Its aptitude is more perfectly discovered when we remember that God is, through the agency of the Spirit, able to bring all things to our remembrance. The very thoughts we hunger after are, by the Spirit, given to us if we ask for them; if we travail till they are brought forth in mental birth.

When a man takes the Bible with pure motives and a sincere desire to know what God means by His truth, and pours forth his soul for enlightenment, God honors the faith of his servant and reveals to him the hidden, that is the spiritual, meaning of his truth by the direct operation of the Holy Spirit on the soul. He shows what underlies the letter of the Word. The great spiritual power hidden in these letters and words suddenly springs into life under the touch of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Ghost is the revelator of the God-head. But it is only to those who seek for it that this spiritual power is imparted; none other place any value commensurate with the value received upon the knowledge thus to be conveyed by the Divine agency; and although there is an inexhaustible fountain of wisdom God never gives without asking, or where His gifts are not valued as of the highest importance. We discover the fact that the vast majority of the world place a very superficial value on the Bible. They may, perhaps, not intend to do so but, nevertheless, they do. You have only to ask them to find a particular passage in some one of the books of the Bible not usually referred to, and they have to turn to the index to find the order of the books. There are ministers whom I have seen do the very same thing. I will venture the assertion that not more than ten per cent. of our ordinarily so-called christian public know how many books there are in the Bibles that lie on the center tables of the drawing-rooms of this land of Bibles. Our Heavenly Father does not communicate great spiritual truths to such individuals.

The worldly man takes up the Word and reads it carelessly. He finds nothing in it to excite his wonder, or create amazement. But the child of God, whose ear has been touched with a live coal from off the altar, hears a new voice, and listening, from the depth of God's eternal Word, [illegible] new power from old truth [illegible] as old as God himself. He [illegible] power here, of which the world knows nothing. Irreligious men wonder how he can find the Bible so interesting, while the child of God's teaching, though he is not amazed to discover that the ungodly find nothing in it to fascinate knows the reason why it does not influence the worldly man to the same degree that it does himself.

To be ignorant of the Bible, is be ignorant of the most important knowledge in the world. An ignorant minister is the most contemptible of ignoramuses, if he continues to be so. Above anything else in the world, he should have a perfect knowledge of the Scriptures. There is a deep Spiritual knowledge of the Bible, that cannot be obtained from a superficial reading of the letters and words of which it is composed. It can only be procured at God's price. You can only discover it on your knees. The acumen you may have attained by bibical criticism, may be of a very high order, but if it does not convey to you the power of truth, you might just as well be without. You cannot save souls by the literalism of the Bible.

It is the Spiritual force, that lies back of these letters and words, that can only do the work. "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life." These letters and words are only the agency by which thought is conveyed from the Divine to the human mind. You are to use the means, and then expect results equal only to the efforts put forth to secure the desired end. If you only half-exert the powers you possess, you can only reasonably expect half-success.

Years ago, I remember hearing an aged minister remark, "Let me see the carpet in front of a young minister's looking glass, the knees of his pants, and his Bible, and I will tell you just how much power he has." I shall never forget the tone of voice, or the earnestness with which he expressed himself. The remark made a deep impression then, and conveyed to my mind the secret of his success.

Are there not too many of these looking-glass ministers? Away with such folly! How horribly sacriligous such conduct is. And yet if the most of us bring ourselves up to this standard, I am afraid there will be but few, but what must honestly admit that the carpet is worn more than the knees of our pants. Let us have more shabby, well worn knees, and less worn carpets, and we will not mourn for want of success.

But then there is a virtue in the knee-study of the Bible, wholly unknown to those who have never tried it. The position is indicative. I care little how great a minister's attainments may be in literature, science, philology, or moral philosophy, when he comes to the Bible, he must make deep obeisance as he enters upon its study. God honors such humility in a peculiarly striking manner, discoverable only by experience in the deep things of God.

The most important of all knowledge is found within its pages, the knowledge of sin, and salvation of Christ.

But the position is equally expressive of need. How great the need of hungry, famished souls. Souls starving for that spiritual food found nowhere else in the universe, but in the Bible. Men need but little in this world, in comparison to the great need of the soul. Ministers preach science, history, and a thousand things beside the "one thing." Christ, and Him crucified, is the theme of the pulpit. His spiritual character, life, acts and thoughts, are only to be found in the Scriptures. Here the wants of the soul can be supplied. Here alone, is to be found that knowledge which can make the world wise unto salvation.

I have heard ministers remark: "I have nothing to preach." Nothing to preach! Then what are you doing in the ministry? God never calls men who have "nothing to preach." There is a mistake somewhere. It may be admitted that this is often a casual remark, but it has its significance. Nothing to preach, with God's store-house of thoughts before you, any one of which is enough for a dozen sermons. Nothing to preach! Of course not, with an unread Bible, much less one carefully perused and well digested. Is it not too much the habit with the most of ministers to read, at family devotions, morning and evening, a short portion of the Scriptures, and never look within the Bible again until similar duty calls to the same act? Nothing to preach! Then take this blessed old Bible, and, on your knees, seek for that hidden wisdom only revealed to those who seek. No such thing as failure ever rests upon the word itself. It is your business to know that word, and knowing it, mentally and physically, to break the Word of Life unto the thousands who are stretching out their hands unto you. Either get out of the ministry, or study your Bible on your knee. Do not make the mistake of thinking that those to whom you minister in holy things, will not know whether you study or not. Try the plan for a brief while, and you will soon find that your congregation will become more attentive, and will wonder what has happened to "our minister."

Fraternal Address.

The National Association of Local Preachers to their fellow-laborers throughout the United States, Greeting:

DEAR BRETHREN: Rejoice with us that, in the good providence of God, we have been permitted to hold our twentieth annual session, in the City of Camden, New Jersey, and that we have been greatly encouraged in our work by cheering reports from many parts of our beloved country, and by the spiritual blessings received during our Convention.

Permit us to address you, our brethren in the lay work, some of the words with which we have comforted each other in this annual meeting.

We have received no small encouragement from the increase of lay preaching at home and abroad, and from the abundant evidence coming to us from many quarters that this arm of church service is still strong and effective in our Methodism. We congratulate ourselves and you all that we are permitted to labor for the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers, while providing for our own necessities, by service in our various callings; but we have admonished each other, and we affectionately admonish you, to be faithful in contributing according to your means to the support of the regular ministry and in all other way "holding up their hands."

Our experience as an Association teaches us that our local preachers are greatly helped in their work by local organization, and we earnestly advise you to maintain such organization where it exists, and to organize new local association where it is possible. The support of mutual sympathy in a blessed work; helping each other to find places for useful labor; watching over the characters of each other and promoting a richer religious experience; and massing your influence upon the church in all proper directions—these are a few of the advantages of organization.

This Association is a national one, and local preachers of all the branches of Methodism are welcome to its assemblies. We have appointed our next Annual Session, to be held in Louisville, Kentucky; beginning on the Third Saturday in October, 1878, and we earnestly invite the attendance of representatives from all sections of the land and from all divisions of our Wesleyan army. We are assured of a generous welcome by the Methodists of Louisville and we wish to share our privileges there with as many as possible of our brethren from the North and from the South, from the East and from the West.

On behalf of the National Association,

D. H. WHEELER,

Unhallowed Resignation.

What a habit we have of crediting all our ills to Providence. We are never willing to admit that our own inactivity, folly and self love have worked out the dire results over which we mourn. We only see the shipwreck of our lives; we only hear the voices of the storm, and instead of owning that it was our indifferent and unskillful navigation that brought our craft upon the rocks, we fold our hands and cry out blindly: "Strange and mysterious are Thy ways, O, Providence."

It is well to have faith and trust. It is well to be resigned to trials that can not be avoided, but it is not well to hide our talents in a napkin; to take our fill of ease and pleasure, and bow down to the gods of pride and fashion, and then shrink back from the consequences and say that the work is none of ours. Some of us really imagine that we are suffering the will of the Lord, because the flour barrel is empty and our coat out at the elbows, when a little more energy, a little more self-denial, a little less folding of the hands for rest—these would raise us on our feet, crowned with the gift of a goodly heritage.

We eat rich unwholesome food, keep late hours, transgress all the laws of health, and when we pay the penalty with shattered nerves and broken constitutions, we wonder why we are not strong and vigorous as our neighbor, who has lived moderately all his life. Because the neck and arms of our tender child are soft and white and dimpled, we let them go bare and unprotected; then, on some day when we leave one out under the snow, we murmur that our Father hath been unkind. In too many such cases, with a little less pride and a little more flannel the family circle might be kept intact for many a year.—Exchange.

Southwestern Christian Advocate, 1878.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOUTHWESTERN:

We ask every one of you to read each line of the following address:

I. General Remarks.

1. The Southwestern Christian Advocate is an absolute necessity to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. That work is largely of a missionary type, needing the constant assistance and inspiration of a weekly newspaper.

2. The SOUTHWESTERN has been a success beyond the expectations of even its best friends. It lived and grew for three years as a private enterprise, and so important was it considered to our Southern work by the last General Conference that it was adopted as an official journal of the Church.

3. The course of the SOUTHWESTERN has been decided and consistent on all questions relating to our work in the South. While others have vacillated between seasons of excessive gush or bitter denunciation on "Fraternity" and kindred topics, this paper has always, in a dignified and positive way, demanded the proper recognition of our Church and ministers in the South, and commended those who in any way gave that recognition.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN has done, and is in a condition to do, more for the colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church than any other paper in the Church. This paper has from the first waged an unceasing war against the spirit of caste, both in State and Church, and has never once lowered its standard to the demands of the enemies of the colored people, or their friends who, from motives of policy, have aided to perpetuate the spirit and fact of caste in Church or State.

5. The location of the SOUTHWESTERN in the chief metropolis of the South, its independent and consistent course, give it an extended influence among all classes of people. This is proved by the fact that it has, in the city of New Orleans, a larger circulation than any other religious journal.

6. January first the SOUTHWESTERN will be Enlarged by the addition of four columns, and it is our purpose to make the paper better than ever.

II. To Our People.

1. A large number of you are Local Preachers, or Exhorters, or Trustees, or Stewards or Class Leaders, in the Church. How can you be good officers in the Lord's army without your Church paper, to tell you of your Church duties, and report the condition and movements of that army?

2. Many of you are Sunday School Officers and Teachers. The SOUTHWESTERN gives every week more than a column on the Sunday School lesson for the Sunday following.

3. As Christians you want to be intelligent and progressive. You want to know of the work of God throughout the world. You want to read how God's people die. You want to read about your conference and preachers. You want to read how God's work is going on in your own and other Churches. How can you know these things without you take your Church paper?

4. Fathers and Mothers want their children to grow up to be moral and respectable. If so, those children must be instructed by good reading. Every number of the SOUTHWESTERN contains something to instruct and inspire the young.

5. Our Young Men and Women beginning life want to begin it right. The ambition to be as good as the best is noble. But to be good and successful, young men and women must be intelligent and moral, and faithful. Nothing will help to these good qualities more than the reading every week of a good newspaper.

6. Two Dollars a Year pays for the SOUTHWESTERN. That is less than four cents a week. Think how much money you spend foolishly before you talk about the times being too hard to take your Church paper.

III. To Our Preachers.

1. Next to the Bible and Discipline you need your Church paper, For Your Own Good, and next to preaching, and doing pastoral work, you must put your Church paper among your people, For Their Good. The families who read their Church paper are your most intelligent hearers, pay you best and pay the most to the benevolent collections. If, therefore, you want an intelligent congregation, and want to get your salary, and want to make good reports to Conference, put your Church paper into every family in your congregation, whether they are members of the Church or not.

2. You want to be Successful Pastors. The SOUTHWESTERN will help you. It will instruct your church officers in their duty, and your Sunday School officers and teachers in their duties, and by your people reading about other churches and pastors they will know better how to take care of and appreciate you.

3. As Leaders Among Your People you will have influence for good only as your people see you are their real friend. If you try to keep the light from them they will soon distrust and forsake you.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN is your Conference Paper, and will contain the notices of your Quarterly Meetings and District Conferences, and the accounts of the Church work among the Churches of your Conference.

IV. Our Terms.

1. We Pay the Postage ourselves, so that subscribers have only to pay their two dollars and then get the paper every week from the Post Office. In New Orleans the paper is delivered at the door.

2. Our rule is Cash in Advance. This is best for all.

3. We send the paper for one year—

To All Preachers in Charge of Stations or Circuits, Our Agents....$1 00

To Local Preachers....$1 50

To All Others....$2 00

New Subscribers.

We are already receiving some good lists of new subscribers for 1878, and the indications are favorable that the canvass the next few weeks will be vigorous and successful.

We ask that all the preachers will go to work at once and push the canvass. Two dollars pays for the SOUTHWESTERN for a year and all who subscribe now, get the paper free the remainder of 1877 and during all of 1878. Our terms are cash in advance. Address

To the Texas Preachers.

The four Texas Conferences meet within a month at Dallas, Waco, Houston and Jefferson. Attention is called to the notices which appear elsewhere of Plantations and Farms for rent or sale by the Citizens Bank of this city. Parties desirous of acquiring homesteads would do well to apply to this corporation in person or by letter.

Congressman Randall L. Gibson has introduced a joint resolution in the House authorizing the President to appoint three commissioners, to confer with others designated by the Emperor of Brazil, with a view to a treaty for reciprocal trade between the two countries. Mr. Gibson has also introduced three other resolutions of a like character for trade with adjoining American countries.

The press continues to treat of the introduction of a Moffet Register system here, and it is hoped to eventually place a law upon our statute books. As a tax upon each and every drink taken at a bar falls upon the consumer instead of the retailer, there is some probability of a success of the scheme. Such a tax should be either devoted to paying the State indebtedness or to the support of schools.

A Native American organization is enrolling members throughout the city. Some people believe that the "foreign" element has too strong an influence over the political affairs of the city and State. Others have a wholesome dread of any secret society, and especially of a political one. There may be, and no doubt are, foreign influences affecting us in many undesirable ways, but the remedy appears to us to lay in increased educational facilities for the youth who afterward become citizens, rather than in any policy putting any class under the political ban.

The new French ministry appointed by President MacMahon may be said to consist of different representatives of the identical policy of the retiring ministry. That policy was defeated at the polls in the recent elections, and action of MacMahon is not only unsatisfactory to the Chamber of Deputies, but shows an unyielding spirit, when a graceful acquiescence in the popular judgment was justly expected. A new issue between the Chamber and the President is dangerous to the peace of France, and in a few days we may have stirring news.

The Independent, of New York, offers in another column to give away, absolutely, a Worcester's Unabridged Quarto Pictorial Dictionary, which retails everywhere for $10, and is, of course, a household necessity. How they can do it is, we must confess, a mystery; but that they do there is no question. The Independent is now publishing Rev. Joseph Cook's famous Boston Monday Lectures, which are creating so much discussion everywhere. See advertisment of The Independent in this paper.

For the past seven years the Illustrated Christian Weekly has steadily persued its course, making each year increased numbers of friends, until it has become a household necessity. Its marked features have been excellent pictures, its freedom from sectarianism, in which it differs so markedly from other religious weeklies, its timely articles on current events, its interesting and instructive stories and sketches, and the remarkably low price, only $2 50 a year postage paid, at which it is published. We note that persons subscribing now will receive the remaining numbers for the present year, without extra cost. Don't fail to remit $2 50 to the publishers at 150 Nassau street, New York.

The National Sunday School Teacher, with December, closes a very successful year. During the last six months, it has been very much improved. The Mexican Frontier.

For two months there has been a species of guerilla warfare carried on along Rio Grande river and the adjacent territory on both banks. The telegraph has been burdened with narrations of outrages by hands of horse thieves, marauding adventurous Indians, semi-civilized Mexicans, and infuriated Texans.

These accounts were generally received as highly exaggerated in detail to aid dishonorable and ambitious projects of annexation; and the policy of the national government to deal leniently and neighborly with a sister Republic met our warm approval. But it would appear that the kindly consideration given to revolutionary Mexico by the United States is differently interpretated by the rulers and people of the two countries. It does not give peace to the border, or suppress the incursions of armed bands. The Mexican Government, whether from weakness, or criminal neglect, utterly fails to either prevent or capture, the parties who steal cattle and devastate whole counties of Texas. Mutual conference between the military commanders of the two nations on the border, having failed to peaceably secure order, the American commander, General Ord, was sometime since instructed to pursue and capture incursionists on Mexican territory if needs be. Now General Trevino, the Mexican commander, has notified General Ord, of the official instructions of his government to repel force in the event of the crossing the boundary by the United States troops. President Diaz has dispatched reinforcements to Trevino, and General Ord has applied to the War Department for an additional regiment. A collision need occasion no great surprise however much it may be regretted. It will then become a matter of national pride to settle the affair promptly and decisvely. We do not want any additional territory seized upon unreasonably and by force, but if necessary to the general peace and progress of the country to change the boundary by placing the entire disturbal under, a power competent to maintain order we shall say amen to such a project.

Meridian, Mississippi District Conference.

The Meridian District Conference convened at Starkville, October 17, 1877, and continued its session four days.

Rev. M. Adams, Presiding Elder, not being present, the Conference proceeded to ballot for Chairman. Rev. F. Cannon was elected. C. P. Clemens was made Secretary, and D. D. Goodwin, assistant. The roll was called and fifteen answered to their names.

The business of the Conference was then taken up. The preachers present all reported their circuits in good condition. The best feeling prevailed among the brethren. Many revivals and accessions to the church were reported. On the second day of the Conference the Presiding Elder arrived, having been detained by the trains not making connection.

Preaching was held every night, the various preachers choosing themes best suited to the occasion.

It is the desire of the ministers of the Meridian District to made it the Banner District in the State.

More revivals were reported this year than usual. Strong resolutions were adopted on the subject of Education and Temperance. Encouragement was given to our school at Meridian, a branch of Shaw University, at Holly Springs, where young men may prepare for the great work of the ministry.

Our Elder tells us to go forward; he is wide-awake, and has no lazy preachers on his work—they must go forward. Our District is large; twenty-eight traveling preachers and a host of local preachers and exhorters. All things went well in the Conference. On Sabbath, the Elder delivered a grand discourse on Baptism, after which, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to more than two hundred persons. Fourteen joined the church.

The next District Conference is to be held at Meridian.

C. P. CLEMENS, Secretary.

This is the State and National Thanksgiving Day.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. M. Adams, Presiding Elder of Meridian, Miss., District writes: "On the 16th inst., we dedicated a new church on the Waynesboro Circuit, Rev. H. Davenport, pastor. The building is 26x35 feet, and is a very nice one. Rev. N. Todd, a local preacher, assisted us in the services. On the State Line work, Rev. W. McDonald pastor, a fine new church 32x45 feet, will soon be ready for dedication. Our people are coming up well with the benevolent collections."

Rev. J. W. Parks, Forest Circuit, Miss., says: "We have just closed an interesting protracted meeting of four weeks duration. During the year seventy-three persons have been converted and added to the church on this work, and four joined by letter."

Rev. Moses Pope, Lafayette Springs Circuit, Miss., says: "At protracted meetings recently held at two of my appointments there have been thirty-five conversions. My work is in a good spiritual condition."

The City.

The German Military Band, it is announced, will remain in the city all winter. This is gratifying to many lovers of excellent music.

The Picayune tells of an absent-minded lawyer, on a Carondelet street car, who put a piece of tobacco in the fare box and the nickel in his mouth.

The taxpayers are enjoying their last days of grace, for on and after December 5 all penalties will be enforced against delinquents according to State law.

Two new colored schools are in operation in the Fifth ward—the Orleans and St. Peter streets schools. School Commissioner Craig reports them to be fully attended, with fair facilities for instruction.

The proposition to place the control of the city parks under volunteer commissions of citizens is still discussed at the City Hall. It was a good suggestion and is at least worthy of a trial.

Acting under section 178 the Auditor, on Tuesday, agreed to a compromise in the case of E. Fulton, late tax collector. Mr. Fulton paid into the State treasury $20,006 in cash, and $39,000 in State warrants.

A meeting of sugar planters, held on the evening of the 20th, took the initiative in forming an association for protective purposes. They will assail the sugar shed monopoly and similar oppressive impositions upon the sugar interests.

According to the Picayune the city assessments for 1877–78 are as follows: real estate, $88,956,180; income, $1,229,970; furniture, $446,-850; horses, etc., $978,937; stocks in vessels, etc., $523,831; capital $18,982,627. Grand total, $111,118,-395.

The city authorities are determined to have the streets lighted as economically as possible. They ask the Gas Company to accept $90,006 instead of $120,000 for one year. In case of refusal they will attempt the illumination by coal oil, which it is believed can be effected at the saving of $37,000 the first year.

Those real benefactors of this city, Messrs. H. G. Stieble & Co., may be found at 22 Carondelet street. They are ready to make contracts to sprinkle the streets of our city, and keep down the dust in a manner which will benefit stores, residences, and gardens. Any orders left at their office will meet with prompt attention.

The Administrators of the Louisiana University have filed a suit in the Fifth District Court, and pray for a writ of mandamus to compel the Auditor to issue his warrant for $27,518.04, being one-fourth of the poll tax devoted to school purposes between 1871 and 1877 inclusive, to which sum they claim to be entitled under Article 141 of the Constitution of the State.

It will be seen that Mrs. Peers, No. 149 Canal street, over "Kreeger" establishment, has stylish and artistic dressmaking, all orders for which are executed with promptness, accuracy and dispatch. Her lady patrons will please particularly notice that she has a fine stock of those real comforts of genuine "French Corsets." Shape and fit guaranteed.

"The Teachers' Association of New Orleans" was organized on Saturday, at the Boys' Central High School, by the election of the following officers: Prof. J. B. Seaman, president; Prof. J. L. Cross, first vice president; Prof. F. A. Golden, second vice president; Miss Eliza Clarke, secretary; Miss M. L. Moody, assistant secretary; Miss E. S. Rosser, treasurer.

We would call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Waugenheim, Artist and Photographer, No. 131 Poydras street near Camp. He has thoroughly renovated this well-known gallery and provided it with the latest improvements. His many years of connection with the leading establishments of Messrs. Sarony and Gurney & Son, New York, is a guarantee that all orders in the different branches of photography will be executed in the most artistic style, and at the same time at greatly reduced prices, would particularly mention his crayon-portaits and portrait-glasses which are unsurpassed both in regard to likeness and durability, and recommend a visit to his establishment to examine his work.

By order of the Board of Bishops,
WILLIAM L. HARRIS, Secretary.
New York, Nov. 17, 1877.

The Atlantic life-size portrait of Whittier is the finest one of this honored poet ever offered to the public, and can be obtained by all subscribers to and purchasers of the Atlantic Monthly for 1878 for one dollar. The companion portraits of Bryant and Longfellow can be obtained on the same terms. The November and December numbers of the Atlantic, containing poems by Whittier and Longfellow, and the commencement of Mr. Bishop's new serial story, will be sent free to all new subscribers who remit to the Publishers before December 1st, 1877. Price of the Atlantic, $4.00; of the portraits, $1 00 each, additional. Address H. O. Houghton & Co., Riverside Press, Cambridge, Mass.

The General Missionary Committee.

The annual meeting of the General Missionary Committee began in New York on Wednesday, the 14th inst., the bishops presiding alternately. The Treasurer's report showed that the debt of last year has been reduced by $92,979.-70, from an aggregate of $262,000 debt last year. The receipts during the year ending October 31, 1877, were $628,977.25. The disbursements for the same period were $560,055.40. The net cash debt of the treasury at this date is $82, 824.71, but there are letters of credit now due which increase the total liabilities to $169,375.86. The expenses have been decreased during the year below those of the former year $139,848.95, while the receipts have increased $34,788.38. The Western conferences increased their contributions during this year $20,331.67, while the Eastern conferences increased only $4,457.80 nominally, though actnally only a little over $2000. The foreign work received during the year just closing, including the exchange and percentage on letters of credit, $267,722. The home missions received $268,700, making $536,421. After considerable discussion the Committee agreed by vote to make their appropriations for the ensuing year on the basis of $668,000, of which sum not less than $100,000 shall be for the payment of the debt.

In the afternoon the appropriations to the Texas conferences were taken up out of their order, to enable Bishop Harris to telegraph the results to Bishop Foster, who is now in Texas. The Southern German Conference received $8000—the same amount that it had last last year. The Austin Conference received $3500; the Texas Conference, $4500, and the West Texas Conference, $3000. The Committee then took up the foreign mission work, and in discussing a motion to give the Liberia Conference $5000, and $2000 for new work in the interior, Bishop Haven, who visited that country last year, said that his Church was ahead of any other Church there. The Bishop thinks that the interior of Africa must be opened from Liberia rather than along the line of the Congo river. The first sum was granted and $2500 for interior work. The appropriations for South American missions were taken up and $7500 (gold) granted, and pending a discussion for an appropriation of $5000 for an orphanage in the La Plata Valley of Uruguay, the Committee adjourned.

On Thursday appropriations were made to Foo Chow, $14,000; Central China, $6600; North China, $9000; Germany and Switzerland, $20,000; Denmark, $8000; Norway, $11,000; Sweden, $21,000; and North India Conference, $55,000. South India received $600 for transfer of ministers. There was appropriated $4000 for Bulgaria, left at the disposal of the Board of Missions. To Italy was appropriated $16,818, with an additional $1000 contingent on enlargement of the work. Mexico received $22,850; Japan received $16,171. The aggregate appropriations to the foreign work amount to $220,539, to which must be added exchange at fifteen per cent, making a total of $268,619.85. This is a reduction of $5381 on the sum appropriated a year ago to foreign missions.

On Friday, appropriations were made to Arizona, $5000; New Mexico, $9000; Northwest Swedish, $5000; California Swedish, $1,-000; Norwegian work in Minnesota, $2000; Swedish work in New York East Conference, $1400; Norwegian work in the same Conference, $1800; Norwegian work in Wisconsin, $1800; German Missions in California, $1500; Central German, $3600; Chicago German, $2750; East German, $5500; Louisiana German work, $1600; Northwest German, $4000; Southwest German, $6000; Cawnpoor School, India, $3050.

On Saturday, the following appropriations were made: California Chinese Mission, $10,500; Indian Missions, California, $500; Central New York, $300; Columbia River, $200; Detroit, $700; Genessee, $230; Michigan, $700; Northern New York, $250; Wisconsin, $200. English-speaking Missions: Alabamba, $2000; Arkansas, $4000; California, $3000; Central Alabama, $2500; Colorado, $4500; Delaware, $1000; Central Tennessee, $2500; East Maine, $750; Florida, $320; Georgia, $3000; Holston, $5000; Kansas, $3500; Kentucky, $5000; Lexington, $2000; Louisiana, $7,-000; Michigan, $2000; Minnesota, $5500; Mississippi, $6500; Missouri, $3000; North-western Iowa, $5000, $1000 of which is to be used in Deadwood and Black Hills; St. Louis, $4000; Southern Kansas, $3500; for Indian work of Wyandot, Missouri, attached to the Southern Kansas Conference, $300; Tennessee, $2500; Utah, $4000; Washington, $2500; West Virginia, $2,-500; Western Wisconsin, $1500; Wisconsin, $1000.

The following is a recapitulation of the appropriation: Foreign Missions and Exchange, $236,577; Missions in Territories of the United States, $14,000; Welsh Missions, $100; Scandinavian Missions, $13,-000; German Missions, $31,050; American Chinese Missions, $10,-500; American Indian Missions, $3080; English-speaking Missions, $148,300; Miscellaneous, $67,000; South American Mission and exchange, $11,000; liquidation of debt, $120,000. Total, $676,507. Next week we will give, in tabular form, an official report of the appropriations and assessments.—Western Advocate.

The Pope is evidently very near to the end of his long and eventful reign. No pontiff has reigned so long, and none have witnessed changes so great in the condition of the Vatican and of the world. When he ascended the throne, he reigned directly over the fairest part of Italy, and shared the control of all the remainder of it with petty princes who were dependent upon his favor. He was king of Rome, and virtual emperor of Italy. By a concordat he divided the domain of Austria with the reigning family. In Belgium and in the greater part of Germany, outside of Prussia, his rule and his revenues were only less than in Austria. In Spain his power was scarcely second to that of the Burbons. He found France free from his yoke, but the perjured Louis Napoleon again fitted it on the French neck, and upon his own. In Mexico his subordinates held nearly a third part of the entire property of the nation, by titles in fee simple, under the laws of the land. Every country of South America acknowledged fealty to him, except the small Dutch and British possessions on the north-east coast. At no time before, since the beginning of the Reformation, had the papacy been so powerful. The blows have fallen upon this great power thickly and fast. Austria abolished the concordat. The Savoyard Prince conquered Italy, wrested the Pope's dominions from him, and confiscated the monastic property. Napoleon, "eldest son of the Church," was overthrown at Sedan. Germany became a Protestant empire. Mexico confiscated the papal property. Brazil became an empire more free, liberal and progressive than any of the adjoining republics. In the United States and England only have compensations been made for these vast losses. Sorely against the will of the Pope, his power has been changing its form from civil to moral authority. Within a few days or weeks at most, the future of the papacy will be decided by the election of a new incumbent to the throne, an Italian, no doubt, and probably one who will follow the general policy of Pius in still pursuing the phantom of vanished power in the sword and sceptre.—Interior.

Lesson XLIX.—Dec. 9, 1877.—PAUL IN MELITA.

SCRIPTURE.—Acts 28: 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise."—Rom. 1: 14.

TOPIC.—"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."—Heb. 13: 2.

(Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.)

Unduly Suspected (1-4.)—Any one can see that the distress upon the sea was prolonged into discomfort upon the shore. The morning was cold and wet. Drenched and shivering from their buffeting with the waves, the escaped passengers and crew gathered in comfortless groups upon the shore. The rain did not permit them to dry, and the cold wind penetrated to their already chilled marrow. Cast upon an unknown coast, their ship pounding to pieces upon the bar, uncertain of what sort of a reception awaited them, the rain and the cold agravating the wretchedness of their condition, it was no cheerful circumstances in which the escaped voyagers found themselves on the morning of their shipwreck.

Even on a sparsely settled coast it does not take long for a shipwreck to gather a crowd. A number of the islanders soon gathered, moved with the sympathy that such a calamity always excites. The text speaks of them as "barbarians," while their acts prove them to have been just the opposite of the modern meaning of the term. The slander is one of the innocent aspersions of time; for the term, as then used, meant nothing more than that the inhabitants did not speak Greek, the then language of civilization. "Barbarians" signified, then, no more than "foreigners" does now. But though they did not speak the language of Greece, they had a language of the heart that was just as easily understood, and far more grateful to the shipwrecked sufferers. They kindled a fire by which they could warm their bodies benumbed with the cold, and "received" them into their own homes. They exhibited all those kindnesses that such a disaster is sure to evoke—benefactions that surprise the people by showing how much stronger than they suspected is the tie of brotherhood between men.

Real character is shown in little things. It is not of slight importance, therefore, that we learn that Paul "gathered a bundle of sticks." Some men would have said, had they been in his place, "I have borne the principal brunt of the sea, now it is time for some one else to labor." Such, however, was not his spirit. The one who cheered them on the sea was just the one to try to make his fellow sufferers comfortable on the land. He thought nothing of his own dignity, but only of the comfort of those about him. It was the disposition shown in carrying the armful of sticks that brought angels into communion with him. Had he not had that, there probably would have been no angelic visitor on board the ship during the storm. Were human hearts more full of such active benevolences, they themselves, perhaps, would be much more waited on by angelic ministers than they now are. Selfishness is no inviting door for angel, or man, to enter.

Felt no Harm. There can be but one interpretation to this, and that is, that, except for divine interposition, he would have felt the effects of the poison of the viper. He was bitten; but God would not suffer the serpent to thwart his pledge any more than he would the sea. He had promised that Paul should stand before Cæsar, and neither the fury of the waves, the might of the wind, nor the venom of a snake was to be permitted to defeat his sacred word. At Lystra Paul was declared a god, and then stoned as an impostor. Here the preceeding was reversed—he was first declared a murderer and then was proclaimed to be a god. A pendium never swings to one end of the arc without swinging, when released, back to the full height of the other.

They did not change their minds until they had looked for a long while. Just imagine the breathless interest that, for a time they took in Paul. No one, we may be sure, took his eyes off from him. First they expected to see his body become bloated from the poison, and then, as that did not happen, that he would suddenly drop down dead. How curious and awe-struck was the multitude that surrounded him! And when, after long waiting, they saw that his flesh did not change, that his skin still appeared natural and that his bodily powers were unimpaired, what a revolution of feeling there was! Ignorant as they were of the true God, no wonder that on beholding such a marvel as this, they not only declared that the man was no murderer but was a god. The attack of the serpent was a good thing for the apostle. It was God's way of introducing his servant! By it, he said, in a way that the dullest of them could not fail to comprehend: "This is my messenger; hear ye him."

Rightfully Honored (7-10.)—Among those who opened their homes to those whom the sea had thrust upon their hospitality was Publius, the Roman ruler of the island. Paul soon had an opportunity to repay him for his kindness. The father of Publius was taken sick with a fever and a dysentery. In the original it is with

"fevers," thus indicating the recurring attack of a fever. In the medical precision of statement here used, we detect the pen of Luke, "the beloved physician." Paul's method of healing was simple: 1. He prayed. Though he long had been an apostle, and had long been accustomed to work miracles, still he needed to pray. The power had not become so resident in him, that he could perform such wonders without a fresh supply of divine energy. Daily prayer is needed to bring daily power. And because he prayed, too, the islanders were in no danger of again calling him god. All who saw him kneeling, knew that, whatever was to follow was not to be done in his own name, or by his own might. Loaded up with such things as were necessary. For their journey. All that gratitude could think of to make that journey pleasant, no doubt was levied upon. They had been thrown upon the mercy of the inhabitants—they had brought money to them. They began by being indebted to the kindness of the residents—they left with their benefactors largely in their debt. The people of Malta found that, in the shipwrecked travelers, they had been entertaining angels unawares.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, For 1878.

A POLITICAL, LITERARY, AND GENERAL NEWSPAPER.

Devoted to Reform in Municipal, State and General Government.

ESTABLISHED, 1851.

During the long and exciting Presidential campaign of 1876, and the anxious period of political uncertainty which succeeded it, THE NEW YORK TIMES had a very important share in determining the result of one of the most momentous contests in American history. The course of THE TIMES during the whole of that eventful struggle has secured for it a large addition to the number of its supporters, and has placed beyond controversy its position as the foremost Republican newspaper in the United States.

The course of THE TIMES will be guided in the future, as it has been in the past, by the consideration that the interests of Republican Party are in all cases to be set above the interests of its leaders, and that the honor and welfare of the country are to be considered before either. Its attitude is that of independence within the Republican Party, for in that way can the interests of the people be most effectually served.

So long as any of the great principles with which the Party has been identified remain in dispute, THE TIMES will refuse to consider the work of Republicanism as ended. It will labor to maintain the highest standard of partisan obligation in the treatment of questions affecting the financial honor of the nation, the purification of the public service, and the gradual readjustment of the fiscal system to meet the changing condition of trade and manufactures. It will steadily oppose all plans, no matter by whom urged, which tend to postpone the date of resumption beyond that fixed by law, to pay the national creditor on any other basis than that of gold, to preserve import duties which clog the development of American industry, or to perpetuate in the public service the pernicious principles that "to the victors belong the spoils."

While carefully avoiding all that may tend to promote sectional animosity among our people, THE TIMES will urge, with the utmost decision, the national duty of protecting the freedmen and the Northern immigrants in the South in the possession of rights guaranteed them by the Constitution. It will do all in its power to promote the policy of peace and conciliation between North and South, but will not lose sight of the fact that Northern confidence and amnesty must find their return in the enforcement of even-handed justice and scrupulous regard for the letter and spirit of the law on the part of the South.

Its influence as a leading exponent of political opinion will be strengthened by all that is needful to embrace the value of THE TIMES as a daily record of news. The acknowledged excellence of its correspondence by mail and telegraph from all parts of the world will be fully maintained. THE TIMES has shown during the Russo-Turkish war how ample are its resources, and how well-directed is its enterprise. Its voluminous foreign correspondence for the last year is admitted to have furnished some of the most valuable historical data available for the record of a highly-important epoch. The events in Europe and elsewhere during the coming year will be treated with the same fullness, fairness, and accuracy as have distinguished its treatment of those which now belong to the past.

In the sphere of literary and artistic criticism, of scientific, social, and general discussion, THE TIMES will address itself as heretofore, to the appreciation of the educated and intelligent classes of the American people. It will be lively without being sensational, aggressive without being coarse; at all times it will strive to be fearless and independent in the championship of the right. No theories subversive of the principles on which the sacredness of family ties and the existence of society alike repose will be promulgated in its columns.

THE TIMES rejects all advertisements of lotteries, of quacks and medical pretenders, and of all other agencies by which the insidious poison of vice is disseminated throughout society. It will be in the future, as in the past, a newspaper specially adapted for family reading.

THE WEEKLY TIMES, containing as it does selected editorials on topics of national and general interest from the columns of the daily issue, as well as a concise summary of political, social, and foreign news, besides other features which recommend it to all classes of readers, is a paper [illegible] in every portion of the [illegible]. No Republican newspaper [illegible] in circulation, and it will be the aim of the conductors to use every means [illegible] to maintain its well-earned [illegible] to make its popularity [illegible]

Daniel F. Beatty's

PIANOS & ORGANS.

Factory Established in 1856.

What is said of these celebrated instruments at home. Beware of imitation!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Washington, New Jersey, take pleasure in stating that we have been personally acquainted with Daniel F. Beatty, for a number of years, and are confident that he is strictly honest, and a perfectly responsible man, and that his instruments are what he represents them to be. James H. Groff, ex-Mayor, and Vice President First National Bank. Judge P. H. Hann, Cashier, First National [illegible]

CAUTION. [illegible] into existence [illegible] of whom have [illegible] been [illegible] employ, whose want of experience [illegible] to those who are capable of judging. I caution all who think of purchasing either a piano or organ to beware of such imitators. Some [illegible] stop-work with same names as mine, and otherwise copy my styles of cases in order to sell their goods on the reputation I have gained. See that the words "Beatty's Organ," "Golden Tongue," Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J., U. S. A., are stenciled on name-bar of Organs, and that the Piano have the words, "Beatty's Piano," with the last word underlined, without which none are genuine. These instruments are acknowledged by the press and the people to be the sweetest toned and the most perfect ever made; are fully warranted for six years as strictly first class, and are shipped on from 5 to 15 days' test trial, money refunded and freight paid both ways if they are unsatisfactory. Good, reliable agents wanted everywhere, but where I have none large discounts made to introduce them in new localities at once. Liberal discounts to churches, schools, lodges, halls, ministers, teachers, etc. Send for new Illustrated Advertiser (Catalogue Edition), containing testimonials from hundreds who are using them, some of whom you may know. Address, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

Daniel F. Beatty's

PIANOS & ORGANS

BEATTY PIANO Grand, Square and Upright, and Beatty's Celebrated GOLDEN TONGUE PARLOR ORGANS are the sweetest toned and most perfect instruments ever before manufactured in this or any other country. The world is challenged to equal them. Best discounts and terms ever before given. Rock bottom panic prices, now ready to jobbers, agents, and the trade in general. An offer. These celebrated instruments (either Piano or Organ) boxed and shipped anywhere, on five or fifteen days' test trial. Money refunded and freight charges paid both ways if in any way unsatisfactory. Fully warranted for six years as strictly first class. Extraordinary Liberal Discounts given to Churches, Schools, Lodges, Halls, Ministers, Teachers, etc., in order to have them introduced at once where I have no agents. Thousands now in use. New Illustrated Advertiser (Catalogue Edition) with list of testimonials, now ready, sent free. Established in 1859. Address, DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

ONLY A LITTLE GRAVE.

"Only a little grave," they said,
"Only a little child that's dead;"
And so they carelessly turned away
From the mound the spade had made that day.
Ah! they did not know how deep a shade
That little grave in our home had made.
I know the coffin was narrow and small;
One yard would have served for an ample pall;
And one man in his arms could have borne away
The rosewood and its freight of clay.
But I know that darling hopes were hid
Beneath that little coffin lid.

I knew that a mother stood that day
With folded hands by that form of clay;
I knew that burning tears were hid
'Neath the drooping lash and aching lid,
And I knew her lip, and cheek, and brow,
Were almost as white as her baby's now.

I know that some things were hid away,
The crimson frock and wrappings gray;
The little hushed half worn shoe,
The cap with its plume and tassels blue;
And an empty crib, with its covers spread,
As white as the face of the sinless dead.

'Tis a little grave; but O, have a care!
For world-wide hopes are buried there;
And ye, perhaps, in coming years,
May see, like her, through blinding tears,
How much of light, how much of joy,
Is buried up with an only boy.
—Young Pilgrim.

Peace.

Nineteen centuries ago, a Man whose gentile lips taught the race of his fellow men ultimate wisdom, in one of the loftiest moods his human nature ever reached while [illegible] in flesh, said: "Blessed are the peacemakers." International Review.

Between the Quarterlies and the Monthlies

SIX TIMES A YEAR.

I. The chief object of this Review is to supply the demand for a non-partisan [illegible] In [illegible] the Review will observe the interests of no sect or party. The Review will aim to discuss, in a vigorous, interesting and impartial manner, [illegible] the important literary, scientific, social, and political and religious questions of the day.

II. It brings to its pages the best talent of Europe and America, and seeks to be a medium of communication between representative thinkers of every nation.

III. The interests and union of the many foreign elements that constitute American society are a very important part of the work assumed by the International Review.

IV. Like the Quarterlies, it addresses scholars, and like the Monthlies, aims to be of value to the practical men in business and the professions, and of interest to members of the family.

V. Each number contains fresh and reliable notices of important new American and European Books.

VI. The Art Department will be conducted by Mr. Phillip Gilbert Hamerton.

VII. Editorial comments upon the course of events at home and abroad, having special reference to the interests of the United States, are given in, and add strength and timeliness to every issue.

VIII. The success of the International Review is made to depend on a comprehensive plan, solid merit, and adaption in style and subject to the age in which we live.

ALL ARTICLES ARE ORIGINAL.

General News Items.

Congressman Robert Smalls, of Georgia, has been convicted of bribery while State Senator.

The Galveston News says the work of clearing titles to the stolen lands of the Kansas-Texas ring will produce five thousand law suits.

Postal cards to the number of 26,885,500 were sold last month. This is the heaviest consumption in any single month since the cards were introduced in 1873.

On the 15th inst., the new gas works at Indianapolis were the scene of a violent explosion, while the workmen were at dinner. The loss amounts to about $20,000.

[illegible] elected [illegible] W. H. Sims, Lieutenant Governor of Mississippi, by nearly 100,000 majority, abolished the office to which he was elected.

The Legislature of Tennessee has been called to meet in extra session December 5th, for financial legislation. A proposition to fund the State debt at sixty cents on the dollar finds favor in some quarters.

Through the bell-punch system the whisky dealers of Richmond have paid a tax of $15,000 in six weeks' time, whereas in the country towns, where the registers have not yet been put up, no tax has been paid. This tax will probably yield the State hundreds of thousands of dollars a year.

A company of San Francisco capitalists, with $10,000,000 of stock capital, propose to lay an ocean cable under the Pacific, and cultivate more intimate relation with the Celestials. The company hope to secure the necessary franchise from the Hawaiian, Japanese and Chinese governments. Cable dispatches will soon be going around the globe.

A band of robbers, lying in wait in Nevada for a stage in which a large amount of treasure was to be shipped, were informed of the departure of the vehicle from Eureka by a confederate's signal fire on the top of a mountain nearly thirty miles distant. This fire also excited suspicion, and a guard was sent to protect the stage. A desperate encounter was the result, and the robbers we all killed or captured.

The Northwest was shaken by an earthquake on the 16th inst. It extended as far east as the Mississippi river, south to some points in Kansas, west to Lincoln, Neb., and perhaps further, and north as far as the upper section of Iowa. Its western circuit was where its power was principally manifested, and although it shook up the buildings and frightened the people in many towns it did no great damage in any quarter.

The ports of China open to foreign intercourse are Niuchwang, with 60,000 inhabitants; Tientsin, with 950,000; Tsifu, with 30,000; Hankow, with 600,000; Kuikiang, with 40,000; Chinkiang, with 140,000; Fucion, with 600,000; Tamsui, with 50,000; Takou, Taiwanfu, and Piton, with 235,000; Amoy, with 88,000; Swatow, with 20,000; Canton, with 1,100,000; Kuingcian and Hoihon, with 30,000; in all about 4,751,000 population. The entire number of foreign residents of these ports is 3,607, of whom [illegible] are English, 566 Americans, [illegible] German, 298 French, etc.

Six steamships, ranging between a thousand and seventeen hundred tons each, are advertised to run from Norfolk to Liverpool, fortnightly, until the close of the year. The first vessel sailed with 4000 bales cotton. Twenty years ago no Southern port had steam to Europe. Now Baltimore has two regular lines, with other steamships putting in frequent trips, and New Orleans, Galveston, Savannah and Wilmington possess intermittent lines, running through the cotton season and occasionally afterwards. The main reliance thus far of Southern steam lines to Europe is cotton. If they desire regular European steamships they must create other commerce to the West Indies, Mexico and South America. Norfolk has one of the finest harbors in this country, and we heartily congratulate our Virginia neighbor upon its improving commercial prospects.

THE ORIGINAL
KING OF PAIN.

A Family Medicine,
Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRHŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others; as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. For sale by all druggists and country stores.

half dollar last Conference. I do not know who. I found a button in another collection. Please leave all such at home this year. I know you often take collections all rolled up and do not count them. That may do you but it will not do me. I must have every cent of what you report. Two brethren had to make up collections last Conference and one of them was not satisfied until the collections had been counted five times. See you get your money from your steward correct. If you do not you will have to shell out from your own pocket.

4th:—Do not bring ten and five cent pieces to count. I am aware all of our collections have them. We are glad to get them. Please step into your nearest store or post office and get bills for them. You will like to carry them better than a pocket full of nickels, and your friends will be glad to have the change. Just think of asking a poor secretary who is doing your work to count three or four hundred dollars in nickels. Again I ask, please bring bills.

5th: Please have patience with your Secretary. No man can count money and listen with one ear to a good brother at his elbow, who is in a hurry. Do not be in a hurry. You must take time to attend to money matters. Last year I gave the fifth collection ten dollars too much just because some brother was in a hurry, and paid it out of my own pocket at last. I am glad our old worn out men received it, but that did not make it just. Please take your time. There is plenty of time to take all these seventy-two reports, with the money, if you only have patience and are ready when they are called for. Order is nature's first law, here, as well as anywhere else. I know you want to get rid of your collections just as soon as you can. Well, have them all ready and your Secretary will make short work of it next year.

I paid twenty-six dollars and fifty cents to find out this much about that conference office. You can have my experience gratis if you will only help the unfortunate man who is elected at the Conference of 1878 to the office of Statistical Secretary. Yours in bonds of love, mittees were well written and suggestive of the importance of the advancement and growth of all our connectional interests. Bro. Harris and his liberal-hearted people treated the Conference in royal style. Our Gallatin friends certainly know how to entertain strangers, and they have the wherewith to do it. As the Conference resolution of thanks expressed, "May God bless them." Dr. Braden was present with his usual activity and earnestness, and the Conference was greatly profited by his practical suggestions and timely advice. Revivals were reported at four different points on the District, and the Conference made special prayer for their success. The following resolution was offered:

T. EDWARD MADDEN.

[illegible] the several con-

Resolved, That we adopt the SOUTHWESTERN CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE as the official organ of the Nashville District.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to—the brethren pledging themselves to renewed effort for the support of the SOUTHWESTERN ADVOCATE.

After two days of pleasant and profitable meeting the Conference adjourned to meet at Nashville. Time to be fixed by the Presiding Elder. C. S. SMITH, Sec'y.

Church Extension Society Anniversary.

The Twelfth Anniversary of the Board of Curch Extension was held in Arch St. M. E. Church, Phila., on Thursday evening, November 22. The spacious edifice was well filled. In the absence of Bishop Simpson, who was to have presided, Bishop Scott led the exercises of the evening, which were of a highly interesting character. A choir of trained voices under the charge of Prof. Wm. G. Fischer rendered the music, and after their opening hymn a selection of Scripture was read by the Rev. J. M. Trimble, D. D. The choir and congregation then sang to the inspiring melody of Hursley, the well-known hymn,

"O Thou to whom in ancient time,
The Psalmist's sacred harp was strung," following which the Rev. Bishop Peck made an earnest prayer, invoking the blessing of God upon the efforts of the Board of Church Extension. The Secretary, Rev. Dr. Kynett, then read the report of the Secretary and Treasurer.

Rev. J. H. McCarty, D. D., of New Orleans, made a long and very interesting address on "Our Country, its Glories and its Perils," sketching in a very pleasing and animated style the extent, capacity and possibilities of America. In announcing his subject he said that he had taken this theme because of the fact that the Church of Christ, in whose interest they were assembled, and which lies so very close to our hearts, has very much to do with the physical country itself.

You know, said the speaker, that the sun ray has for its direct mission the illumination of space, and we always speak of the sun ray as giving us light; yet the chemist knows we do not comprehend the sun rays. There are some mechanical influences that are not seen by the eye. The light is one thing, the operation of the sunbeam another. It is, I know, the business of the Church of Christ to lift men out of sin and bring them up before the throne of God. This is the first and the grandest mission of the Church; but at the same time the Church looks upon society, the Church fosters patriotism and industry and every good and virtuous trait. Then, you know, there is an intimate relation between spirit and matter. When the great Apostle gave that pungent address to the Romans he may have had something of this idea in his mind.

"I beseech you brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies"—your physical bodies—"a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

The speaker then went on to show the intimate relation existing between the operations of the Church of Christ with the physical conditions around us. How near allied, in reality the Church was to a business corporation. How it sometimes happened that it would even get into debt and how necessary to use all the means, appliances, foresight, energy and business tact to bring about a prosperous condition of things.

Passing to a vivid sketch of the land and nation we occupy, he pointed out the perils that had beset us and the dangers ahead; and how the Church of Christ was to be the great lever to work upon and lift up the grandeur and glory of the Western World.

At the conclusion of the Doctor's address, which, although a lengthy one, was well received, and held the interest and attention of all, the choir and congregation sang the 23[illegible]th Hymn.

"Hear what God the Lord hath spoken."

The Rev. M. S. Hard, of Ithaca, N. Y., who was on the programme for an address, was detained by the death of his father.

The Rev. Bishop Bowman, who was also one of the announced speakers, was therefore obliged to do double duty, and made an exceedingly interesting address, giving his views as to the work of the different Boards of the Church, the Missionary Society, the Freedmen's Aid Society, and the Women's Missionary Society, dwelling particularly upon the character and work of the Board of Church Extension, and said, "I find in looking over the great work of the Methodist Episcopal Church that there are three special agencies that they employ for the accomplishment of the work they have in hand.

We have in the first place, the great Missionary Society, through which we propose to send the gospel to those regions where the gospel is not—that is, in foreign lands and also at home. Then we have what is called the Freedmen's Aid Society, through which we propose to educate the colored people of the South, in the main, though the work is not exclusively confined to the colored people. Then we have what is called the Church Extension Society which proposes, as we have already heard to-night, to build churches, or to aid the people in building churches, or in paying debts upon churches, so that the Missionary will have a place to preach the gospel, and so far as the Southern country is concerned, where the people may have a place to teach the children, and also to have the gospel preached. For you know that in these poorer districts the church building must also be used for the day school.

Now if we look at it for a moment, we will see that these three great enterprises are intimately connected and cannot very well be separated. We could not well dispense with either at this time. Certainly the mere preaching of the gospel in many sections of our country at this time, without a place in which to preach, would not accomplish all that is desired and aimed at in sending out the gospel by the missionary. And then, the Freedmen's Aid Society could not accomplish all its work in the South without the aid of the Church Extension movement.

The speaker then went on to give in detail his experiences among the people of the South and the far West, showing how necessary the work of the Board of Church Extension was and the great good it was accomplishing. He dwelt upon his visit to New Mexico, giving an interesting account of his visit to that territory, and also his pleasant experiences whilst holding Conference at Bozeman, Montana Territory, and closed his remarks with the earnest prayer that God would bless the Church Extension Society and those who are in connection with it, and make them still more abundant in their labor of love in the future.

Liberty.

Men often entertain very crude conceptions of liberty. With some it is merely the privilege of following their own unrestrained passions and impulses. Such liberty is self-destructive. It is the liberty of a clock without a pendulum—liberty to run rapidly down; the liberty to make shipwreck; the liberty of a steam engine without a safety-valve or a governor—liberty to bring death and destruction to itself and everything connected with it. God sanctions no such conceptions of human freedom. The only liberty which the Bible recognizes or God approves, is the liberty to do right.—Western Recorder.

Southwestern Christian Advocate, 1878.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOUTHWESTERN:

We ask every one of you to read each line of the following address:

I. General Remarks.

1. The Southwestern Christian Advocate is an absolute necessity to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. That work is largely of a missionary type, needing the constant assistance and inspiration of a weekly newspaper.

2. The SOUTHWESTERN has been a success beyond the expectations of even its best friends. It lived and grew for three years as a private enterprise, and so important was it considered to our Southern work by the last General Conference that it was adopted as an official journal of the Church.

3. The course of the SOUTHWESTERN has been decided and consistent on all questions relating to our work in the South. While others have vacillated between seasons of excessive gush or bitter denunciation on "Fraternity" and kindred topics, this paper has always, in a dignified and positive way, demanded the proper recognition of our Church and ministers in the South, and commended those who in any way gave that recognition.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN has done, and is in a condition to do, more for the colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church than any other paper in the Church. This paper has from the first waged an unceasing war against the spirit of caste, both in State and Church, and has never once lowered its standard to the demands of the enemies of the colored people, or their friends who, from motives of policy, have aided to perpetuate the spirit and fact of caste in Church or State.

5. The location of the SOUTHWESTERN in the chief metropolis of the South, its independent and consistent course, give it an extended influence among all classes of people. This is proved by the fact that it has, in the city of New Orleans, a larger circulation than any other religious journal.

6. January first the SOUTHWESTERN will be Enlarged by the addition of four columns, and it is our purpose to make the paper better than ever.

II. To Our People.

1. A large number of you are Local Preachers, or Exhorters, or Trustees, or Stewards or lass Leaders, in the Church. How can you be good officers in the Lord's army without your Church paper, to tell you of your Church duties, and report the condition and movements of that army?

2. Many of you are Sunday School Officers and Teachers. The SOUTHWESTERN gives every week more than a column on the Sunday School lesson for the Sunday following.

3. As Christians you want to be intelligent and progressive. You want to know of the work of God throughout the world. You want to read how God's people die. You want to read about your conference and preachers. You want to read how God's work is going on in your own and other Churches. How can you know these things without you take your Church paper?

4. Fathers and Mothers want their children to grow up to be moral and respectable. If so, those children must be instructed by good reading. Every number of the SOUTHWESTERN contains something to instruct and inspire the young.

5. Our Young Men and Women beginning life want to begin it right. The ambition to be as good as the best is noble. But to be good and successful, young men and women must be intelligent and moral, and faithful. Nothing will help to these good qualities more than the reading every week of a good newspaper.

6. Two Dollars a Year pays for the SOUTHWESTERN. That is less than four cents a week. Think how much money you spend foolishly before you talk about the times being too hard to take your Church paper.

III. To Our Preachers.

1. Next to the Bible and Discipline you need your Church paper, For Your Own Good, and next to preaching, and doing pastoral work, you must put your Church paper among your people, For Their Good. The families who read their Church paper are your most intelligent hearers, pay you best and pay the most to the benevolent collections. If, therefore, you want an intelligent congregation, and want to get your salary, and want to make good reports to Conference, put your Church paper into every family in your congregation, whether they are members of the Church or not.

2. You want to be Successful Pastors. The SOUTHWESTERN will help you. It will instruct your church officers in their duty, and your Sunday School officers and teachers in their duties, and by your people reading about other churches and pastors they will know better how to take care of and appreciate you.

3. As Leaders Among Your People you will have influence for good only as your people see you are their real friend. If you try to keep the light from them they will soon distrust and forsake you.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN is your Conference Paper, and will contain the notices of your Quarterly Meetings and District Conferences, and the accounts of the Church work among the Churches of your Conference.

IV. Our Terms.

1. We Pay the Postage ourselves, so that subscribers have only to pay their two dollars and then get the paper every week from the Post Office. In New Orleans the paper is delivered at the door.

2. Our rule is Cash in Advance. This is best for all.

3. We send the paper for one year—

In Texas.

The first session of the Austin Conference was held in Dallas, Texas, commencing November 15. Bishop Foster presided and Rev. M. A. Daugherty was elected Secretary. This Conference is composed of the white English-speaking ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Western Texas. We were unable to be at the Conference, but from conversations with Bishop Foster, and brethren who attended, we are enabled to judge of the work and spirit of the session.

The organization of this, our Fourth Annual Conference in Texas, marks an important era in the work of our church, in what is fast coming to be the Empire State of the South, if not of the nation. We entered the State twelve years ago, all Texas being included in the Texas District of the Mississippi Mission Conference. Then the Texas Conference was organized and grew rapidly, the largest proportion of the work being among the colored people. The first to go out from the Northern Texas Conference was the Southern German Conference, covering the whole State, which has grown rapidly. Next was organized the West Texas Conference, covering the Western half the State, and lastly, we have the Austin Conference, the devision being made on the color-line by the action of the West Texas Conference a year ago. This last division was made after much discussion, but having been effected, there is a disposition to accept it by all, and to enter heartily in the spirit of Christ into the work of the Church. We were among those who thought the division unwise, but it having been made, we appeal to all parties to let discussion cease on the subject, and let the one supreme purpose of all be to save souls. Of vastly greater importance to our work in Texas than the matter of Conference organization, is the fact that every year it is more and more evident that the Methodist Episcopal Church is increasing in numbers and strength. These four Conferences now include a membership of nearly twenty thousand.

We said that the organization of the Austin Conference marks an important era in our work in Texas. It is the formal proclamation on the part of the Church, that she proposes to go forth among the English-speaking white people of the State, and organize societies and build churches wherever there are those to receive her. Already a great membership has been gathered among the colored people, and a young but vigorous Conference is operating among the German population, and now the Austin Conference goes forth to its special mission. In a very important sense, these Conferences are one. The Church helps all alike, according to their necessities, and there is no conflict of jurisdiction, but a hearty co-operation among the ministers and people. Thus organized, and thus backed by the Church with Missionary and Church Extension Aid, her ministers full of hope and zeal, and her membership true and devoted, who can compute the triumphs, in the near future, of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Texas. The territory of Texas could receive the entire population of the United States, and yet not be thickly populated. Its territory is larger than all of New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana. Emigrants from the older States, especially from the West and North-west, are entering Texas at the rate of six hundred a day. Even with the comparatively [illegible] settled population of today there is an absolute demand [illegible] of evangelistic [illegible] and when we consider what the population of the State will be [illegible] years, the duty of the hour [illegible] and imperative.

[illegible] and some of [illegible] the Methodist Episcopal [illegible] the North, who [illegible] have a mission [illegible] the South as a Church, or if [illegible] here, whether it [illegible] confined to certain [illegible] are no [illegible] but they are [illegible] of Wesley or As[illegible] was no doubt taunt[illegible] people with erect[illegible] in Eng[illegible] to the point, [illegible] largely one [illegible] absorption." [illegible] is not in [illegible] and has [illegible] the injury of any Church. No Church in the South has been benefitted more by our presence than the M. E. Church, South. As to the matter of "fraternity" with the latter Church, all we have to say is, that if fraternity is to be bought at the sacrifice of our Southern work, it had better never be mentioned. No other Church can do the work of the M. E. Church, and that Church cannot be guiltless before God, and surrender a plain duty at the dictation of any other Church. New England and Western Methodism is the work of Methodist carpet-baggers, who went to spread Scriptural holiness over those lands in spite of the timed souls who had conscientions scruples about aggressive church work, when other churches were already in the field. The work of the M. E. Church, South, in California, and other Northern States, is the work of Southern Methodist carpet-baggers. We glory in their devotion to their Church, because in that they can do most for Christ. May they soon be a thousand more than they are.

The Austin Conference begins with twenty-one appointments, divided into two districts. Dr. Brush and Rev. L. H. Carhart are the Presiding Elders, the latter also holding the pastorate of Sherman. These are leaders worthy of the best heroic age of Methodism. Rev. J. W. Otterman comes from Central Illinois Conference. Rev. W. E. McCarty from Indiana. A nobler band of men never undertook a work for Christ. Of the work of these men at various points we shall speak again.

The brethren of the Southern Methodist Church were very cordial at Dallas to the conference, giving their pulpits to be supplied, and showed their kindly feeling by attending the sessions.

On the twenty-third we found ourselves at Waco, the session of the West Texas Conference having already begun. Of this conference we will speak in our next.

Why are Our Prayers not Answered?

God is the hearer of prayer. He has commanded us to pray. He has made many promises to prayer. On the other hand there is a great deal of prayer offered. Prayers are continually going up to God. Why are there not more answers to prayer? Because we ourselves prevent the answers. Sometimes the lukewarm condition of our minds is the cause. We are really indifferent to the answer. Were God to answer our prayer we would be surprised, so little do we expect an answer. We ourselves would not give a child what it asks for if, by its tone and manner, it shows that it cares very little whether we grant the request or not. Answers to prayer are hindered by their hurried offering; excessive worldly engagements drive us into quick and hasty utterances which have had but little thought, and but little solemnity. They are quickly said and done with; we have said our prayers, but have we prayed? A want of system interferes very much with prayer. There is no appointed time for retirement, no little space hedged about for communion with God. The consequence is, something often happens to prevent prayer at the right time, and it is forgotten, or at best so slurred over that it amounts to little and brings no blessing. Worldly pleasures are a sad hindrance both to prayer and its answer. Some professors even indulge in worldly amusements to a degree that they have been aptly compared to flies that plunge into the honey until the sweet sticks to their wings and feet and they cannot fly.

The indulgence in any known sin is a chief hindrance. Anger, pride, envy, malice, covetnousness, sensuality, fraud, are so many weights that clog the wings of prayer, so many weights that keep it down. "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me," says the Psalmist. Your prayers are but vain words. The Lord will not hear them.

Do you want your prayers answered? Then there must be faith. Faith obtains the promises, Unbelief goes away empty. There must be holy living. The effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much. "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." "If any man doeth his will, him he heareth." There must be importunity. Remember the importunate widow. There must be a holy expectancy. Look, watch for the answer. Try to answer your own prayer as far as is in your power; God will do the rest.

The Southern Commissioner to Europe.

The proposition, emanating from Southern Representatives in Washington, to send a Commissioner to Europe to advocate the commercial interest of the South, has received emphatic endorsement by the press, and is concurred in by our own Cotton Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, among various other bodies of a like character. The Paris Exposition of 1878, will no doubt be a grand gathering of the official and industrial representations of Europe, and it is thought that it will afford a favorable opportunity to present the claims of the Southern States, as a promising and inviting field for the immigrant, capitalist, and skilled artisan. Following in the wake of this proposition, and received with equal unanimity, is the suggestion that United States Senator John B. Gordon, of Georgia, be selected as such Commissioner. It is proposed by voluntary subscriptions to raise a sum of money to defray the expenses of this Commissioner, in visiting such points, and conferring with such parties as he may deem advisable. Mr. Gordon, of the Empire State of the South, which has been first to introduce and profit by the introduction of cotton factories, is believed to be quite competent to discharge the duties sought to be conferred upon him, and has given some attention to the solid interests of the new political and industrial South. The idea is a good one, and we hope that not only will the South be represented at the Exposition by General Gordon, but by other eminent citizens, who, as visitors or delegates, will be present to champion the claims of the whole country. A remarkable activity has displayed itself within the past few months in all parts of the South, in the way of public enterprises, and this section is assuredly moving onward in the paths of prosperity, and tending to a future greatness that many are now slow to admit. General Gordon, in the event of his selection, would not leave this country on his important mission until after the adjournment of the regular session of Congress.

First Street Pound Meeting.

The next regular Pound Meeting of the First Street M. E. Church, will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday of the second week in December. The ladies of this church have determined, on this occasion, to make a special effort to meet the increased demand upon their fund. They invite all to be present, as aside from the pleasure of the occasion, the poor will suffer if, at this season of the year, they are not relieved—and every additional visitor or means additional aid. Donations solicited and thankfully received by Mother Eliza Gantt, President of the Pound Party, and Father Green, Pastor of First Street M. E. Church.

A MEMBER.

New Orleans, Dec. 3, 1877.

The progress of Christianity in the United States during the last century is almost incredible. Statistics go to show that in 1766 there were 1,943 Protestant churches, and 1,443 ministers; now there are 91,760 churches, and 58,060 ministers. Then there was one church for every two thousand people, now one for every half thousand. This statement hardly seems possible, but figures sustain it.

The City.

Senator Will Steven is believed to be in a fair stage of recovery from his recent severe illness.

The State assessments for New Orleans amount to $109,909,350; the municipal to $111,122,140.

The colored Normal School was formally opened last week, with Prof. Edmonds and Miss McKindle as teachers. There were over twenty applications, from both sexes, for admission.

Mayor Pilsbury received a note from a citizen who agreed to be one of 500 persons who will obligate themselves to contribute each $10 per month for the improvement of the public parks.

Ex-Speaker Mortimer Carr and Isaac A. Abbott, charged with bribery, and arranged before Judge Miltenberger, were remanded to the Parish Prison, in default of $1000 bonds, on the 29th inst.

The proposition to light the city with oil instead of gas is a measure of economy of so doubtful a kind, that most people do not want to see it put into practice. It is more light, and not less of it, in popular demand.

The Democrat was re-elected State Printer by the Printing Board. It resumed the publication of an evening edition on Saturday, at the novel price, for this city, of three cents a copy. It expects by this price to assist in the general circulation of cents.

The First street M. E. Church, corner of Dryades and First streets, was, on Tuesday evening 27th inst., enlivened by a parlor concert, given by the Sabbath-school for the purpose of raising means to purchase a site of land for a colored widows' home. We received complimentary tickets, for which the donor will accept our thanks. Mr. Y. H. Campbell was superintendent.

Last Friday a number of ladies met at Parlor F. of the St Charles Hotel, in response to a call made upon them, to give their influence in aid of the construction of the New Orleans Pacific Railroad. An organization, styled the "Ladies of New Orleans Pacific Railroad Association" was effected with the following officers: Mrs. J. F. Thomas, president; Mrs. J. W. Labouisse, vice-president, and Mrs. E. J. Holbrook secretary. A committee of six was appointed to wait upon prominent ladies, and solicit their influence for the enterprise and the use of their names upon printed circulars to be addressed to others. The committee is composed as follows: Mrs. Randall, chairman; Mrs. St Amand, Mrs. E. L. Saxon, Mrs. Kreger, Miss Tebault and Mrs. S. R. Hollingsworth.

Church Extension Society Report.

Church Extension Rooms of the Methodist Episcopal Church, No. 1020 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., November 15, 1877.

To the Members and Friends of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Though the past year has been one of the most trying in the financial history of our country, and of all countries, the devotion of our people to our church and its work has not faltered. True, retrenchment has been compelled everywhere, but not more in the church than elsewhere, nor more in various connectional departments of our work than in local church enterprises. Moved by one spirit all have agreed that we must at least maintain our position—"must hold the fort," and be ready for an advance when returning prosperity shall make it possible.

For the ten months of the present year, ending October 31st, we have received.

Collection, etc.,	$70,407,14
On Loan Fund,	21,208,61
Loans returned,	17,387,40
Giving for use,	$109,003.15

For the corresponding period of last year we received

Collections, etc.,	$58,392.51
On Loan Fund,	13,813.04
Loans returned,	18,294.09
Giving then for use,	$85,499.64
showing a net incr'se of	$23,503.51

This increase is chiefly by bequests, and larger receipts on the Loan Fund.

The detailed statement shows a small decrease in the collections from the churches, and in view of the fact that the increase, thus far, has been from irregular sources, we can scarcely hope that it will be maintained for the full year.

The work we have done is of great value to the church. Though the number of new churches built throughout the country is not so great as in former years, probably quite as many have appealed to us for help. They have been chiefly in sections of the country where great destitution has prevailed, and largely in the newer States and Territories where immigration has been flowing in.

But not the least valuable part of our work, during these hard times, has been the help granted to save churches which otherwise must have been lost. We adhere strictly to the rule not to grant aid to pay old church debts, "except to avoid imminent and otherwise inevitable disaster in the loss of church property," but in several cases churches have been actually sold for debt, and we have been called upon to help redeem them; and in others their loss, without aid from abroad, seemed inevitable. In all cases we have required that, with our aid, the property shall be placed beyond danger, and in most cases—always, where it is practicable—that the entire indebtedness should be paid. In this way we have helped to hold positions already taken, and avoid Church Contraction; but we are never forgetful of the fact that our proper work is Church Extension.

The number of churches aided during the ten months of the year has been

By donations alone,	158
" loans alone,	25
" donations and loans,	39
Total,	222

being 40 more than for the corresponding period of last year. These are scattered through 38 different States and Territories.

Dividing the country into four parts, by a line east and west, between the late slave and free States, north and south by the Mississippi River, northward to the southward boundary of Wisconsin, thence east to Lake Michigan, and thence northward; the churches aided by donations would be found located as follows: In the

North-east, 32, with average donations of $232.25
North-west, 60, with average donations of $182.50
South-east, 72, with average donations of $172.20
South-west, 33, with average donations of $181.20

This shows that our work is chiefly where the whole country is essentially missionary ground. It is in all cases among the needy; we go, not only to those who need us, but to those who need us most.

In the south, east and west, our work is chiefly, though not wholly among the freedmen. The churches aided are all inexpensive, but generally neat, substantial frame buildings, and, in a great many cases, are used for schools during the week, as well as for church and Sunday-school purposes on the Sabbath. The appropriations by the Southern States for education are very small, the State of New York alone spending more for education than all the South put together, yet no part of the country needs it so much. Our Freedmen's Aid Society does much in providing teachers and otherwise, and we rejoice that our work is of double value, in that we help to provide the houses in which the Lord's poor may be educated. In Georgia, the empire state of the South, while the state makes some appropriations for the education of the colored people, it does not own a single school-house for their use. In the course of nine years we have aided in the erection of 117 churches in Georgia, most of which are used also for schools.

In the north, east and west, where school-houses abound, the churches we have aided, though among the poor, are generally used, as they should be, exclusively for church and Sunday-school purposes.

A year ago, a lady in Philidelphia made a special offering of $250, to be used in securing the erection of a new church. Through Champlain McCabe the money was applied to a growing town in southern Kansas. The people were led to much greater liberality than was thought possible, and, with the additional help of a loan of $750 they have now a church worth over $6,000, and a very flourishing society and Sunday-school. Another lady gave $100 in response to our appeal in behalf of a German mission in Texas. Other amounts were added, and they have now a neat chapel, nearly ready for dedication, and feel that they have permanent footing in an important city, with a German population of over 12,000.

Our loans, being necessarily with reference to security, and probable ability to pay, as well as the necessities of the people, have run differently. Divided in the same manner, they are found as follows:

North-east, 11,	Average loans,	$436.35
North-west, 37	" "	390.60
South-east, 10	" "	258.35
South-west, 6	" "	320.00

These averages are exclusive of one special and exceptional loan of $3,500, to include which would mislead as to the general run of this part of our work.

Beginning the year January 1st, 1877, with a balance in the treasury of $5,503.81, we close the tenth month with a cash balance of $14,362.68. But applications for aid have been granted, to be paid when certain conditions shall be complied with, as follows:

For Donations,	$9,900.00
For Loans,	9,100.00
Total,	19,000.00
The present cash balance of	14,362.68
would therefore be overdrawn to the amount of	4,637.32

Our constant aim is to use as promptly as possible all the moneys placed in our treasury, but to avoid embarrassment by too largely anticipating the receipts of the future.

We come to you again for your annual offerings to this cause, confident that our work, thus briefly indicated, will commend itself to your confidence and generous support. The field is large and white to the harvest, and the demands upon us to aid in providing garners in which the reapers may "gather fruit unto eternal life," are constantly much beyond our means. We entreat you, as fellow laborers, to increase our means, that both sowers and reapers may have an increase of joy together.

In behalf of the Board of Church Extension.

Mrs. Louisa Hurse desires to know where her boy Richard Edward Hurse is. He is 14 years old, was stolen or enticed away from his home in Waco, Texas, about 8 years ago. Any information regarding him will be thankfully received by a heart-stricken mother.

Religious News.

The First Presbyterian Church, Oakland, Cal., has received a number of young Chinese to its communion. They are highly spoken of for their intelligence and piety.

At the recent session of the Michigan Methodist Episcopal Conference, fifty Indians were reported as converted at one charge, and one thousand new members were reported for another.

One thousand Young Men's Christian Asociations are know to be in existience on this continent, and tabulated reports of 821 of these are published in their Year Book for 1876.

Mr. Moody goes to Providence, R. I., in December, with the cordial support of the Regular Baptist, Free Baptist, Advent, Episcopal, Congregational, Presbyterian, and Methodist churches. A committee of thirty, fifteen of them ministers, has been appointed to arrange for the work.

Enoch Walked with God.

Gen. v: 22.

Sinners walk from God, they go in a contrary direction; they are opposed to His requirements, they refuse to listen to His call. But believers walk with God; in conversation, they turn to God; in justification, they are accepted before God; in sanctification, they conformed to the will of God; and then they walk with God. His precepts are their rule, His ways are their delight, His glory is their aim, and fellowship with Himself is their source of satisfaction. They communicate with God, place their confidence in God, expect every blessing from God, and strive to imitate the character of God. They walk with him in filial love, as their Father; in holy intercourse, as their Friend; and in grateful obedience as their covenant God. They walk with God in faith, believing his promises. They walk with God in hope, expecting his communications. They walk with God in love, enjoying His gracious presence and blessings. To walk with God is their honor, the proof of their reconciliation, and the evidence of their adoption. Walking with God on earth, they will rest with God in Heaven.—Rev. James Smith.

Literary Notices.

THE PRACTICAL TEACHER.

The Practical Teacher, a monthly journal devoted to the practical work of the schoolroom: S. H. Winchell & Co., Publishers, Chicago.

This is the first number of a new candidate for the favor of teachers and others interested in education, under the editorial care of Professor W. F. Phelps. Its fine book paper, its large, clear type, the variety and special adaptation of its articles to the actual needs of the teachers, as presented in its opening number, commend it very highly to the patronage of all engaged in the work of education. The subscription price is only one dollar per year. We wish the Practical Teacher abundant success.

THE BRITISH QUARTERLIES.

In the whole range of periodical literature, no publications can compare with the leading British quarterlies, that are reprinted in this country by the Leonard Scott Publishing Company. In respect to fidelity of research, accuracy of statement and purity of style, they are without any equal. They keep pace with modern thought, discovery, experiment and achievement, whether in religion, science, literature or art. At the same time the ablest writers fill the pages of these sterling magazines with most interesting reviews of history, and with an intelligent narration of the great events of the present day. They give the student the benefit of the research and thought of others. They are indispensible for the person whose daily avocations will allow him to read but a meagre account of what is being done and suggested by writers and thinkers, and of the great political movements which always keep the civilized world in agitation.

The Edinburgh is devoted to the Whig element of British politics. It is conducted now with a discrimination, freedom and intelligence worthy of its best days. The Westminster, Liberal in politics, commands admiration, even from those who cannot agree with it, for the boldness and vigor of its thoughts and statements, and the brilliancy of its style. The London Quarterly is truly and honorably Conservative, and always sets before the reader a rare "feast of fat things." The British Quarterly stands as a bulwark for the ancient faith; not disputing the right of science to search for truth; but denying that man by his searchings has found out God, or that revealed religion has been disproved by scientific theory and dogma. Besides the serious articles, Blackwood's Magazine is famous for lighter essays and tales and spirited pictures of life, and manners, and views and biographical sketches. Several of Bulwer's best novels first appeared in its pages.

These sterling periodicals, through the enterprise of the American publishers, are reprinted for readers in this country, at a price less than English subscribers have to pay for the originals. To do this the Leonard Scott Publishing Company is subjected to great expense, and ought to be encouraged by a wide circulation of its valuable reprints. Any one of these reviews can be obtained for four dollars a year—the four reviews and Blackwood's Magazine for fifteen dollars. No better and surer investment can be made with the same amount of money.—Buffalo Advertiser.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE FOR 1878.

The success of this sterling periodical is owing to the fact that it enables one with a small outlay of time and money, to keep pace with the best thought and literature of the day. Hence its importance to every American reader. The ablest living contributors to periodical literature are represented in its pages, some of whose names will be found in the prospectus published in another column. For 1878, an extra offer is made to all new subscribers; and reduced clubbing rates with other periodicals are also given by which a subscriber may at remarkably small cost obtain the cream of both home and foreign literature. Those selecting their periodicals for the new year, would do well to examine the prospectus. In no other way do we know of can a subscriber be put in possession of the best which the current literature of the world affords, so cheaply or conveniently.

The wonderful success of "Brown's Bronchial Troches," in supplying a much needed remedy for coughs, colds, and throat difficulties has led to many counterfeits. Free Consultations

The rich will pay after cure only.
The poor will be treated, attended to and cured free of charge.

BY

D. J. BEAU,

(FROM PARIS)

Chemist and Professor of Phrenology.

Consultations Every Day, from 8 o'Clock a.m. to 4 p.m. at

NO. 43 BOURBON STREET,

By means of his powerful tonic and invigorating medicines, which he applies himself, he has obtained the greatest success in every place he has visited along the Coast, and he can show certificates of persons restored to health who had been given up as incurable, and bed-ridden for years. By his treatment, numbers of ladies, as well as gentlemen, have recovered their health and bloom of youth.

His new system is a sure cure for Apparent Apoplexy, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Hemorrhage, Faintness, Sallowness, Strangulation, Diseases of the Womb, Fevers, Sore Eyes, Pain in the Stomach, Old and Rebellious Syphallitic Diseases, Scurvy, Scrofula, and all those Chronic Diseases which, in the South strike a man powerless and by a long agony lead certainly to death.

N. B.—His treatment excludes all those medicines having for base, arsenic, mercury, or quinine, which generally cause the decay of teeth and the weakening of all the organs, leaving the system in a state of prostration by taking off all its strength and very often afflicting it with new disease.

The Science of Phrenology has alone the power to recognize the symptoms characterizing diseases and to discover all the phases of existence; acquiring this knowledge only by a thorough study, it does not startle, but astonishes, and by its accuracy gives the person consulting a certainty of cure and an insight into what he is about.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Telling Fortunes.

I'll tell you two fortunes, my fine little lad,
For you to accept or refuse,
The one of them good the other one bad,
Now hear them and say which you choose.

I see many gifts, within reach of your hand,
A fortune right fair to behold,
A house and a hundred good acres of land,
With harvest fields yellow as gold.

I see a great orchard, the boughs hanging down
With apples, all russet and red,
I see droves of cattle, some white and some brown,
But all of them sleek and well fed.

I see droves of swallows about the barn door;
See the fanning mill whirling so fast;
I see them now threshing the wheat on the floor—
And now the bright picture is past!

And I see, rising dismally up in the place
Of the beautiful house and the land,
A man with a fiery red nose on his face,
And a little brown jug in his hand!

Oh, if you beheld him, my lad, you would wish
That he were less wretched to see;
For his boot toes they gape like the mouth of a fish,
And his trousers are out at the knee!

In walking he staggers now this way now that,
And his eyes they stand out like a bug's;
And he wears an old coat and a battered in hat,
And I think that the fault is the jug's.

For the text says the drunkard shall come to be poor,
And that drowsiness clothes men with rags;
And he doesn't look much like a man, I am sure,
Who has honest hard cash in his bags.

Now which will you have? To be thrifty and snug,
And to be right side up with your dish;
Or go with your eyes like the eyes of a bug,
And your shoes like the mouth of a fish!

The only known Restorer of Color and Perfect Hair Dressing Combined.

Does not stain the skin a particle or soil anything.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty that no one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Restorer," the most effectual article for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and a delightful hair dresser and beautifier—being free from sticky and gummy properties—clear and richly perfumed. Recommends itself to every lady and gentleman using fine toilet articles.

Extracts from Letters.

A. A. GIBSON, BARRYTOWN, Duchess County, N. Y., writes: April 30, 1877, DR. SWAYNE & SON; Phila., Gents—I enclose postoffice order for eight dollars, please send me one dozen "LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER." It has stopped my hair from falling out and restored it to its natural color. It has proved satisfactory in every respect.

DR. ISAAC H. MILLER, WEST BRECKNOCK, Pa., writes: As a restorer of Gray hair and preventive of baldness, it is the best remedy I have ever sold, and gives entire satisfaction.

WILLIAM SCHELL, GERMANTOWN, Columbia Co. N. Y., writes: April, 1877—THE LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER was received. I am delighted with it. You will find inclosed four dollars for a half dozen bottles by express.

London Hair Color Restorer

is the best and cleanest article ever made; is entirely harmless and free from all impure ingredients that render many other preparations injurious. It removes dandruff, stops the hair from falling, and restores the perfectly natural color. It is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet luxury.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,

READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office, Harrisonburg, Va., Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit. Very respectfully, WM. P. GROVE.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.

I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

SKIN DISEASES.

Swayne's All-healing Ointment is also a specific for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barber's Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Perfectly safe and harmless, even on the most tender infant. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes, $1.25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price. ☞ Sold by all leading Druggists. Prepared only by Little Rock Gazette: Two colored men, who state that they represent 3000 colored people in the State of Ohio, were in the city yesterday, visiting the railroad land offices with a view to purchasing for a colony.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has reversed the decision of Judge Kirkpatrick, granting attachments against the Governor and other Pennsylvania State officers, requiring them to appear before the grand jury in the riot cases.

In September 121 emigrants settled in Tennessee under the auspices of the Immigration Bureau; a large colony of Quakers from Pennsylvania is settling in Blount county, and the Coffee county landholders are donating fifty acres of land to each actual settler.

Dom Pedro has awarded to a Pittsburgh (Pa.) firm a contract to build a narrow-gauge railroad from the head of navigation on the Madeira River—a branch of the Amazon—to a point on the Mamore River, on the borders of Bolivia. The road will be one hundred and eighty miles long, and will cost $5,000,000.

A terrific colliery explosion took place on November 15, at Scranton, Pa. It was a fire-damp explosion. When the accident occurred nearly 200 men were at work in the mines. The force of the explosion was so great that loaded coal-cars were thrown twenty yards. A large number of men and boys are injured, some fatally.

Eight miles south of Ashland, North Mississippi, Homer V. Hunt was challenged by C. Mason Lane for saying of a young lady friend of the latter, "How I loathe any girl who is her equal!" He accepted, and as both were excellent shots, the distance was extended from fifteen to thirty-five yards. Hunter was killed and Lane mortally wounded at the first fire.

The legal obstacles in the way of the Hudson River Tunnel Co. have at length been removed, and it is announced that work will be commenced on the tunnel at once, and that it will be completed in three years. The tunnel is to be used by the railroads of New Jersey terminating in Jersey City, and will enable them to run their trains directly to New York City.

The Mexican border has again been the scene of trouble. Parties of Indians and Mexicans have crossed into Texas on the war path, and General Ord has cautioned the inhabitants of the threatened districts to be on their guard. El Paso county is represented to be under the control of a Mexican mob, which defies the United States authorities. Col. Villarcal is also reported to have invaded Mexico, 50 miles above Matamoras, in the interests of Escobedo and Lordo.

The oldest greenback five is under glass at Nashville, Tenn. The teller of the Third National Bank, in receiving a deposit, noticed a five marked letter A, No. 1, dated March 10, 1863. It was sent to the Treasury Department, where it was identified as the first five issued under the Legal Tender Act. It has been handsomely framed and will be presented to the Historical Society.

The railroad strike has opened the eyes of many railroad managers and superintendents to see more clearly the value of employing men of good moral character, who do not frequent liquor saloons, and who have enough honor to fulfil contracts. The general manager of the Michigan Central railroad has also issued a circular to the "heads of departments" on that road, calling their attention to the necessity of decreasing the amount of Sunday work.

The famous Nez Perce, Chief Joseph, has been interviewed by a correspondent, to whom he said: "It is all over now. My heart means peace, and when I surrended I surrendered to everybody." He asked the interpreter in what part of the reservation wheat would grow best, manifesting an intention of becoming a farmer next year. He said that he himself committed no murders, but, on the contrary, tried to stop them. He is a temperance man, and said that captured whisky was usually at the bottom of all the murders, the Indians getting almost crazy with it and utterly beyond his influence. He was glad to see General Howard, as he felt he would receive justice, and paid him the compliment of saying that it was he who broke him in spirit and strength at Clearwater so effectually that he never recovered from the blow.

Hard times in the United States are not attended by the horrors that are associated with the hard times in India. There the crops of 1876 were destroyed by the lack of rain. The government sent aid to the beleagured districts but all was in vain. In Kumool deaths rose from 1,774 in September, to 11,862 in December. The famine area rapidly extended. In Cuddahpah 10,000 persons died in December; in Nellore, 9,000; in North Arcot more than 10,000, and in the nine districts in which the famine prevailed the mortality in January exceeded by 60,000 the usual death rate. For the first five months of the present year 339,000 more persons died than during the corresponding period in any of the five years preceding, and the deaths altogether exceeded 500,000.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. ... cross out of view. Youth draws upon the imagination and believes that the sky is ever to be without clouds, that prosperous gales are to fill the sails of the bark, on which he hopes to make the voyage of life without a storm or without a heavy sea. Elysian fields are ever before him. Clouds, fierce winds, snow and ice, he regards as invasions of his rights. He has no place in his calculations for struggles, for defeat, poverty, neglect of friends and the malignant hate of foes.

3. It was by the cross Christ passed to his ascension. It is by the cross we are to obtain our crown. The outlook for this world is not so bright as many would fain picture. No matter what is done, there is something else sure to be done which clouds the landscape and destroys the peace, and makes prosperity always incident to conflict. Look back and see how men imagined they were to be blessed if certain measures were adopted. Elect our ticket, says the politician, and there will be peace. Do away with slavery, men said, and every black man shall become a citizen. The franchise shall place power in their hands, and the ballot shall be a better protection than the bullet. Thousands are discouraged to-day because they left the cross out of their calculations. The millennium cannot be procured by a vote. There is to be a conflict. Truth must triumph over error. Christ must master sin, and the children of light must become more numerous than the children of darkness, before peace can come and come to stay.

4. Christ bore his burdens cheerfully, and so must we. The approaching trial did not make Christ harsh or cold. See the woman come into the house of Simon, the leper, and Christ's greeting. How full of sunshine is his face. See him at the Feast of the Passover, girding himself with a towel to wash his disciples' feet. Methinks I see him as he comes to Judas. He is more tender of him than he is of John. Let us march toward our cross with a serene trust in God. Perhaps some of you may have reached it. Poverty may have laid its grief upon you. Sorrow may have swept over you. See Christ on the cross, full of love, full of forgiveness, full of desires to help the helpless; resemble him, and you shall pass through the path of sorrow to the gates of praise with a joyous heart.—Metropolitan Pulpit.

Emigration.

C. W. DALE.

The matter of bettering the condition of the colored people of the United States is engaging the attention of a great many at this time. The important question is how shall this be done. Some say migrating to Africa. While I agree that our condition ought to be bettered, I do not believe this can be done by going to Africa. The idea that the colored people can go to Africa and enjoy good health because they are colored is a mistake. Any one going from this country to the tropics must be acclimated. In going through the acclimation process a heavy percentage of those who go will die. Again, in order to benefit ourselves and be a blessing to Africa we would have to develop the resources of that country, open up the lands, build houses, get teams and farming implements, till the soil, and raise products adapted to that country sufficient for our own use and some to ship to other countries. From this would spring towns and cities and mechanical, mercantile and all other necessary business. Are we prepared to do this? I answer no; it will require money to do this and a great deal of it. We are a poor people without means and to go to Africa in this condition will be destruction to ourselves. This scheme of emigration was tried in one of the West India Islands a few years ago under the auspices of the Jefrard Government. Two or three thousand colored people were [illegible] over from the United States [illegible] distributed about in colonies. [illegible] had been told that they could [illegible] on the mountains and gather [illegible] and ship it right off, live on [illegible] fruits, save money by [illegible] that they would take in [illegible] the sale of their coffee. To [illegible] when [illegible] mountains with [illegible] gather they found [illegible] not grow on every [illegible] and where it did grow it [illegible], and was [illegible] they dare not [illegible] were without mon- [illegible] had them eight [illegible] said look out for [illegible] anger, disappoint, [illegible] the native fruits [illegible] fever among [illegible] at a fearful [illegible] the emigration [illegible]

[illegible] as it [illegible] these [illegible] ... rise by the power of self-elevation; this we can do in this country. We must educate our hearts, our heads and get wealth. With the latter in our possession we will command respect, and be a power in this country. We must turn our attention more to agriculture; we must get land of our own, cultivate it, raise sugar, cotton, rice, and other things, just as the white man does. When the same steamboat, carrying one hundred hogsheads of sugar to market for a white man, has on board one hundred hogsheads for a black man, the latter will be treated the same as the former. There will be no need of especial laws to force this. There is an abundance of land belonging to the government which can be taken up under the homestead law, can be bought as low as one dollar an acre. One great trouble with us is we are not pioneers; we want the land cleared and fenced and houses built before we go on it. The most improved farms in the country were once in woods; somebody went in the woods, built log cabins, felled the trees, opened up the land and to-day there are splendid farms in the place of the wilderness. We must do the same; we must do everything in the way of enterprise that the white man does if we would be his equal. We owe a debt to Africa which can be paid by acquiring means, and contributing to the building of school-houses in that country and educating African youth, who shall go out as preachers and spread the light through their native land.

From Nashville.

The weather here is decidedly wintry. Thermometer at 16 degrees this morning, and coal at a premium. The Murphy temperance work in this city has roused some interest, but not wide-spread enough to close grog shops or to make much perceptible difference in the amount of whisky drank. The schools are unusually full; this is true of all the institutions of learning in Nashville. The two medical schools number nearly three hundred students. The younger of these schools met with an irreparable loss in the death of Dr. Eve, one of the best surgeons in the United States or in Europe. He had a reputation on both continents, and his sudden death was a shock to the entire community. He died while on a visit to a patient. The Central Tennessee College has a larger attendance than any year of its history, at this season of the school year. The Normal department is well represented in about 80 students, who have either taught or are preparing to teach. The Theological department numbers about twenty now, with many other additions to be made next month. The Medical class grows slowly as it must, in consequence of the very small number of colored young men who are sufficiently advanced to study medicine, and who can get the time from the demands made upon them to teach, to pursue this course of study. The progress made by the students in this department is encouraging. Several of them have had considerable practice, with cheering success.

Thanksgiving was quite generally observed here. The churches held their services and business was, to a considerable extent, suspended. There has been some interest in several of the churches in the city. The First M. E. Church, Rev. L. A. Rudisill, pastor, has a cheering increase in the congregation and Sunday School. Clark Chapel, Rev. C. S. Smith, pastor, has had a season of refreshing, with a large number of additions.

Christmas will soon be here, and the usual amount of drunkenness, carousal and crime will be perpetrated in the name of the Prince of Peace. J. BRADEN.

Murfreesboro District Conference.

The Murfreesboro District Conference met at Stone's River Chapel, Nov. 22, and continued until the 23. Rev. B. B. Manson, P. E., presided with great satisfaction to the Conference. E. Provine was elected Secretary, and James Murphy, assistant. A. Martin preached the opening sermon. The writer was not present the first day of the session and did not hear the sermon; but it was highly spoken of by all who heard him. Bro. Martin is one of those self-made men, and one of our best preachers. The usual committees were appointed; all the charges were represented by the preachers in charge with two exceptions. All the preachers preached at their new appointment on the Sunday immediately after the adjournment of the Annual Conference. The Sunday schools and class meetings were represented by the Sunday school class leaders and superintendents. They reported a healthy growth in both of those departments of the Church. During the session of the Conference a resolution was passed, in accordance with page 202, section 348, New Discipline, that the Bishop, Presiding Elder and Preacher, share pro rata the collections according to the estimate made for each. I think that was a step in the right direction. There was a large attendance and all the charges showed a healthy growth. H. W. KEY.

The "London Times" on the Re-monetization of Silver.

The London Times publishes a communication from a correspondent who points out that silver has recovered eighteen per cent. of its lost value. The correspondent expresses the opinion that before the Bland bill shall go into operation, if it becomes a law, silver will have recovered its old value relative to gold. The greater part of the silver demonetized by Germany has already been absorbed, and the production of the American mines during the past year has not been equal to the estimates. "Any attempt by the United States," says the correspondent, "to resume specie payment in gold only must inevitably fail for want of the metal, for it must not be overlooked that the production of gold has been falling off year by year for some years past, and the present state of the London money market proves sufficiently that there is no surplus store accumulated from which an American demand can be supplied. It is, therefore, only by making silver and gold equally current that resumption can be carried out; and it is hoped for the sake of the States themselves that the party which advocates this course will be successful, independently of the important effects the measure would produce on English and Indian interests by restoring at once the rupee to its former value."

Encouragement for the Humble.

If only the talented and the great could be employed in the vineyard of the Lord, most of us might despair of being of any service. But it is not always by the mighty or the noble that God works. It is an encouraging feature in the divine economy that some of the greatest lights in the church have been converted by the agency of obscure individuals.

Saul was led to salvation by Ananias. The great Thomas Chalmers was taught in the crisis hour of his history by a minister who was hardly known beyond his parish; and Spurgeon found the way of salvation in a humble chapel of the Primitive Methodists.

That you have only a single talent is no reason why you should not be of service in the great work of spreading the gospel. Not many mighty, not many noble; the weak things are often chosen to confound the mighty.—Zion's Herald.

The first national thanksgiving in our country was held on Thursday, February 19th 1795, under the proclamation of George Washington, while acting as first president of the United States. He did not appoint the day but recommended it. It specified as particular occasions for thanksgiving "our exemption from war, the general prosperity of our people, and the manifold and signal mercies which distinguish our lot as a nation." The succeeding presidents did not follow the example set by Washington until Mr. Lincoln, at the close of the war, established it as a custom, since followed, of issuing a National Thanksgiving proclamation.

The equestrian statue of Major-general Nathaniel Greene, of the Revolutionary army, which is to be placed at the intersection of Maryland and Massachusetts avenues in Washington, has been finished in Philadelphia. It is of standard bronze, of colossal size. Six thousand pounds of bronze were used in the casting and the cost was $10,000. It will be mounted on a granite pedestal twenty feet in hight, making the entire hight thirty-three and a half feet.

Southwestern Christian Advocate, 1878.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE SOUTHWESTERN:

We ask every one of you to read each line of the following address:

I. General Remarks.

1. The Southwestern Christian Advocate is an absolute necessity to the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southern States. That work is largely of a missionary type, needing the constant assistance and inspiration of a weekly newspaper.

2. The SOUTHWESTERN has been a success beyond the expectations of even its best friends. It lived and grew for three years as a private enterprise, and so important was it considered to our Southern work by the last General Conference that it was adopted as an official journal of the Church.

3. The course of the SOUTHWESTERN has been decided and consistent on all questions relating to our work in the South. While others have vacillated between seasons of excessive gush or bitter denunciation on "Fraternity" and kindred topics, this paper has always, in a dignified and positive way, demanded the proper recognition of our Church and ministers in the South, and commended those who in any way gave that recognition.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN has done, and is in a condition to do, more for the colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church than any other paper in the Church. This paper has from the first waged an unceasing war against the spirit of caste, both in State and Church, and has never once lowered its standard to the demands of the enemies of the colored people, or their friends who, from motives of policy, have aided to perpetuate the spirit and fact of caste in Church or State.

5. The location of the SOUTHWESTERN in the chief metropolis of the South, its independent and consistent course, give it an extended influence among all classes of people. This is proved by the fact that it has, in the city of New Orleans, a larger circulation than any other religious journal.

6. January first the SOUTHWESTERN will be Enlarged by the addition of four columns, and it is our purpose to make the paper better than ever.

II. To Our People.

1. A large number of you are Local Preachers, or Exhorters, or Trustees, or Stewards or lass Leaders, in the Church. How can you be good officers in the Lord's army without your Church paper, to tell you of your Church duties, and report the condition and movements of that army?

2. Many of you are Sunday School Officers and Teachers. The SOUTHWESTERN gives every week more than a column on the Sunday School lesson for the Sunday following.

3. As Christians you want to be intelligent and progressive. You want to know of the work of God throughout the world. You want to read how God's people die. You want to read about your conference and preachers. You want to read how God's work is going on in your own and other Churches. How can you know these things without you take your Church paper?

4. Fathers and Mothers want their children to grow up to be moral and respectable. If so, those children must be instructed by good reading. Every number of the SOUTHWESTERN contains something to instruct and inspire the young.

5. Our Young Men and Women beginning life want to begin it right. The ambition to be as good as the best is noble. But to be good and successful, young men and women must be intelligent and moral, and faithful. Nothing will help to these good qualities more than the reading every week of a good newspaper.

6. Two Dollars a Year pays for the SOUTHWESTERN. That is less than four cents a week. Think how much money you spend foolishly before you talk about the times being too hard to take your Church paper.

III. To Our Preachers.

1. Next to the Bible and Discipline you need your Church paper, For Your Own Good, and next to preaching, and doing pastoral work, you must put your Church paper among your people, For Their Good. The families who read their Church paper are your most intelligent hearers, pay you best and pay the most to the benevolent collections. If, therefore, you want an intelligent congregation, and want to get your salary, and want to make good reports to Conference, put your Church paper into every family in your congregation, whether they are members of the Church or not.

2. You want to be Successful Pastors. The SOUTHWESTERN will help you. It will instruct your church officers in their duty, and your Sunday School officers and teachers in their duties, and by your people reading about other churches and pastors they will know better how to take care of and appreciate you.

3. As Leaders Among Your People you will have influence for good only as your people see you are their real friend. If you try to keep the light from them they will soon distrust and forsake you.

4. The SOUTHWESTERN is your Conference Paper, and will contain the notices of your Quarterly Meetings and District Conferences, and the accounts of the Church work among the Churches of your Conference.

IV. Our Terms.

1. We Pay the Postage ourselves, so that subscribers have only to pay their two dollars and then get the paper every week from the Post Office. In New Orleans the paper is delivered at the door.
2. Our rule is ash in Advance. This is best for all.
3. We send the paper for one year—

Dec. 23, 1877.—PAUL'S LAST WORDS.
SCRIPTURE.—2 Tim. 4: 1-8:

GOLDEN TEXT.—"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."—7.

TOPIC.—The Reward of Faithful Service.

[Condensed from National S. S. Teacher.]

Paul's Last Years.—For "two whole years," the last lesson told us, Paul dwelt in Rome, fettered to the soldier "that kept him." During that time he was preaching Christ right under the very palace of Nero, where licentiousness and riotous reveling had its home. Only the voice of a prisoner was lifted against the corruption of the times. From the "hired house" of the apostle came the gentle and sweet, but strong, influences of purity—from the palace rushed a torrent of moral iniquity. How little it seemed possible for the gospel to live as against such a tide of corruption! It was as if a single man were lifting high a light in the midst of a flood that some might be warned of their peril and escape safe to land. How much depended upon that little twinkling light! How little likelihood there seemed to be that it would last. But the little light that he so heroically held up had a divine life. It was a light that no floods could extinguish. It was one whose beams were to fill the whole world, for he was lifting up Jesus, "the light of the world."

The circumstances under which this Epistle to Timothy was written render it one of the most affecting letters that was written by the hand of Paul. On his second arrest, he was treated much more rigorously than before. His friends, [illegible] to see him, [illegible] dangerous to [illegible] sympathy for a Christian. [illegible] had been burned down by a fire which, it is alleged, [illegible] kindled. To avert the wrath of the people from himself, he [illegible] the crime upon the disciples of the new religion. The [illegible] of this expedient was all [illegible] could have desired. "A [illegible] great multitude," says Tacitus, "fell as victims to satisfy the [illegible] thirst for vengeance. Christians were bound in the skins of wild animals and hunted as beasts; [illegible] were subject to the tortures of [illegible] and were bound in [illegible] saturated with inflammable material and burned to [illegible]." Paul's letter clearly shows [illegible] he was acquitted on [illegible] (which probably [illegible] aided and abetted in [illegible] city,) yet that he [illegible] final release, [illegible]. He had [illegible], he had [illegible]. As he was to [illegible] his arduous [illegible] was natural that he [illegible] to commission one to [illegible]. This Elijah among [illegible] for a successor [illegible] would drop his [illegible] his Elijah, as [illegible] the wilderness did, [illegible] in charge [illegible] willed than [illegible] gentle Timothy [illegible] the best fitted [illegible]. But though [illegible] for his loving [illegible] was not [illegible] that he [illegible] which he [illegible], prove [illegible]. It was [illegible] was of a [illegible] above [illegible] learning [illegible] careful as [illegible] by the [illegible] banner [illegible] on [illegible] gained [illegible] permanent victory [illegible] yet conquer.

now at last and forever delivered from his captivity, rejoiced to follow his Lord 'without the gate.' The place of execution was not far distant; and there the sword of the headsman ended his course of sufferings, and released that heroic soul from that feeble body. Weeping friends took up his corpse, and carried it for burial to those subterranean labyrinths, where through many ages of oppression, the persecuted church found refuge for the living and sepulchres for the dead." Since then, eighteen centuries of glory for Paul have rolled away. All that he endured here now seems, indeed, as a "light affliction" which lasted but a "moment." Though the life of a Christian may be full of trial, yet, after all, it is the best life, and few there are who will not in their hearts say: "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

The University of Cambridge, England, has conferred upon Mr. Darwin, the scientist, the degree of Doctor of Civil Laws.

I have had many things in my hands, and I have lost them all; but whatever I have been able to place in God's I still possess.—Luther.

Literary Notes.

We find on our table this week the following mentioned new publications from the extensive wholesale and retail establishment of J. C. Eyrich, Bookseller and Stationer, 130 Canal street:

ABIDE WITH ME is an illustrated edition of the exquisite Poem of Henry Francis Lyte, suggested by the words of our Savior, John xv., 4. The illustrations are by Andrew & Son, from designs by Miss L. B. Humphrey; Lee & Shepard, Publishers. All whose hearts have been touched by the sentiments of this spiritual poem (and who is there that has read it whose heart has not been touched) should procure a copy of this beautiful little work.

THE LIFE OF TRUST, by George Muller, is now republished by Sheldon & Co., and bought down to the present time. This book was written by Mr. Muller himself, and has an introduction by Francis Wayland. An account is given in the new and enlarged edition of the last five years of Mr. Muller's labors, prepared by Rev. E. P. Thwing, of Brooklyn, under the personal direction of Mr. Muller, who is now in this country. This book gives a full and graphic account of one of the greatest religious works of the nineteenth century. Mr. Muller, alone and unaided, started his "home for orphans" in England. Looking only to God for help, and never asking for a dollar of aid, he has supported 5,199 orphans, and given them a religious education. He has received, without seeking it, over two and a half million of dollars to aid in carrying out this great work.

He has received, beside, over $150,000, for the purpose of printing and distributing religious tracts, this being an entirely separate department of his great work.

He has helped to support 173 missionaries in home and foreign lands, at an annual expense of over $35,000. This great success has led to the establishment of Orphan Homes on the same plan in all parts of the world. This noble work has been accomplished by the persistent labor and strong faith of one Christian man. Mr. Muller has himself given to this work within the last forty-six years, over $180,000 out of his private funds. Every Christian man and woman should read and study this book. It is the memorial of a noble Christian life, strong in faith and works.

Wonder World Stories is a volume of over 300 pages from the press of the Putnams. The title is a sufficient indication that it is a book that will interest all, both old and young. Who of us does not like at times to get away from the real [illegible]—to go out in imagination on exploring expeditions into the unreal, especially if we have as guide some able writer. These stories come from a dozen different languages—Russian, Turkish, Chinese, and Japanese as well as from those countries with which we are more familiar. They were collected and translated by [illegible] Parke and Margery Deane. Call at Eyrich's for these works, or for almost anything else in the book or stationery line—his stock is very complete.

A Valuable Medical Treatise.

The edition for 1878 of the sterling Medical Annual, known as Hostetter's Almanac, is now ready, and may be obtained, free of cost, of druggists and general country dealers in all parts of the United States and British America, and indeed in every civilized portion of the Western Hemisphere. It combines with the soundest practical advice for the preservation and restoration of health, a large amount of interesting and amusing light reading, and the calendar, astronomical calculations, chronological items, etc., are prepared with great care, and will be found entirely accurate. The issue of Hostetter's Almanac for 1878, in the English, German, French, Welsh, Norwegian, Swedish, Holland, Bohemian and Spanish languages, will in all probability be the largest medical work ever published in any country. The proprietors, Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, Pa., on receipt of a two cent stamp will forward a copy by mail to any person who can not procure one in his neighborhood.

ABIDE WITH ME,

By Rev. HENRY FRANCIS LYTE.
Illustrated from designs by Miss L. B. Humphrey.

Small 4to, gilt, ornamental covers, price $2.
Uniform with the illustrated edition of NEARER MY GOD TO THEE,
and
O, Why should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud.

Its author was a highly educated clergyman of the Church of England, endowed with fine poetical gifts, who, after his conversion, desiring to glorify The Father by laboring for the poor, entered upon his mission with new views, new consolations and a new zeal, consecrating all his powers, his service and poetic gifts to religion. Gentle and child-like in spirit, he served faithfully till his death—which was that of a happy christian poet. Like George Herbert and Charles Wesley, he sang while his strength lasted, and then quietly waited, till "rising from the sleep of death, he joined the hallelujahs of heaven."

This poem was written under the following peculiar circumstances—as related in "The Story of the Hymns:"

"It was the autumn of 1847; the gloom of winter was already settling upon the coast, and the pomps of decay tinging the leaves. The pastor, who was now preparing to leave the parish, and who seemed like one already hovering over the verge of the grave, determined to speak to his dear people once more, perhaps for the last time. He dragged his attenuated form into the pulpit, and delivered his parting discourse, while the great tears rolled down the hardy faces of the worshippers. He then administered the Lord's Supper to his spiritual children. Tired and exhausted, but with his heart still swelling with emotion, he went home. The old poetic inspiration come over him, and he wrote the words and music of his last song. He had prayed that his last breath might be spent 'swan like,'

'In songs that may not die,' and this effort was to prove a literal answer to his prayer. The poem, composed under these interesting circumstances, was the well-known hymn-chant, beginning:

'Abide with me: fast falls the Eventide.'"

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Patients Afflicted with Chronic Diseases Reputed Incurable, and all Cases Given up by Doctors, Will Find

Free Consultations

The rich will pay after cure only.
The poor will be treated, attended to and cured free of charge.
BY
D. J. BEAU,
(FROM PARIS)
Chemist and Professor of Phrenology.
Consultations Every Day, from 8 o'Clock a.m. to 4 p.m. at
NO. 43 BOURBON STREET,

By means of his powerful tonic and invigorating medicines, which he applies himself, he has obtained the greatest success in every place he has visited along the Coast, and he can show certificates of persons restored to health who had been given up as incurable, and bed-ridden for years. By his treatment, numbers of ladies, as well as gentlemen, have recovered their health and bloom of youth.

His new system is a sure cure for Apparent Apoplexy, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Hemorrhage, Faintness, Sallowness, Strangulation, Diseases of the Womb, Fevers, Sore Eyes, Pain in the Stomach, Old and Rebellious Syphallitic Diseases, Scurvy, Scrofula, and all those Chronic Diseases which, in the South strike a man powerless and by a long agony lead certainly to death.

N. B.—His treatment excludes all those medicines having for base, arsenic, mercury, or quinine, which generally cause the decay of teeth and the weakening of all the organs, leaving the system in a state of prostration by taking off all its strength and very often afflicting it with new disease.

The Science of Phrenology has alone the power to recognize the symptoms characterizing diseases and to discover all the phases of existence; acquiring this knowledge only by a thorough study, it does not startle, but astonishes, and by its accuracy gives the person consulting a certainty of cure and an insight into what he is about.

Phrenological Consultations—At the Office $5, at Residence $10.

TESTIMONIALS.

The N. Y. Times says: "Waters' Orchestrion Chime Organ" is a beautiful little instrument, simply perfect. The Chime of two and one-half octave bells and the artistic effects capable of being produced by the player are singularly fine.

The tone is full, clear and resonant, and a very interesting effect is produced with the chime of bell.—Christian Union.

The Waters' Pianos are well known among the very best. We are enabled to speak of these instruments with confidence from personal knowledge.—N. Y. Evangelist.

We can speak of the merits of the Waters' Pianos from personal knowledge, as being of the very best quality.—Christian Intelligencer.

Annie and Willie's Prayer.

'Twas the eve before Christmas, "Good night" had been said,
And Annie and Willie had crept into bed;
There were tears on their pillows, and tears in their eyes,
And each little bosom was heaving with sighs,
For to-night their stern father's command had been given,
That they should retire precisely at seven
Instead of at eight; for they troubled him more
With questions unheard of, than ever before.
He told them he thought this delusion a sin,
No such being as "Santa Claus" ever had been;
And he hoped after this, he should never more hear
How he scrambles down chimneys, with presents each year.
And this was the reason that two little heads
So restlessly toss'd on their soft downy beds.
Eight—nine—and the clock on the steeple toll'd ten;
Not a word had been spoken between them till then.
When Willie's sad face from the blanket did peep,
And whispered, "Dear Annie, is you fast asleep?"
"Why no, brother Willie," a sweet voice replies,
"I've been trying in vain, but I can't shut my eyes,
For somehow it makes me so sorry, because
Dear papa has said there is no 'Santa Claus.'
Now we know that there is—and it can't be denied,
For he came every year before mamma died.
But then I've been thinking that she used to pray,
And God would hear everything mamma would say,
And perhaps she asked Him to send 'Santa Claus' here,
With the sack full of presents he brought every year."
"Well, why can't we pray dest as mamma did then,
And ask Dod to send him with presents aden?"
"I've been thinking so, too,"—and without a word more
Four little bare feet bounded out on the floor,
And four little knees on the carpet were pressed.
And two tiny hands were clasped to each breast.
"Now, Willie, you know, we must firmly believe
That the presents we ask for we're sure to receive;
You must wait just as still till I say the 'Amen,'
And by that you will know your turn has come then."
"Dear Jesus, look down on my brother and me,
[illegible] on the favor we're asking of Thee,
[illegible] wax dolly, a tea-set and ring,
[illegible] ebony work-box that shuts with a spring;
[illegible] dear Jesus, and cause him to see
[illegible] Claus loves us far better than he,
[illegible] fretful and angry again
[illegible] Willie and Annie—Amen!"
"Please, Desus, 'et 'Santa Tlaus' tum down to-night

[illegible] runners, and all painted 'ed—
[illegible] tandy, a book and a toy,
[illegible] Desus, I'll be a dood boy."
[illegible] being ended, they raised up their [illegible]

Stanley, the American explorer, has sailed from Cape Town for home, and is expected to arrive at Plymouth, England, early in December.

The Jubilee Singers, of Fisk University, are now giving concerts in Germany. They have raised, in the six years they have been singing, about $150,000.

On the 27th ult., Robert L. Case, President of the Security Life Insurance Company of New York, was sentenced for five years in the penitentary for swearing to a false statement of the assets of that Company. Case is nearly seventy years old.

The government suddenly finds itself with another Indian war on its hands. Seventeen hundred Sioux who were being transferred from the Red Cloud Agency to the Missouri River broke away, and are now spreading consternation in the Deadwood country. The 7th Cavalry has been ordered to prepare for a Winter campaign.

Mr. Stanley finds the Congo river is 2,900 miles long, and has six upper falls and sixty-two lower ones. In the region traversed by it an abundance of cotton, india-rubber, ground-nuts, sesamum, copal, palmkernal and palm-oil is found. Ivory is so plentiful that natives wonder any one should offer to pay for it.

Gen. Sherman has issued a general order from Headquarters to the army, announcing that no matter how valuable and conspicuous services may have been rendered by an officer, he can not expect leniency in case of drunkenness. The thirty-eighth article of war will be enforced, which provides that "any officer who is found drunk on guard, party or other duty shall be dismissed from the service. Any soldier who so offends shall suffer such corporial punishment as a court-martial may direct!"

There is nothing imaginative about immigration to Texas, as the figures show. During the year ending last June 4,876,909 acres of land were taken under the homestead act. As this land is taken in 160 acre lots it represents 30,430 farms. Besides this there was sold for cash and allotted on military land warrants 768,261 acres more. Added to those who settled on these lands is the large number who rented farms or settled in towns and engaged in other business.

In the Congressional proceedings of December 1, Mr. Conkling presented a petition asking an appropriation of fifty thousand dollars for a preliminary survey, by army engineers or naval officers, of the beginning of a trans-continental railroad from the republic of Liberia eastward one or two thousand miles into Niger valley, and to report upon the country, its population, products, etc., with a view to opening the market for our manufactures with Central Africa.

A lady in Grand street, near Clinton, New York, has opened what she calls a penny restaurant. There you can get, for a cent each, a plate of beans, a plate of corned beef, a plate of cut cabbage, a piece of pie, a slice of bread and butter, or a cup of tea or coffee. Of course the quantity is quite limited; but the quality is good. The lady in charge is highly educated, and has opened the place, not as a charity, but for the purpose of getting an honest living. She claims to make a small profit on everything she sells, and is doing as large a business as her limited accommodations will admit of.

The James and Potomac rivers were recently raised to an uncommon hight by the rains, and great damage was done along their banks. The loss to private property at Richmond by the flood may be safely estimated at from $300,000 to $400,000. Other losses will greatly augment this amount. The damage in Manchester, on the opposite side of the river, reached $100,000. There is considerable suffering among poor people, many of whom had to camp out. The Amherst bridge at Lynchburg, nine hundred feet in length, erected after the flood of 1870, was swept away, and with it two new iron bridges of the Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio Railroad. The latter were erected at a cost of $70,000. Four bridges on the same road, between Bonsacks and Big Springs, and five spans of the Cumberland Valley Railroad bridge over the Potomac River, near Williamsport, Maryland, were also swept away. Six heavily-laden coal-cars were on the latter bridge at the time, and went down with it. The loss at the Cumberland Valley bridge is $30,000. At Harpers Ferry both rivers were twenty-six feet above low-water mark—three feet higher than in 1870. All the property on Shenandoah Street is destroyed. Immense damage was also done on the Shenandoah River, throughout the valley of Virginia. Bridges at different points, and houses in many places, were swept away, occasioning heavy loss.

The Bishops' Pastoral Address, November, 1877.

To the Ministers and Members of the M. E. Church.

BRETHREN BELOVED: From our annual meeting we send you our affectionate greetings.

We respectfully ask your attention to the high responsibility of the Christian profession.

Our personal obligations must be determined not by the inclinations of men, but by the Word of God. Neither convenience in avoiding these obligations nor instability in meeting them does in any way release us from them. It is, hence, easy to see how multitudes of professing Christians come to be destitute of spiritual enjoyment, and so nearly useless to the Church. By attempting to release themselves from responsibility, they have offended God, and withdrawn from His holy light into utter darkness. Let us solemnly remind you that for all our delinquencies "every one of us shall give account of himself to God." Rejoicing, as we most heartily do, in the integrity of those who are always reliable for true fidelity and earnest work, we feel great concern for those who have treated lightly their holy covenant obligations. Alas! dear brethren, have you not thus brought condemnation upon your own souls, and dishonor to the Christian name?

Let us now inquire how it is that we fail to get the full power of the Church to bear upon the conversion of sinners? Are we always active in this work, with hearts overflowing with tender concern for the perishing, regularly present at social meetings, watching for opportunity to do something for the salvation of souls, always thoughtful when in the presence of friends or strangers, and careful to save time for Christian work from house to house? The tens of thousands who have lived under no solemn sense of obligation to perform these labors have withheld just so much from the power ordained of God for the salvation of men, and thus incurred a fearful responsibility.

The Church requires liberal contributions for its home work. Now, the fact that these legitimate demands press so heavily on the few, and are so frequently followed by lamentable deficiencies, indicates clearly lack of recognized accountability to God. If a just sense of responsibility should pervade the whole body, there would certainly be "equality" and augmented efficiency.

With deep concern let us now point you to your children. Permit us to ask with what degree of self-sacrifice do you provide for their Christian education? There are the public schools; how much do they need of your vigilant oversight and Christian direction? There are the Sunday schools; how much more do they need of your personal participation and spiritual power, to make them what they ought to be, for the elevation and salvation of those you so tenderly love? There are our institutions of higher learning, organized expressly for the most promising of your children and those of others; how much pains do you take to observe which of them ought to have these higher advantages, and to see that our struggling schools are filled with students? There are the trustees and faculties of our academies, colleges, universities, and theological seminaries, bowed down under burdens absolutely crushing; how are these burdens to be removed, and these noble institutions to be lifted up to the grandeur of their original conception?

But we must look abroad. With the strongest emphasis let us inquire whence and how are we to obtain the means to send "the Gospel to all the world?" Why must we violently close the open doors through which ten thousand tearful eyes and outstretched hands implore us to come in and tell our suffering brethren what they must do to be saved? Why must the bewildering cry, "The treasury in debt!" dash to the ground the hopes of men which have hitherto gathered so confidingly around our beloved Church? When will our giving to save the world rise to the true grandeur of the missionary idea?

The word is in need of Bibles in all languages, but how little are we [illegible] in this great field, simply [illegible] want of funds. See, now, [illegible] you, the forming con[illegible] of the poor, where there [illegible] of worship to shelter [illegible] the storm or the cold! [illegible] multitudes of people and [illegible] children might be [illegible] churches, and [illegible] thousands saved from [illegible] Church Extension [illegible] receive the funds re[illegible] these urgent de[illegible] the freedmen, [illegible] Church, [illegible] justice, [illegible] contri[illegible] Why must [illegible] cry to us in [illegible] all these grave questions, raised by aggressive Christianity, we are persuaded that neither temporary financial embarrassments nor want of means can adequately explain our deficiencies. It is only Christian candor for us to say that these reasons do not, to any large extent, withhold from our people their personal comforts, nor even the luxuries of life. In spite of them, domestic indulgences go on very much as usual, while with considerable numbers of the more wealthy and ambitious extravagance in attire, furniture, and social entertainments is at all times about equally conspicuous and deplorable. How can we avoid the conclusion that, to an alarming extent, there is discrimination against the cause of Christ, and in favor of perverted self-love!

No, brethren; it is not the lack, but the misappropriation of means—the want of a correct Christian conscience, of a just sense of responsibility in the use of what is entrusted to us—which explains our deficiencies. Only in the general obscuration of the true light would such multitudes of professing Christians refuse to give in proportion to their means. The task of uplifting and saving the millions by the institutions of the Church is left to the few, as having no claims upon Christians as Christians. Until this enormous evil is corrected, we shall move on with results really great, it is true, but only indications of what certainly will be when the individuals of the whole Church shall arise to a just sense of personal responsibility.

Let us, with great tenderness, address the multitudes who leave all these benevolent enterprises to others. See, we entreat you, how the faithful few are bending under the burdens which you have, with so little concern, left upon them. How quickly and easily you might relieve them, and multiply by tens and hundreds the power of the Church for good! A true feeling of brotherhood, as well as regard for your personal safety, should prompt you at once to rouse up and assume your own responsibilities.

How many of you, dear brethren, think of the wants of the Church when you are striving honestly to make money? How many study and pray over the question, "How much of all my income belongs to the treasury of the Lord?" How many regard themselves as stewards and not proprietors of earthly good? How many listen with awe to the startling demand, "What hast thou done with thy Lord's money?" Alas, brethren, we fear that by careful searching you will find that, in the use of property you have been governed by selfish impulses, and not by the revealed will of God! This, we honestly believe, would of itself be a sufficient explanation of your "leanness," and of the comparatively slow progress of Christianity, in her outgoing mission for the conversion of the world.

But let us pass to other great moral demands upon the Church. The times are rife with private lusts and public vices. The institutions of marriage and of the family are frequently imperiled. The holy Sabbath is trampled under foot, while the claims of God and the rights of man are treated with public contempt. There is nothing successfully to antagonize these grievous wrongs, but faith in Christ, scriptural renovation, and holy living. Neither political parties nor statesmen can restore or conserve the public virtue. True religion alone can exalt the citizen above all fraud and conspiracies against domestic purity and the rights of society. Now, exactly the power given in our holy Christianity to counteract and destroy these baleful influences is the measure of our guilt, if we leave them, undisturbed, to rankle in the bosom of the Church or the State.

In the recent "strikes" which have occurred, and the acts of violence connected with them, we have been glad to learn that, while many of our members are laboring men, they have almost universally avoided unlawful acts, preferring rather to suffer than to do wrong. Our earnest desire is that all the relations of capital and labor may be so adjusted that the capitalist and laborer may receive the proper and equitable proceeds of their joint enterprises, and that oppression, on the one hand, and violence, on the other, may never occur.

In one thing let us be more explicit. The world is in anguish because of the bitter wrongs of intemperance and the unrighteous traffic in intoxicating liquors. True philanthropy is in dreadful conflict with this monster iniquity. But success must be limited while professed Christians in such large numbers vote to perpetuate and honor it by authority of law. The grand triumph for which suffering men and women work and pray will never come till members of Churches generally rise up in their might, and compel political parties to accept this high morality, and nominate only men who will prohibit, by law, this heaven-daring crime. They can do it if they will; and by failing to meet this high obligation do they not make themselves responsible for the wrongs and sufferings which they can, but will not, prevent?

We have learned, brethren, with sorrow, that in a few instances, notwithstanding the positive prohibition by the last General Conference, trustees of Churches have mortgaged the Church property for current expenses, and have thereby deeply embarrassed their financial interests. We appeal most earnestly to the members and officers of all our congregations to preserve inviolate the Church property, which has been secured by the offerings of our people, and which should never be used for annual expenditures. A just sense of responsibility would certainly save our people from this grave and fatal perversion of a sacred trust. (See Discipline ¶ 380, last clause.

But it is time to ask how this just sense of responsibility can become general in the Church. We answer: It must be largely the work of the Holy Spirit. With much thorough self-examination, with deep contrition and fervent prayer, we must implore His convincing grace. In entire consecration and unwavering trust we should receive the Spirit-baptisms, which would save us from all tendencies to treat lightly our covenant obligations.

In harmony with this, let us bring more thought and study into our personal religion. Our souls are converted to be educated and enlarged, that they may may grasp the plans of God, and enter into them with just discriminations and ever-increasing power. Those who thus understand their conversion will realize that they have responsibilities from which no human being can relieve them.

To aid in this indispensible acquisition the word of God should be thoroughly examined. For this purpose, in addition to your daily, prayerful studies, we cannot too earnestly commend to you the Sunday-school. From its simplest to its highest culture this ever-growing system is full of the religion of the heart and of the intellect, guiding its pupils young and old, directly to a correct understanding of their personal responsibilities.

Let us expect help from all the products of our own press. What lessons of wisdom, reaching directly to our personal accounts, are contained in our periodical and volume literature! But to learn these lessons you will need to take these periodicals, one or more, purchase these books, fill your tables and shelves with them, and thus, by their elevating entertainments and higher inspirations, lead your children to refuse all vicious reading, and through its literature teach them to love your own beloved Methodism, and prepare to meet their higher responsibilities to God and the Church.

In addition let our young people receive thorough lessons on this great subject in all our institutions of learning. Let all our members and probationers become models in reverence for the holy Sabbath, and in thoughtful attention to the preaching of the gospel, greatly preferring those sermons under which the multitudes are filled with conviction of their sad deficiencies, and a solemn sense of their accountability to God.

Finally, beloved brethren, we greatly desire a new testimony from the masses of the church. Besides our historic testimony of sound experience and holy joy, let our people in love-feasts and class-meetings speak humbly and tenderly of their visit from house to house, of the suffering sick, and poor requiring relief, of their Bible readings and tract distributions, of the wanderers brought back to the fold, the children brought into Sunday-school, and the souls they have led to Christ. Let them also mention and bring forward regularly a little money for missions which they have saved by careful economy. Would not pastors and leaders greatly increase the power of our holy Christianity by laboring industriously to bring the whole Church up to this new testimony?

Thus, dear brethren we have labored, not so much to exhort you to do the work which belongs to true Christians, as to lead you to a thorough understanding of the gravest reasons for all our failures, and to impress you with a just sense of the solemn responsibilities of your Christian profession, and point out the way in which the whole Church may raise to the proper dignity and power of that great profession.

We could, beloved, refer you to a real Church progress over which we all have reason to rejoice; but we must not do it now. We prefer to hold every mind in Methodism firmly up to the one great thought which pervades this address, "For we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, whether it be good or bad."

"But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever, Amen!"

We are, dear brethren, your affectionate pastors and fellow laborers,

The Steamboat Fire.

The broad Mississippi, down which the noble steamer was gliding, gleamed in the moonlight like a pathway of molten silver, the far-away shore upon either hand had faded from sight altogether, and the deck was deserted.

Creeping like the dreaded snake, now with lifted curling crest, then lying closely to the bales of goods, and writhing slowly between barrels and bags, there came toward the open hatchway a little thread of smoke. The boat was on fire.

Suddenly came the cry, a few hurried orders rang out, the great whistle sounded with a long shriek, and the captain, officers and crew gathered in fear and haste. "Where did it begin?" "Can it be overcome?" "Is there a chance to save the steamer?" The questions were in every month.

"We can only fight it hoping for the best. Call the passengers, head the boat toward shore, and let every man work for his life!" and the captain set the example by throwing off his coat and springing to the force pump that supplied water to the long hose. "Who will go below with this pipe?"

A dozen brave fellows sprang forward, one was chosen, and with a rope about his waist he descended into the hot, whirling cloud, his companions meantime throwing buckets of water upon him to keep his clothes from burning while he directed the stream from the force-pump upon the fire. In ten minutes he was drawn out, blackened, singed, and strangling, and another man took his place. But the demon raged on. From behind great piles of freight the forked tongues of flame leaped out, scorching the workers' hands and faces; from barrels and hogsheads of tar, the dense black smoke rolled up and suffocated them, while the half subdued war of the angry element came to their ears with a hoarse, exultant sound; the steamer was doomed.

And now the seams in the upper deck began to swell and part, little puffs of smoke oozed out, and thin blue flames danced and flickered above them. The crowd of frightened and half-naked passengers crept further and further forward, to avoid the stifling heat, until they struggled in one dense mass at the very bow; some crying, others praying and a few silently watching the onward progress of the boat toward the shore. For the pilot stood manfully at his wheel, in spite of the whirling sparks and the drifting embers, the engines were yet working, and twenty minutes more would save passengers and crew.

But even while they spoke of it, when hope was dawning again, and preparations were being made to save what they could, there came a hideous roar, a dull explosion, a rush of flame; and through the blood red glare spread around they saw that the wheel-house was empty, and the fire alone held possession there—the roof of the cabin had been blown off, and the helsman was gone! At almost the same instant the boat entered a swift-running eddy, her bow swung sharply away from the longed for shore, and she swept out toward the open water again blazing fiercely.

"Unless some one can lash that wheel a-starboard, we are lost! Will any man volunteer?"

The captain's voice sounded strangely hoarse and dull. A shudder ran through the listening crowd. There was a chance for life even yet, remaining where they were; to enter that blinding cloud, to brave those leaping flames, was certain death; and no one moved forward.

"Will you die like cowards? Is there no man among you?" cried the captain.

"Yis, massa, dar is!"

As the clear tones rang out over the heads of the people, a little black figure darted forward, nimble hands seized a rope, sure feet found the ladder, and before a word could be spoken, before any one could prevent the child, Jim stood half revealed in the fiery furnace of the pilot house, the great steering-wheel was in his grasp and the noble ship yet obeying her rudder, turned back again, headed toward the bank once more, and ploughed her rapid way toward life and safety! Then a mighty column of curling, writhing smoke swept forward, the flames leaped to the upper works and rigging, the "New Orleans Belle" became a glowing, blazing mass, and boy, wheel-house and everything upon the hurricane deck was blotted out of sight!

"How do moonlight twingles fro' de leaves, dont it, missus; and de little stars, pears like dey was winking to me. No, dare's no pain now. Its all over, and I reckon I'll git well. But it did burn in dat dare pilot-house, missus!"

"Hush, Jim. Don't talk now. You were brave, too brave for us, child. O, you must not go!" And Miss Sloan lifted the boy's head higher upon her shoulder, and gazed with half of love and half of awe into the little black face, now blistered and scarred in many a cruel seam.

Every one had been saved except the pilot, and here beneath the great live-oaks, hung with festoons of living moss, and bending tenderly like pitying giants, they had brought their hero, the colored boy who had given his life for theirs; brought him here to die.

"Missy do you know God?"

"Yes, Jim."

"De same God, missy, dat my daddy used ter pray to? And his little boy Jesus? Do you know him, missus? Daddy used ter say dat Jesus loved little chilerns; dat he'd carry dem in his arms, like de lambs, you know. Will he, missy? O, will he take me sometime?"

There was silence for a moment. The great, rough captain had knelt at the child's side, and with uncovered head and tear-dimmed eyes, was leaning over him. Flickering through the forest came the last waning light from the burning wreck, stranded on the shore. Overhead the leaves began to whisper together of the coming morning, and the group of passengers standing between the trees looked ghastly and dim. Suddenly the boy sat upright.

"O missy! I'm glad dat ye all got to de shore. 'Twas a right bad place for me, dough, in dat smoke and fire! O, see! see! missy, de mornin's comin!" and he leaned towards the dim East, gazing intently into the faintly reddening sky. "See! Dare's light dare, missy! I'm glad for I's so tired, I want to rest a bit," and he sank slowly back. "De New Year's comin'," he continued in a low, half-whisper, "an' he shell take de lambs in his arms and carry 'em in his bosom! I'm so glad! Good-night, missy!" and without a moan the smoke-blurred eyes closed, the fire-scorched hands dropped peacefully, and the child's pure spirit fled away through the chill, gray dawn of the coming morning to find its place in the Savior's loving arms. The New Year had come, bringing a new life to little Jim.—Christian at Work.

Thirty Reasons Against Intoxicating Drinks.

1. They deprive men of their reason for the time being.
2. They despoil men of their highest intellectual strength.
3. They foster and encourage every species of immorality.
4. They bar the progress of civilization and religion.
5. They destroy the peace and happiness of millions of families.
6. They reduce to poverty virtuous wives and children.
7. They cause thousands of murders.
8. They prevent all reformation of characters.
9. They render abortive the strongest resolutions.
10. The millions of property expended in them are lost.
11. They cause the majority of cases of insanity.
12. They destroy both the body and the soul.
13. They burden sober people with millions of paupers.
14. They cause immense expenditures to prevent crime.
15. They cost sober people immense sums in charity.
16. They burden the country with enormous crime.
17. Many moderate drinkers want the temptation removed.
18. Drunkards want the opportunity removed.
19. Sober people want the nuisance removed.
20. It causes riot.
21. The prohibition would save thousands now falling.
22. The sale exposes our families to destruction.
23. It makes a man brutal.
24. The sale upholds the vicious and the idle at the expense of the industrious.
25. The sale subjects the sober to great oppression.
26. It takes the sober man's earnings to support the drunkard.
27. It subjects numberless wives to untold sufferings.
28. It is contrary to the Bible.
29. It is contrary to common sense.
30. We have a right to rid ourselves of the burden.

Preachers as Teachers.

The apostles and evangelists were inspired teachers. The ministry of reconciliation is pre-eminently a teaching order. The power of the pulpit is in its instructions. He is no true preacher who does not teach his hearers on every Sabbath, and in every discourse, some truths which they need to know, and to have reiterated and re-inforced. "Aptness to teach" is one of the first qualifications of a Christian bishop or presbyter. Here, then, is a true Scriptural stand by which to judge of any preacher. It is ridiculous and humiliating to hear many of the comments upon sermons—as "fine," "entertaining," "beautiful," "novel," "original," "poetic," "eloquent," etc. Did he instruct you out of the Word of the Lord? Did you learn anything of the "mind of the Spirit?" Did the sermon awaken, illumine, and quicken you? Did it strengthen and direct you? Did the minister show you your sins, and your Savior? Did he preach himself or Christ? What did you carry with you from the house of God that has made you "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ?" Were you edified, built up in the faith of the gospel?

The preacher who does not regularly and always teach his people according to the will of God, fails of duty, dishonors his calling, and harms his congregation.—Christian Intelligencer.

A Romance of the Rebellion.

At the battle of Antietam and South Mountain a colonel was wounded—his arm fearfully shattered—and he was borne from the field by his brother and a private soldier. They carried him across the country a long and tiresome distance, every step of which was torture to the sufferer, to the house of a Maryland Union farmer. Then came the ubiquitous Yankee surgeon with his glittering knives and cruel saws, and made hasty preparations to amputate the ailing member. The farmer vehemently protested, declaring that the man would die if the arm was cut off. The surgeon insisted that the patient would die if the arm was not taken off, and the colonel's brothers so co-incided with the surgeon.

But the determined old farmer dispatched his son on the fleetest horse across the fields to the other side of the mountain after his friend and neighbor, a country physician and rank rebel. When the rustic Esculapius arrived there ensued a long contention with the Yankee hewer of bones over the sufferer, but the result was that the arm was saved, and after some weeks of careful nursing, the colonel galloped off to join his regiment, a comparatively sound man. He subsequently became Governor of Ohio, and now fills the Presidential chair.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Book of Job.

The hero of the poem is of a strange land and parentage—a Gentile, certainly, not a Jew. The life, the manners, the costume, are of all varieties and places; Egypt, with its river and its pyramids, is there; the description of mining points to Phœnicia; the settled life in cities, the nomad Arabs, the wandering caravans, the heat of the tropics, and the ice of the north, all are foreign to Canaan, speaking of foreign things and foreign people. No mention, or hint of mention, is there throughout the poem of Jewish traditions or Jewish certainties. We look to find the three friends vindicate themselves, as they so well might have done, by appeals to the fertile annals of Israel, to the flood, to the cities of the plain, to the plagues of Egypt, or the thunders of Sinai. But of all this there is not a word; they are passed by as if they had no existence; and instead of them, when witnesses are required for the power of God, we have strange, un-Hebrew stories of the Eastern astronomic mythology, the old wars of the giants, the imprisoned Orion, the wounded dragon, "the sweet influences of the seven stars," and the glittering fragments of the sea-snake Rahab trailing across the northern sky. Again, God is not the God of Israel, but the father of mankind; we hear nothing of a chosen people, nothing of a special revelation, nothing of peculiar privileges; and in a court of heaven there is a Satan, not the prince of this world and the enemy of God, but the angel of judgment, the accusing spirit, whose mission was to walk to and fro over the earth, and carry up to heaven an account of the sins of mankind. We cannot believe that thoughts of this kind arose out of Jerusalem in the days of Josiah. The scenes, the names, and the incidents are all contrived as if to baffle curiosity—as if, in the very form of the poem, to teach us that it is no story of a single thing which happened once, but that it belongs to humanity itself, and is the drama of the trial of man, with Almighty God and the angels as the spectators of it.—Froude.

In Texas.

JEFFERSON.

Our last notes were from Huston. Tuesday, January 4th in company with Bishop Foster, Dr. Ford, Brother Kingston and a large number of our Texas Conference preachers we took the International and Great Northern train for Jefferson, a distance of two hundred seventy, five miles. The Railroad is properly named. It extends from Houston to Texarkana a distance of over three hundred miles, with a branch of another hundred and gfty miles from Palestine south-east to Austin, which is to be continued ninety miles further to San Antonio, and then a hundred and fifty miles further to the Rio Grande. It will be but a few years until this road touches Mexico at the Rio Grande, and then soon we will have a railroad direct to the city of Mexico. People who think of Texas as a wilderness, should take as we did, a five hundred mile ride from Jefferson in the north-eastern part of the State to San Antonio in the south-western part. No luxury is wanting, Pullman car at night and Palace and Dining car by day.

Jefferson is a pleasantly located town of perhaps four thousand people. Directly after the war it became a very important shipping point for Northern Texas and portions of Arkansas and the Indian Territory.

The town is located on a Bayou which opens into Red River, thus making it the head of navigation for an immense territory. But the railway system of Texas has so stretched its lines as to greatly injure Jefferson, leaving it now only a small trading territory. It is proposed to build a railroad from Jefferson directly north-east to Memphis. This would be a direct northeast line for the International, and reach Memphis one hundred and fifty miles shorter than by way of Little Rock, the present route. The survey is already made and if built will give new life to Jefferson.

We formed the acquaintance of several very pleasant families in in Jefferson. Among them the family of Mr. J. H. Bemis at whose home Bishop Foster was entertained during the Conference; and Judge Penman and wife who gave to Dr. Ford and ourself a most pleasant home. The Judge was for several years a member of the Rock-River Conference and traveled the Madison, Wis., circuit when it was two hundred miles long and half as wide and had twenty eight preaching places. He united with the M. E. Church, South, and was for several year a prominent pastor. In that church in St. Louis. He is now practicing law and is a local preacher. Judge Penman fought bravely in the cause of the late Southern Confederacy, but now fully recognizes the necessity of peace and harmony throughout the nation, is foremost in word and act for their promotion in State and Church. May the number of such men multiply all over the South.

THE TEXAS CONFERENCE.

This body met in Jefferson, December 5th, and is composed of nearly a hundred ministers. All colored except four. This Conference includes the eastern half of this State. Bishop Foster presided and W. Wesley was elected as Secretary. The Session will be long remembered by all who attended. In the examination of character we never saw greater throughness, and in the examination of the classes none were promoted unless they had shown progress in their sudies. Out of large classes only two elders and two deacons were advanced. Bishop Foster spoke plainly, but kindly on all questions relating to the [illegible] and success of the [illegible], and his words made a [illegible] we hope a lasting im[illegible]. It is inspiring to notice the [illegible] improvement among our [illegible] from year to year. [illegible] men of their [illegible] are coming to the [illegible] making their power felt [illegible] of the work and [illegible] of discipline. In [illegible] of this class, we [illegible], Lee, Shakle[illegible], and W. Wesley, [illegible], Douglas and [illegible] firmly [illegible] methods of [illegible] characters [illegible] words [illegible] on by the Freedmen's Aid Society, but the work done has as yet been nothing in comparison to the demand. Its special work is to prepare young men for the ministry. It ought to have under its care a hundred men to meet the demand in Texas Conferences alone. As it is there are only a few and President Davis and his associate teachers are troubled greatly for accomodations for the few who do attend. A project is now on foot to build a new building and change the location from a mile in the country into the town. Dr. Rust has bought a beautiful site and proposes to give half the money. But it seems a long time to wait for a proper school in which to gather in young men in that Conference when so many congregations are demanding better pulpit talent. Two things are needed to make our schools in the South more successful: The Church throughout the North must give Dr. Rust more money, and our people in the South must help themselves more. The supreme demand of our Southern work is a more efficient ministry.

The statistics of the Conference show a decline of several hundred, and yet in many circuits and stations revivals and accessions were reported. This is explained by the fact that greater care is being taken in making up the statistics, so as to have them correct.

On our arrival home we have only time to say this much before this paper goes to press. We shall have more to say of our Texas work next week.

From Eben Shute, Boston, we have received the Time Saving Library Record and a Record for S. S. scholars. The former is a great convenience for S. S. librarians, enabling them to promptly ascertain the number of the book taken out by each scholar, and the name of the scholar who has taken any book. It also obviates the so frequent annoyance of receiving the same book a second time, of which scholars complain. It has abundant commendation from those who have used it, which is certainly the best proof of its excellence. One copy will keep the record of 500 scholars for several years. Price $1.50.

Our Southern Methodism.

Rev. Willis Faulk, Hickory, Miss., says: "A protracted meeting just closed resulted in four conversions and eleven accessions to the Church. Many others who were under deep conviction we hope to see soon brought to find peace in believing."

Rev. Henry Green, pastor of First St. Church in this city, reports that at a protracted meeting just closed ten persons professed faith in Christ, eight united with the Church, and several wanderers were reclaimed. Services are now being held in Sixth St. Church.

Rev. James Pickett, Lebanon, Tenn., writes: "Our first quarterly meeting has been held. In absence of our Elder, Rev. P. Martin presided. Five dollars were raised for the Episcopal fund. Efforts will be made to bring up all the benevolent collections. Meetings were continued for ten days after the quarterly services, with one conversion and three additions to the Church. Eleven wore received into full membership."

Rev. C. P. Head, Vicksburg, Miss., says: "In closing the labors of our fourth quarter we find that during the year there have been twenty accessions to the Church and nine conversions. Our success, so far as an increase of church membership is concerned has not been so great as last year. But we have not been forgotten of the Lord, and we thank him for his blessings."

Rev. L. Boone, DeKalb, Kemper county, Miss., writes: "During the year we have had fifty-seven accessions to the Church. We have three Sunday-schools, all doing well. On Dec. 7th by invitation of the Sheriff I attended the execution of Walter Riley, and sang and prayed with him during his last moments on earth. He confessed to the murder of two men, and spoke to the people present, warning them to avoid bad company, which he said had brought him to ruin."

The following Resolution, adopted by the fourth quarterly conference of St. James Church, Monroe, La., on motion of J. W. Hudson, has been furnished us for publication: "Resolved, that it has afforded us great pleasure to welcome upon this district as our Presiding Elder Rev. Joseph Gould, one of the honored servants of our Church. His administration has been in all respects acceptable, his addresses have been full of wisdom, and his sermons eloquent and spiritual. We pray that the blessing of the Lord may attend him in all his feature abors."

The Ladies' Pacific Railroad Association will try to raise the funds to build the first mile leading out from the city, or do something else just as practicable.

A competitive examination of applicants for positions of teachers is to be conducted in the Franklin school-house, St. Charles street, to-day and to-morrow by Superintendent Wm. O. Rogers.

Thomas H. Handy, Civil Sheriff of the Parish of Orleans, gives public notice that an election for a member of the Stato Senate, Fourth District (Tenth and Eleventh Wards), to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. James B. Eustis will be held on Saturday, December 29th.

The Board of Regents of the Colored Normal School, on Wednesday 12th inst., elected as its principal Miss Julia Kendall as sistant, Professor E. J. Edwards, with $40 and $35 salary per month respectively. It also decided to reserve from the Peabody fund an amount sufficient for the lectures when needed. Thirty-five reported in attendance.

In the United States Circuit Court informotion was filed against Geogre B. Pond, by U. S. District Attorney Lacy, accusing him of inducing an officer to alter the election returns for a member of Congress in the parish of Iberville. He is said to have been instrumental in extracting 1000 votes with Darrall's name on them from the ballot box, and putting in the same number with Acklen's name on them all. This charge is founded upon developments before the Congressional committee.

The Governor has directed the issue of writs of elections to fill vacancies in the general Assembly, as follows: Senator—Fourth Senatoral District, composed of the Tenth and Eleventh Wards of the city of New Orleans—caused by the resignation of Hon. James B. Eustis. Representatives—Assumption parish, by death of Hon. Jonas Hughes; Bossier parish, by death of Hon. Samuel Thomas; Caddo parish, by death of Hon. Cornelius Brown.

The Fruit Growers Association assembled at the Hall of Howard Association, Camp Street, last Friday, with H. W. Lewis of Tangipahoa in the chair. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, H. W. Lewis; first vice-president, Dr. R. H. Day, of Baton Rouge; second vice-president, Anthony Sambola, of New Orleans; secretary S. M. Wiggins; treasurer, J. C. Potts. It was resolved to memorialize the Legislature for an appropriation to defray the expenses of their annual display. After extending a general invitation to Beekeeper's and Horticultural associations to join them in their fairs, adjournment was made to the first Thursday in May.

Anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid Society.

The tenth anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church was held in Springfield, Mass., on Monday, December 10th. Preliminary sermons were preached on Sunday in the various churches of that city and vicinity.

On Sunday evening a platform meeting was held, with addresses by Dr. H. J. Fox, Rev. I. J. Lansing, and Rev. R. H. Rust.

On Monday morning a union prayer meeting in behalf of the work of the Society was held; in the afternoon there were essays and addresses, and in the evening the anniversary proper was held. Bishop Haven presided. Dr. Rust, Corresponding Secretary, presented the report of the Secretary and Treasurer, which we subjoin:

FREEDMEN'S AID REPORT.

The Executive Committee of the Feedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church respectfully submit an abstract of their Tenth Annual Report.

The past year has been a successful one, not, however, equal to the claim of the work upon the Church, or the number and ability of her membership; but, in view of the extreme severity of the times, the depreciation of property, and the derangement of labor, al that we could reasonably expect. To hold our own in the collections under such circumstances evinces the deep interest cherished for this work, and greatly encourages the managers in its prosecution, but the recognition of the cheering statements that there has been, during the year, an increase in the income of the society, and a decrease in its indebtedness, furnishes an occasion of the profoundest gratitude to Almighty God and to the friends who have contributed so liberally to our aid.

As the Government has long since retired from the work of education among the freedmen, and as the evangelical Churches in the South, either from the lack of ability or interest, have done nothing in establishing and supporting schools for them, it is evident that if these people be educated and prepared for usefulness, it must be done by the denominational associations of the North. Among these we name the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which, in view of the efficient service rendered, and the great good accomplished, has advanced to the front.

The fact that Methodism has so large a constituency among the freedmen increases its obligations, and assures it of a welcome as broad and enthusiastic as its heroism and benevolence can meet. We must not neglect these helpless children who appeal so piteously for aid to the "mother Church," but must give to them teachers, schools, churches, and missionaries, as their ignorance and wretchedness demand, and God's liberal benefactions to us will allow.

THE OUTLOOK.

The present condition of the freedmen is a critical one, and it awakes in the minds of the thoughtful the most serious apprehensions. Although emancipation is recognized and generally approved in the South, yet the future condition of this race is involved in great uncertainty. The emancipation of a race from slavery does not relieve it from the wrongs inflicted upon it in its bondage. The ignorance and degradation of this people inhere to it, as it crosses over the Red Sea from slavery into freedom. It cannot, in this sudden transition, threw off all the effects of centuries of heathenism and oppression, and come forth clothed with all the qualifications of citizenship properly fitted to run a race, and with any hope of success, with a people that has had for centuries the best advantages for culture.

Christian education, the development of heart and intellect, a thorough training in elementary science and morality—stimulus for the attainment of noble character—the education which our schools impart, is the only hope of this unfortunate people. Nothing else can free it from the disabilities of the past, protect it from the perils of the present, and prepare it for the mission of the future.

After a long and bitter contest, waged at a fearful expenditure of life and treasure, four millions of slaves were set free, and an attempt to reduce them again to bondage would be met by the most obstinate resistance. Imagination cannot picture the terrific consequences of such an effort. Having tasted the sweet draught of freedom, and felt its inspiring effect, rather than be made slaves again, death in its most revolting forms, would be welcomed. A measure fraught with such fearful peril would not for an instant be tolerated.

Scarcely less to be dreaded would be an attempt to reduce these millions of freedmen to a state of peonage or serfdom, and thus wrest from them the rights and privileges of citizenship, and consign them again to hopeless ignorance and degradation; and yet in the judgment of many wise and far-seeing men, the current of opinion on this question is surely drifting in this direction. The price of liberty is eternal vigilance, and the friends of this race must be on the alert to prevent the re-establishment of every system of wrong or oppression which may bring danger to the Republic, or injustice and suffering to its supporters.

The manhood and equality of this people must be recognized and defended as impartially as any other in our midst. Those who aided in their emancipation, and placed the ballot in their hands, will be satisfied with nothing less; and the government that was sustained by its bravery in the hour of peril, will be too magnanimous to offer less; and He who holds the balances of justice in His hands, will accept of nothing less.

OUR SOUTHERN WORK.

The mission work of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South is carried forward by a three-fold agency—the Missionary, Church Extension, and Freedmen's Aid Society—each in its specific work supplementing the other. The Missionary Society aids in the support of the minister who preaches in a meeting house, towards whose erection the Church Extension Society contributed, which preacher has been educated for his work by the Freedmen's Aid Society. Reversing the order, for the sake of giving additional emphasis to the work of education, we repeat that the Freedmen's Aid Society prepares for the Christian ministry those called of God, whom the Missionary Society assists to preach the Gospel in houses of worship which the Church Extension Society has aided in erecting. We acknowledge with gratitude our obligations to this Society for the use of their meeting-houses in the South for the benefit of our schools. Thus do the benevolent associations of our Church blend their efforts in the salvation of this people.

The necessity of this educational work will be more fully recognized when it is remembered that this people have just come out of slavery, and have not, as with us, enjoyed the advantages of the common school. The service of an illiterate minister is well-nigh valueless. He cannot restrain his hearers from fanaticism and superstition, nor instruct them in the doctrines of their Church. He can neither unravel sophistry nor defend the truth. Money expended by the Missionary and Church Extension Societies will accomplish so much more for Christ, if supplemented by intelligent and pious ministers, that the friends of these enterprises cannot fail to recognize the importance of a hearty co-operation with the Freedmen's Aid Society in the support of her schools, if they would secure thoroughly-trained men to preach Christ in the houses of worship which their liberality has aided in erecting.

MINISTERS.

As a pure and intelligent ministry is the most essential instrumentaity in the elevation of this race, to its attainment our society has devoted especial attention. A class in theology has been established in all our schools, and several of them are devoted almost entirely to the preparation of young men for the ministry. As a result of this training, thus early, may be found in the Southern conferences young ministers of fine talents, extensive usefulness, and great promise—men who will in the judgment of our Bishops, compare favorably in ability and eloquence with the best men in our connection. There are now in our schools pursuing biblical studies 393, and there are hundreds of young men called to preach who have been compelled to leave our schools for the want of a little aid.

TEACHERS.

The Christian teacher is an instrumentality scarcely less important in the elevation of this people than the minister. So great has been the demand for teachers, that we have been compelled to establish a Normal department in all our schools, and from these go forth annually scores and hundreds to teach what they have learned to those less favored than themselves. When these have taught the children all they know, they return to their instructors for a fresh supply. Our institutions also furnish teachers for Sunday-schools and intelligent men for all official positions in the Church. There are in our schools 1,065 pupils preparing to teach, more than one-third of our whole number, and it is estimated that more than 60,000 children have been taught by those trained in our schools.

A Medical Department has been established at Nashville, Tenn. Able professors have been appointed, and a promising class of thirty-three is in daily attendance upon loctures and recitations.

To counteract efforts of the Jesuits, who are busily engaged in proselyting the freedmen by the distribution of Romish pictures and images, we have been able through the influences of elect ladies, to scatter through the South fifty thousand elevating and instructive pictures to adorn these humble homes, and lead their occupants to a useful life; and devoted Christian women have also visited from house to house, encouraging mothers in the training of their children, and in the protection of their daughters.

The Society has aided in the establishment and support of the following institutions, which have been legally chartered with full collegiate powers:

The Life and Words of Christ

By Cunningham Geikie, D. D. With twelve Engravings on Steel. In two volumes. Price, $8.

Opinions of Distinguished Divines.

From Bishop Beckwith, of Georgia.

Since you sent me the copy of Dr. Geikie's "Life and Words of Christ," I have been so little at home that it has been impossible for me to give it the careful examination which it deserves. Still I have read it sufficiently to satisfy me of its great value, and that you are to be congratulated for giving to the American public a work of such interest.

As a book of history, giving a clear statement of the condition of the world prior to and the time of our Lord's coming, it furnishes an admirable commentary upon St. Paul's declaration in Galatians, that "when the fullness of the time had come, God sent forth his Son," etc.

Interwoven with our Lord's life is the history of the Jews, their customs as a religious people, and their national and domestic life. The book, therefore, is of value not merely to the theological student or the student of history, but the family. It furnishes information which every one should possess, and which thoughtful people will be glad to gain from so agreeable a teacher. I have not been able to examine the book with reference to the author's views upon the great doctrinal questions which divide Christendom sufficiently to form a judgment as to those views; his comment upon one or two doctrinal passages I have read, and I am led to believe and hope that he has been too wise to write in the interest of any party. If I am correct in this, it of course adds much to the value of what Dr. Geikie has done. Hoping that your enterprise may be crowned with success, believe me, most respectfully. JOHN W. BECKWITH, Bishop of Georgia.

From Dr. John Hall.

In these volumes ("Life and Words of Christ") the resources of Christian literature are not disregarded; but the results reached, and not the processes, lie on the surface. Assuming that Andrews, Ellicott, Neander, Lange, and others of the same class, provide for the minute and curious inquirer, the author has aimed at producing a book of continuous, easy narrative, in which the reader may, as far as possible, see the Savior of men live and move, and may hear the words he utters with the most vivid attainable idea of his circumstances and surroundings. The result is a work to which all Christian hearts will respond, and which will render to its readers increasingly real the wonderful works and the gracious words of "the Man Christ Jesus."

The value of the work is enhanced to scholars by a body of "notes," so placed as not to distract the attention of the general reader; and a good index facilitates reference. One must regard such issues of the American press with profound satisfaction. JOHN HALL, D. D., Fifth Av. Pres. Ch.

From Bishop Littlejohn, of Long Island.

Dr. Geikie has performed his task—the most difficult in biographical literature—with great ability. His pages evince abundant and accurate learning, and what is of even more consequence, a simple and cordial faith in the Gospel narratives, which, while enabling him to profit by the best results of modern criticism, shields him from the temptation to tone down or dilute the supernatural and divine features of the character and ministry of Christ.

The work is noteworthy for certain special merits when compared with any previous treatment of the same theme. Its style is fresh, animated, and vigorous. Its arrangement of the subject-matter is such as to present the parts of that wonderful life of the Son of God in their due co-ordination and interdependence, thereby producing on the reader's mind the impression of a continuous organic, divinely ordered whole from the beginning to the end.

Dr. Geikie's "Life and words of Christ" cannot fail to win the approval and admiration of an intelligent Christian public. The more widely it shall circulate, the more it will be regarded as a most valuable addition to a branch of sacred literature which ought in every age to absorb the best fruits of sacred scholarship, and to command the highest gifts of human genius.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

Patients Afflicted with Chronic Diseases Reputed Incurable, and all Cases Given up by Doctors, Will Find

Free Consultations

The rich will pay after cure only.
The poor will be treated, attended to and cured free of charge.

BY

D. J. BEAU,

(FROM PARIS)

Chemist and Professor of Phrenology.

Consultations Every Day, from 8 o'Clock a.m. to 4 p.m. at

NO. 43 BOURBON STREET,

By means of his powerful tonic and invigorating medicines, which he applies himself, he has obtained the greatest success in every place he has visited along the Coast, and he can show certificates of persons restored to health who had been given up as incurable, and bed-ridden for years. By his treatment, numbers of ladies, as well as gentlemen, have recovered their health and bloom of youth.

His new system is a sure cure for Apparent Apoplexy, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, Hemorrhage, Faintness, Sallowness, Strangulation, Diseases of the Womb, Fevers, Sore Eyes, Pain in the Stomach, Old and Rebellious Syphallitic Diseases, Scurvy, Scrofula, and all those Chronic Diseases which, in the South strike a man powerless and by a long agony lead certainly to death.

N. B.—His treatment excludes all those medicines having for base, arsenic, mercury, or quinine, which generally cause the decay of teeth and the weakening of all the organs, leaving the system in a state of prostration by taking off all its strength and very often afflicting it with new disease.

The Science of Phrenology has alone the power to recognize the symptoms characterizing diseases and to discover all the phases of existence; acquiring this knowledge only by a thorough study, it does not startle, but astonishes, and by its accuracy gives the person consulting a certainty of cure and an insight into what he is about.

Phrenological Consultations—At the office $5, at Residence $10.

Queries.

A wistful little face,
With great, brown, solemn eyes,
Comes haunting me each day
With questions of the skies.

Whether they're near or far;
Whether there are any stairs;
Which lead up to the stars;
And "Tell about the bears.

"And 'bout the lion, too;
And will he roar and bite?
And did he make that noise
Called thunder t'other night?

"And, Auntie, if the moon,
That looks so big and bright,
Should drop down on the ground,
Some real cold winter night,

"How could they put it back?
And would the man that's in it
Jump out and run away,
Perhaps just in a minute?

"And if the sky is heaven,
Why don't they have a door?
And, Auntie, what a billion
Of stars are on the floor!"

A wistful little face,
With its great solemn eyes,
So follows me each day
For knowledge of the skies;

Till oft I'm left to dream;
Until recalled by Maud,
Who whispers: Auntie, dear,
Tell me, how big is God?"

The Marble Block.

Once in a house at which I was staying there was a little lame girl. Her name was Annie. Often did I pity her as I saw her sitting by the window watching the other children on the playground. Sometimes she was sick, too, and could not even sit at the window. At last spring came, and the little girl seemed better. "Now," thought I, "would it not be well to try to comfort this child in some way!" So I bought a few oranges and [illegible] read her a pretty book; [illegible] the cloud did not leave her brow.

"Why are you sad, Annie?" said I one day.

"Oh, sir," she replied, "I can't see why God should afflict me, and yet give the other children so much happiness. If I could only know that God is not angry with me, I would not care so much."

That day was a very pleasant [illegible] so I asked the little girl to take a walk to a sculptor's room near by. Here were a great many blocks of marble. So Annie and I watched him with great interest. At last I pointed to a piece of marble rather dark and rough. "Do you like the looks of that?" said I [illegible]

"[illegible] no," replied the child. "Why [illegible] bring such an ugly block [illegible]"

"[illegible] piece," said the gentleman "[illegible] tomorrow."

[illegible] next day Annie and I [illegible] to see him. He spent the [illegible] of that day in cutting off the [illegible] pieces. Day by day we [illegible] him, and day by day the [illegible] became more attractive. [illegible] chisel cut in here and [illegible] everywhere. We both [illegible] "If that stone were only [illegible] how it would suffer!"

[illegible] one day we visited him [illegible] invitation. "I have some-[illegible] to show to Annie," said he. [illegible] the sculptor drew [illegible] white veil, and, behold! [illegible] image of an angel had [illegible] out of the rough stone. [illegible] cried with joy when [illegible]

"[illegible] my child," said I, "did the [illegible] hate the poor, ugly piece [illegible] we one day saw?" [illegible] she, "he loved it." [illegible] "my little girl, does [illegible] He cuts us with [illegible] sickness. He is [illegible] glory. Let us only [illegible] will be well."

[illegible] Annie, "I see that [illegible] hate me, but that he [illegible] object in view."—[illegible] Visitor.

A FINE HEAD OF HAIR is such an indispensable adjunct to beauty that no one who prizes good looks should neglect to use "London Hair Restorer," the most effectual article for increasing its growth, restoring its natural color, and a delightful hair dresser and beautifier—being free from sticky and gummy properties—clear and richly perfumed. Recommends itself to every lady and gentleman using fine toilet articles.

Extracts from Letters.

A. A. GIBSON, BARRYTOWN, Duchess County, N. Y., writes. April 30, 1877, DR. SWAYNE & SON; Phila., Gents—I enclose postoffice order for eight dollars, please send me one dozen "LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER." It has stopped my hair from falling out and restored it to its natural color. It has proved satisfactory in every respect.

DR. ISAAC H. MILLER, WEST BREEKNOCK, Pa., writes. As a restorer of Gray hair and preventive of baldness, it is the best remedy I have ever sold, and gives entire satisfaction.

WILLIAM SCHELL, GERMANTOWN, Columbia Co. N. Y., writes: April, 1877—THE LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER was received. I am delighted with it. You will find inclosed four dollars for a half dozen bottles by express.

London Hair olor Restorer

is the best and cleanest article ever made; is entirely harmless and free from all impure ingredients that render many other preparations injurious. It removes dandruff, stops the hair from falling, and restores the perfectly natural color. It is exquisitely perfumed and so perfectly and elegantly prepared as to make it a lasting hair dressing and toilet-luxry.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT,
READ THESE TESTIMONIALS.

U. S. Marshal's office. Harrisonburg. Va.
Dr. Swayne & Son, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia—Gentlemen, I have suffered for twenty years from that terrible disease, itching piles, had consulted many physicians and used numerous applications and medicines, but found no permanent relief until I procured your All-healing Ointment. After using one box in the space of three weeks' time, I found myself entirely cured, and for the last four months have not even felt a symptom of the disease. I also used the ointment on a spot of dry tetter on my head, which had annoyed me for five years, and found the same happy result, a perfect cure in a short time. I deem it my duty to give you this well merited testimonial of so great a medicine. You may publish this if you see fit.
Very respectfully, WM. P. GROVE.

J. Q. A. Metcalf, (firm of Hanley & Metcalf,) Palmyra, Mo., writes:

January 1, 1877.
I received your letter, also the ointment for itching piles. I have used the ointment for three weeks, and am now perfectly cured. I feel very thankful that I am free from that terrible pest, the "itching piles."

SKIN DISEASES.

Swayne's All-healing Ointment is also a specific for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barber's Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. Perfectly safe and harmless, even on the most tender infant. Price 50 cents, 3 boxes, $1 25. Sent by mail to any address on receipt of price. ☞ Sold by all leading Druggists, seldom, if ever fails to cure a cough. Even when the lungs have become much disordered with night sweats, burning fever, pains and oppression, it has effected wonderful cures.

A Remarkable Cure.
HOME TESTIMONY.

DR. SWAYNE—Dear Sir—I feel it to be due to you and suffering humanity to give the following testimony respecting the wonderful curative powers of your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla and Tar Pills. I was afflicted with a violent cough, pains in the side and breast, night sweats, sore throat, my bowels were costive, appetite nearly gone, and my stomach so very weak that my physician was at a loss to know what to do for me, as everything in the shape of medicine was rejected; spit at different times a pint of blood. I remained for months in this awful condition, and gave up all hopes of ever recovering. At this time you recommended the use of your syrup and pills, which immediately began to soothe, comfort and allay the violence of the cough, strengthened and healed my lungs; in short, it has made a perfect cure of me, and I am now able to pursue my daily labor. Any person doubting the truth of the above statement will please call on or address me, at the factory. EDWARD H. HAMSON, Engineer of Geo. Sweeney's Pottery, Ridge road, below Wallace, Phila.

Over twenty years have elapsed, and Mr. Hamson still remains a hearty man to this day—September 30, 1876.

PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND IT.

Dr. Thos. J. B. Rhoads, Boyertown, Berks Co., Pa., writes: "Your Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry I esteem very highly; have been selling and recommending it to my patients for many years, and it always proves efficacious in obstinate coughs, bronchial and asthmatical affections. It has made some remarkable cures in this section, and I consider it the best remedy with which I am acquainted.

Price $1. Six bottles for $5. If not sold by your druggist, we will forward half dozen by express, on receipt of price.

Describe symptoms in all communications, and address letters to DR. SWAYNE & SON, 330 North Sixth street, Philadelphia. No charge will be made for advice. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicines generally.

The Tennessee River Improvement Convention, which met at Chattanooga a few days since, adopted resolutions setting forth the importance of the improvement of the Tennessee river, especially at Mussel shoals. and determined to press the matter vigorously. It will require $2,000,000 to complete the improvement of the Tennessee, and judging from the earnestness of the Chattanooga Convention, the work which was laid out forty years ago will soon be in a fair way to consummation.

In a late charge to the grand jury, Judge Davis, of New York, remarked: "Twenty years of judicial life have taught me that more than seven-eights of the crimes of personal violence are traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors." Postmaster General Key reports that the postal business of the country has fallen off since 1876, owing to the dull times. Sales of stamps, cards, etc., decreased $427,585, and issues of money orders $4,215,000. There has been economy in all branches of the service, and the expenditures were $3,353,483 less than the estimates therefor. Mr. Key thinks that the Department will eventually be a source of revenue to the Government. Legislation is urged for the purpose of stopping the abuses in regard to the sales of stamps at small offices, which are inflated by various artificial methods, in order to increase the salaries of the postmasters. Better pay to letter carriers is recommended.

The Fort Worth (Texas) Democrat has been shown a "frost lilly," discovered near that city the other day. The frost lilly has excited the interest of curiosity hunters, scientists and botanists for a long time, and they are one of the most rare of nature's productions. It is a perfect lily in all its parts, stem, leaves and petal, and wrought in frost or ice. It springs from the ground as other "lilies of the field" do. The theory adduced by those who have examined it carefully, is, that there is a bulb in the ground, which is of a pungent nature, and when the ground is frozen it emits a strong vapor through the fissures of the earth, which freezes as it rises, and invariably takes the form of a lily. Efforts have been made in New York to produce this lily, and with partial success.

Beautiful Anecdote.

A happier illustration of the wonderful character of the Bible, and the facility with which even a child may answer by it the greatest questions, and solve the sublimest mysteries, was perhaps never given than at an examination of a deaf and dumb institution, some years ago in London.

A little boy was asked in writing, "Who made the world?"

He took the chalk and wrote underneath the question, "In the beginning God created the heavens and earth."

The clergyman then inquired in a similar manner, "Why did Jesus Christ come into the world?"

A smile of delight and gratitude rested on the countenance of the little fellow as he wrote, "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners."

A third was proposed, evidently adapted to call his most powerful feelings into exercise. "Why were you born deaf and dumb, when I can hear and speak?"

"Never," said an eye-witness, "shall I forget the look of resignation which sat upon his countenance as he took the chalk and wrote, "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.'"

Sure Cure for

CRAMPS, COLICS, DIARRŒA, SORE THROAT, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, EARACHE, RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, COLDS, COUGHS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, NERVOUSNESS, CUTS, SPRAINS, BRUISES, BURNS, BITES OF VENOMOUS REPTILES, Etc.

Persons suffering from the above complaints might find it to their advantage to try KING OF PAIN, before sending for a physician, as a careful notice of the above directions may enable any person to learn how to use the medicine, which will prove beneficial in many complaints not mentioned in the above circular. This Medicine is Guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded.

In putting this valuable medicine on the market, I have forgone the old stereotyped practice of appending a long list of certificates of Doctors and others, as the KING OF PAIN is so favorably known in this city and State, as I have prepared and put it up since 1864, for Dr. McBride and other agents, and sold by me.

Since I have retired from the drug business I have been compelled to furnish it to many parties who had used it and learned its value. In order that this great household Remedy may reach the poor as well as the wealthy, the prices have been reduced to 25 cents 50 cents and $1 00 per bottle. For sale by all druggists and country stores.

GRAND EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

Owing to the financial depression in this country and Europe we are now able with the abundant resources at our command to manufacture and import goods at wonderfully low prices. We propose hereafter to deal direct with consumers selling to them at the same prices as we have heretofore charged the jobbers. Our goods are all exactly as represented. We offer a Hunting Case Geneva Watch, a correct time keeper (each one guaranteed in perfect running order), cases made of composition metal (the best imitation of gold known), with handsome chain for $7. The illustration given is an exact representation of this watch and chain, except that the watch is larger than here shown, it being full Gents' size. We also offer a Ladies' Hunting Case Geneva Watch, same composition cases, in perfect running order, with a beautiful Matinee Opera chain attached, slide set with pearls, handsomely engraved, for $8, complete. We also have a quantity of cases without works, Gents' size, which we will fit up with a genuine American Waltham Nickle movement, Patent Lever, Full Jewelled, together with the elegant vest chain shown in the engraving, for $12. This is an opportunity to buy reliable goods at prices never before offered. Any of the above watches sent by mail in a registered package, or by express, to any part of the United States, free of charge, upon receipt of price.

[illegible] to San Antonio.

[illegible] distance is two hundred and [illegible] and you make the [illegible] over the Sunset Route, in daylight, with the privilege of occupying a palace car to add to your comfort. T. W. Pierce, Esq., of Boston, is the President, and Mr. Gibbs is the general passenger agent of this route, and the rapidity with which this new road is becoming first class in all respects indicates that they and their associates understand how to build railroads and make them pay.

Leaving Houston at half past seven in the morning, the first fifty miles take you through the immediate settlements, and bring you out upon a vast plain on which graze the many thousands of cattle belonging to some of the great cattle kings of Texas. To the eye of a [illegible] nothing could be more [illegible] looking, than an ordinary Texas cattle farm. There are no [illegible] fenced and regularly planted fields. Occasionally there is a rancho with a fine house and pleasant surroundings, but these are rare. Generally there is only a plain frame house with an excuse of a yard about it, and on all sides vast plains extend. On these plains the cattle roam winter and summer. The ownership of each is distinguished by a brand, that is, certain letters or marks burned into the flesh on the hip or shoulder.

About one hundred miles from Houston you come to Columbia on the Colorado river. From this on, the country is marvelously beautiful to look upon, and rich in resources. The soil is exceedingly rich, the surface of the country rolling, and the products of great variety. Every few miles towns are springing up and the same rapid growth is going on as was seen, a few years since in the cities and towns along the railroads in Illinois and Iowa. For example, the [illegible] was established at Schulenburg in 1876 and now there are [illegible] the altars, in the baptistry and about main entrances were carvings and paintings, some of which remain, splendid specimens of art. There were other buildings for dormitories, the shelter of stock, etc. All these were enclosed within a high wall, with space enough inside to give room for the hundreds connected with, or under the care of the mission at night, or in case of attack from hostile foes. About each mission great fields were cultivated, irrigating ditches, many of which still remain, were made, and thus large farms were cultivated. The Indians were taken and taught Christianity, and how to work, and after an apprenticeship of two or or three years were given land and citizenship. How many thousands of Indians were christianized and died in the faith it is impossible to tell. But when we consider the magnitude of the work accomplished, none can but admire the sublime faith which led these Catholic missionaries, and gave them such marvelous patience and tact and success for generations, in making intelligent farmers and citizens out of untutored savages. In comparision with what they did, how insignificant do many of the boasted missionary efforts of this day appear!

Another visit was to the curiosity shops of San Antonio. These are pawn shops where during a series of years have been collected many curiosities of Mexican and Spanish and Indian origin. The curiosities however made the least display. The things most seen were pistols, saddles, bowie knives, gaffs for fighting cocks and spurs and bits suitable for unruly horses. These articles are everywhere. As one gentleman said "they are the meat and bread of our commerce." To our company these were curiosities indeed, but not just such ones as were desired for friends, or to keep as mementoes. There were old coins, quaintly devised jewelry of unalloyed gold, costly rosaries well worn, which perhaps had been used many years and then sold as a last resort to sustain life, and many other things too numerous to mention. We saw one genuine Aztec relic; it was a rudely hewn stone with legs, having a flat surface perhaps two feet square, on which another stone could be rubbed, for the purpose of grinding corn or rice. These are still in use among many of the Mexicans, and it is said that good flour can be made with them.

The other place visited was the head of San Antonio river four miles from the city. For this pleasure we were indebted to Mr. H. H. McLean. The San Antonio river bursts forth from the ground from a series of beautiful springs. The water is clear and warm and flows in such quantities as to make the river a large stream at once. About these springs the grounds are high, being six hundred feet above the sea, and covered with timber. The air is clear and bracing, and we know of no better place in the South for a health resort. Bro. McLean, for he is a Methodist, proposes to make a donation of land on which to build a Methodist University. It may yet be done especially if Bro. M. will give the proceeds for a year or two from his seven thousand acre ranche, on which there are fifteen hundred head of horses.

San Antonio has now twenty thousand people, and is rapidly growing. Our church built by our colored people is the second best in the city, and Bro. Carper besides paying the expenses of the church raised $1,000 on debts last year. He has a noble congregation, and promises fifty subscribers for the SOUTHWESTERN for 1878. Prof. [illegible] is organising our German church, and is about to build. We expect in a few months that the little gem of a church a Galveston will be duplicated in San Antonio. Rev. Dr. Meredith was sent from the Austin Conference to prospect for the organization of an English speaking white church. Whether the organization be effected at once [illegible] Bishop [illegible] him in this [illegible]

The Death of Dr. Bledsoe.

The death of Dr. A. T. Bledsoe removes from earth perhaps the greatest theologian of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He was born in Frankfort, Ky., November 9th 1809. He graduated at West Point Military Academy in 1830, and for a year or two served as second lieutenant in the United States Army. After this he became an instructor and in 1835 was ordained to the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Hamilton, O. Some question in his mind as to the teachings of the church on the subject of baptismal regeneration led him to withdraw from the Episcopal ministry and church. He was the author of several important theological works, the principal of which was his "Theodicy, or Vindication of the Divine Glory as Manifested in the Constitution and Government of this Moral World." This work, after being rejected by several of the most astute publishers in the United States, on account of the unpopularity of the subject, went through three editions of 1,000 each in four months. Subsequently many other editions were called for and printed.

Dr. Bledsoe believed in the constitutional right of the South to secede, and wrote a book to prove that Davis was not a traitor and that secession was the constitutional right of any state. He entered the Confederate Army as colonel and was for a time Assistant Secretary of War. In 1865 Dr. Bledsoe began the publication of the Southern Review in which has appeared many able articles from his pen.

He became a Methodist preacher in 1871 and in the same year his review was adopted by the General Conference of the Southern Church.

On the 7th of November he felt the oncoming of the illness which soon prostrated him, and his first words on coming home were, "My time is come." Without a tremor at the thought of death, but with an unspeakable horror of outliving his mental powers, he lay down to die. In a very few days all care, anxiety and dread fell away from him, and he lived on with only [illegible] and pleasant fancies [illegible] mental vision, till [illegible] almost uninterruptedly, till he breathed his last at 11 o'clock Saturday night, December 8th.

Bishop Foster in Texas.

Bishop Foster has just completed the tour of the Texas Conferences, presiding over the Austin Conference at Dallas, the West Texas at [illegible], the Southern German at Houston and the Texas at Jefferson. He also visited Austin, San Antonio and Galveston. He was in the State a month and traveled nearly two thousand miles, presided over conference sessions fifteen days, preached twice each Sabbath, addressed the Conferences on some practical topic almost daily while they were in session, patiently consulted with each cabinet before making the appointments, and by words and acts showed his appreciation of and faith in our Southern work. Bishop Foster is a great preacher. His sermons are food for souls who are thoughtful as well as devout. He grapples with fundamental truths, and has the rare power of presenting the profoundest problems relating to God and man in a manner to instruct and inspire the average church-goer. His sermon in Jefferson made a profound impression upon the large audience which heard it. On Monday he was waited on at the Conference room by a committee which presented a petition signed by a large number of the professional men of the city, asking him to remain and deliver a series of sermons. In presiding at the Conferences the Bishop showed an earnest desire to do his whole duty in all respects. His instructions to the classes were plain, severely so at times, but always appropriate, and were given in a manner to do good. We never heard better addresses to Conference classes or witnessed more patient discussion of questions relating to ministers and [illegible].

The Oratorio of Elijah.

On last Saturday night we listened to the rendering of this celebrated musical composition. The entertainment was given by the Philharmonic Society, in conjunction with the Fryer Opera Troupe. The Opera House was well filled, and the entertainment was in every respect creditable to the performers, and inspiring and instructive to those who listened.

The director, Mr. Gronevelt, and the managers of the Philharmonic Society, deserve the thanks of the lovers of sacred song for this successful effort in bringing before a New Orleans audience, for the first time, this composition of the great Mendelsson. It was in 1846 that Elijah was first performed in Birmingham, and the great author himself presided over and directed the movements. A good judge says:

"Next to the Messiah, the Elijah is the most popular oratorio in England. It is shorter and more dramatic than Handel's masterpiece, less theological than Sphor's Last Judgment, and infinitely less didactic and monotonous than the wondrous passion music of Sebastian Bach. No man ever wrote more in the presence of his public and less in the seclusion of his study than Mendelssohn, and in no other work has he so finely calculated the capacities of the ordinary music-loving mind, and so richly poured forth treasures which the most experienced musician will find, if not inexhaustible, yet perfect."

Nearly one hundred voices joined in the choruses, and with only an occasional break, the performances of the company of home singers were highly creditable. The solos were sung by artists from the Fryer Opera Troupe. Mr. Blum rendered the aria "Is not his word like a fire and a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?" and several other solos with excellent effect. Madam Pappenheim sang "What have I to do with thee, O man of God," and "Hear ye Israel." Her voice is one of great compass and splendid culture, and as we listened, thrilled by its magic power, the words of the old prophet had a pathos, and the widow's cry over her dead child had a meaning never before understood. Miss Adelaide Phillips sang the famous solo, "O rest in God." Besides the splendid melody of her rich contralto voice, the words were distinctly ennunciated, so that every one could understand them. Miss Phillips was the favored singer of the evening with the audience.

The result of President Hayes' policy in South Carolina is set forth by a South Carolinian in the January Atlantic. He says: "In South Carolina there are five very noticeable results of the President's policy; first, the decreased expense of the government and its increased purity and efficiency; secondly, a great decrease of crime and disorder, and a marked increase of material prosperity and a striking renewal of public, social and military spirit among the whites; the extension of the Republican party and a revival of the old political intolerance; fourthly, a renewal of interest in public affairs on the part of the whites, and, lastly, the banishment of the negro from politics and his enhanced material prosperity." After discussing the results at length he says: "Over the first and second results the author is inclined to rejoice. In the third, fourth and fifth results described, while he finds some things to approve he perceives much to deplore."

To us it is evident that if an honest-minded southerner, as the writer seems to be, cannot find more to rejoice over in the result in South Carolina, that state is in a most deplorable condition.

Rev. Dr. J. B. Ford, our General Sunday-school Agent for the South, has completed the tour of the Texas Conferences. His addresses and sermons were well received. He is well adapted to his important work, and enters upon it with enthusiasm. He believes in our Southern work, and believes especially in the great importance of our Sunday-school work in the South. It has its difficulties and discouraging aspects, but these must be studied, understood and overcome. In these views, he is heartily endorsed by every conference he meets. Bro. Ford will attend the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences, and we hope he can hold a Sunday-school Institute in this city in the near future.

Rev. Dr. Rust returns to Cincinnati on Tuesday, from attending the Tenth Anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid Society at Springfield, Mass. He spent one night with Bishop Haven at Malden, Mass. [illegible] The Bishop [illegible] suffers from the effects of the African malaria. A local paper says of the Freedmen's Aid Society: "The noble organization, under its indefatigable Secretary, Rev. R. S. Rust, D. D., held its anniversary at Sprinfield, December 10th. Rev. Dr. E. O. Haven, Dr. L. C. Matlack, Revs. I. J. Lansing and Richard H. Rust preached able seremons Sunday morning, and delivered stirring addresses Sunday evening at the State Street Church, and Monday afternoon and evening at Trinity. The claims of the Society have been ably advocated, its work clearly delineated, and a genine enthusiasm awakend. May it be perpetuated in ever-increasing fruitage."

The Atlanta Constitution learns from the Comptroller-General's report that the colored people are of more importance to Georgia than is generally supposed. The colored polls in Georgia are 84,164. They own 457,635 acres of land valued at $1,244,104 and $1,199,725 worth of city property, $486,522 worth of household and kitchen furniture, $241,106 worth of horses, mules, hogs, sheep,, cattle, etc., $125,120 worth of plantation and mechanical tools, and $92,699 in money and solvent debts, besides about two millions and one hundred thousand dollars in property not otherwise enumerated, aggregating in all about fine and a half millions.

The Pittsburg Commercial says that in an interview between Republican senators and President Hayes that the latter expressed the belief that eight of the Southern States would go Republican in 1880. He said there was an evident tendency on the part of the religions element of the South to support the administration and its policy, and that it would be sufficiently crystalized to be felt by 1880. The President based his expectations of religious support upon letters and professions of the bishops of the Methodist Church South.

The anniversary of the Freedmen's Aid Society, held in Springfield, Mass., was a successful meeting. Last week we published the report of the Corresponding Secretary, Dr. Rust, and did our space permit we would publish abstracts of the addresses. Rev. Drs. Fox, Rust, E. O. Haven, Matlack and Lansing were the speakers at the several meetings held.

It is bad enough to be compelled to endure the popping of crackers and other fireworks during the Christmas and New Year's festivities, but the discharge of pistols, revolvers, shot guns, old muskets, cannon, etc., is carrying barbarous customs to an extreme. We are pleased to observe, therefore, that within a period of ten days from the 25th the senseless discharge of fire arms will be under a ban imposed by the City Authorities.

Danger attends teaching the catechism for purposes of exhibition. When the committee came to examine the class, each boy knew what question he would be asked, and what answer would be expected. It so happened, however, that one lad was missing, and the question, "Did God make you?" was put to the next in order. The reply was original and astounding, "No, sir; the boy that God made has gone home with the toothache."

Quarterly Meeting services were held at Liberty, December 15th and 16th. The presence of the Master was felt by the large congregation in attendance. The work at that place seems to be in a prosperous condition. On Sabbath eighteen adults and one child were baptized, and seventy-eight partook of the sacrament. The pastor reported twenty-seven accessions to the church, five of which had professed conversion. The collection on Sunday was $2.65. At Fayette, also, the good hand of the Lord had been present. Over three hundred had been added to the church. Nearly all had professed conversion. About two hundred had been baptized and received into the church in full membership. The pastor, Brother Bardwell, has labored very hard and the work is still going on. His circumstances and surroundings at the beginning of the year were very unfavorable, but, going forth in the name of the Lord, glorious have been the results.

L. BRADFORD.

Whether Evolution is worthy of investigation, as a scientific problem, let whoever cares to push inquiry answer. But Christianity is already verified in conscience and experience, by history and by science, and is the same blessed fact "yesterday and to-day and forever."

The church in certain old ages, however, was weakly hesitant to admit outside truth. Some of the saints, not of light, but rather of dark, denied geology, and farther back the denial was square against Geography, as well. But as men received light from the Sun of Righteousness, these solemn protests against science were modified. For, always, Christ and Nature agree. The Heavens and the Earth are in essential harmony, according to external laws. God is the [illegible] of all things, visible and invisible. He is the author of all truth. Faith and science center in Him. The material universe is but the background on which the Gospel Revelation has its grand [illegible].—Methodist Record.
